BILIOUSINE.
CAUTION.

We caution the public against being deceived by representations that "licorice powder" is the same thing as Biliousine. We positively assert that it is not the same thing. "Licorice Compound" has been known to the pharmacist for forty years, and has never been known to do what Biliousine does and has done. Any apothecary who states that licorice compound is the same thing as Biliousine either wilfully misrepresents the truth or is ignorant of his duties as a pharmacist, and is wholly unworthy of confidence, and not fit to be trusted in the preparation of medicinal prescriptions. Biliousine will cure headache, constipation, dyspepsia, indigestion, sour stomach, heartburn, &c., while "Licorice Compound" is merely a mild cathartic without the curative properties of Biliousine.

A trial package of Biliousine will be sent by mail to any address on receipt of a two-cent postage stamp.

HAS IT NEVER BEEN KNOWN?

Has it never been known—
  A maiden fair, with flaxen hair,
  Eyes tender and true, as violets blue,
And a lover, who is all her own?
Has it never been known?

Has it never been known—
  A tale that is told, with a ring of gold?
  Love's Springtime and a kiss, with a dream of bliss
Like a bird that is flown?
Has it never been known?

Has it never been known—
  A fair girl in white, as from realm of light;
  Now flushed, now pale, 'neath a bridal veil,
And the man, no longer alone?
Has it never been known?

Has it never been known—
  Wife gentle and good in her womanhood;
  Love's coronal worn, and love's sceptre borne
Like a queen on her throne?
Has it never been?

"A WONDERFUL CURE."

"What's that black figure agin the white snow?" asked Mrs. Getchey, fitting on her far-sighted specs, as she sat at the window upon a threatening Monday morning.

"That!" said Aurilla Ann. "Why that's Mr. Dorking a hanging out the clothes!"

"Mr. Dorking!" repeated Mrs. Getchey. "Why, where's Mariar?"

Her daughter-in-law, Aurilla Ann, indulged in a short, snorting laugh.

"Up stairs in bed, I calculate," said she.

"Sick?" said Mrs. Getchey, in accents of concern.

"No more'n I am!" said Aurilla Ann, shaking the table cloth out of the buttery window, so that the long legged Brahma fowls might have the benefit of any stray crumbs which might be going. "Cranky, that's all. She always was as odd as Dick's hat-band."

"Eh?"

Mrs. Getchey, a Western woman, was evidently a unversed in local allusions.

"Don't you know?" "Dick's hat-band, that went half way around, and tied in the middle?"

"Oh!" said Mrs. Getchey. "But Mariar Dorking used to be as smart, stirring a woman as ever I see."

"She's took a notion t'other way, of late," said Aurilla Ann. "I declare, I never in all my life felt as sorry as I do for Daniel Dorking. He's a dretful peaceable, good tempered man, and Mariar treats him real mean. He does all the work of the house himself, even to the washing and ironing, because Mariar chooses to fancy herself sick; and I just wish you could see the poor man's shirts! Besides there's the mill to see arter, and the farm work, though of course that last ain't so heavy this time o' year. But it's too much for one man, let alone the worry of it."

"Ain't they able to hire no help?" said Mrs. Getchey, who had fallen back on her knitting work.

"Why, of course they be!" Aurilla Ann made answer. "But Mariar won't have no help about the house."

"That's rather hard on Daniel, ain't it?" said Mrs. Getchey.

"Well, I should think so," replied her son's wife, piling fresh knots of wood under the wash boiler, preparatory to her Monday's work.

While the neighbor who, unconsciously to himself was the subject of so much solicitude among the surrounding families, hung out his last wet and flapping sheet, securing it by a battered clothes pin, and hastened, with blue nose and frozen fingers, into the house.

"Maria!" he spoke, up the stairway, which wound around and around like a wooden corkscrew—"Maria!"

"Well?" sighed a mournful voice.

"Shan't I make ye a little buttered toast?"

"I don't care for no buttered toast," returned the funereal strains

"Or fry ye an egg? Do try an egg, Maria—with a shaving o' bacon and some coffee! Ye must eat, Maria, or ye'll break down. For my sake Maria, eat something."

Only a sigh was the response.

But Daniel Dorking made the coffee, and fried the little slice of bacon, with its accompanying eggs, speedily carrying the tray up stairs, where he opened the door by a gentle impetus with his foot.

Maria occupied the best room in the house, that was very evident.

A rag carpet, woven in gay maroon and yellow stripes, covered the floor; a cheerful wood fire blazed in the chimney; the window was curtained with Turkey red; and Mrs. Dorking, propped up on a pile of feather pillows, was surrounded with a variety of devotional books, a camphor bottle and a fan.

"The washin' is all out, Maria," said poor little Mr. Dorking; "and I've wiped up the floor, and set the kettle o' vegetables back, where it'll simmer and not burn. And now I'll jest step over to the mill."

"And leave me all alone, Daniel?" said his wife, lugubriously.

"The mill has got to be seen to, now that Eliab Johnson has gone on his weddin' trip," said Dorking. "And a man can't be in two places at once, Maria, ye know."

"Oh, well, it don't matter," said Mrs. Dorking, with a melancholy sniff. "I'm only a poor crectur, I shan't bother nobody very long."

"Hev a little more bacon, Maria?" soothed her husband.

But Mrs. Dorking, who had already eaten enough bacon for a working man, both the fried eggs, a slice of bread and butter, and drank about a pint of coffee shook her head, and fell back on "Hervey's Meditations Among the Tombs."

"I won't be gone long," said Daniel cheerfully. "And I'll fetch a bit o' fresh meat to cook for dinner. P'raps you'd fancy a steak or a chop. Salt meat is gettin' sort o' monotonous."

But Maria declined to notice this remark at all, and poor Daniel crept away, believing himself a heartless poltroon, and his wife a persecuted angel.

"I don't see how on earth I'm goin' to get along this way," said he. "Them clothes is friz as stiff as boards, and ought to be took in and dried round the stove; and the chickens ain't been fed, and the soft soap's spilin', and the apples need to be picked over, and the potatoes is all sproutin' down cellar, and my stockings is full o' holes cobble 'em as I will, and Maria won't hear to no hired help. And my neuralgy was pretty bad last night. I'm 'most afeared I'm goin' to break down. I've half a mind to go over and talk to Getchey's folks about it."

It was just a week afterward that the younger Mrs. Getchey made her appearance in the bedroom of the melancholy Mrs. Dorking.

"How are you feelin' to-day?" she asked, in the carefully modulated accents of sympathy.

Mrs. Dorking shook her head backward and forward among the pillows with closed eyes.

"I'm mis'able, thankee," she said.

"It must be a comfort to you havin' Abby Jane here," said Mrs. Getchey, seating herself in the splint bottomed arm chair beside the bed.

"Havin' who?" said Mrs. Dorking, opening her eyes widely.

"Why, Abby Jane—the young woman your husband's got down stairs to help with the housework, you know," explained Mrs. Getchey.

Mrs. Dorking sat up in bed.

"A young woman," she repeated, "to help with the housework?"

Mrs. Getchey nodded.

"Dan'l wasn't goin' to say nothin' about it to you," said she. "He calculated it would only fret and worry you. But he found he couldn't get along and do everything himself. And Abby Jane's right smart. I jest wish you could see how white the clothes is out on the lines. And how nice she's scoured up the kitchen tins and bleached the old curtains and polished the brass candlesticks! She's a one to turn off work, now I tell you!"

"Well!" ejaculated Mrs. Dorking.

"She's a bakin' pies now," said Mrs. Getchey; "dried apple, with plenty of funnel seeds; and pumpkin, and a cranberry tart for Elder Swift. Elder Swift is to be here to tea, and he's dreadful partial to cranberry tarts and short cake."

Mrs. Dorking turned very red in the face.

"Invitin' company, be they?" said she; "and cookin' a lot o' things in my own house, and never consultin' me! Him and his hired gal, indeed!"

"Dan'l calculated you was too feeble to be bothered," said Mrs. Getchey, consolingly.

"I ain't so feeble as he'd like to make out that I be!" muttered Mrs. Dorking. "I was a thinkin' a spell ago about settin' up a little while. Jest hand me my stockings, will you, Aurilla Ann?"

"I wouldn't try to set up, said Aurilla Ann; "you ain't able."

"Yes, I be!" snapped the hypochondriac. "Who's the best judge of my feelings, you or me? What sort of a lookin' gal is this that's bossin' my kitchen while I'm in bed?"

"As pretty as a pink," said Mrs. Getchey; "cheeks as red as peonies; hair as black as a coal; and she steps off as light as a thistledown."

"Hump?" said Mrs. Dorking. "Give me my double gownd, Aurilla Ann. I mean to see arter this business myself; and if Daniel Dorking thinks I'm goin' to put up with such treatment as this—"

"Better take my arm," suggested Mrs. Getchey.

But the late invalid impatiently rejected her offered assistance.

"Lemme alone!" said she; "I can walk as well as ever I could. Why shouldn't I?"

And Mrs. Dorking went down stairs into the sitting room, where her spouse sat very close to a pretty young woman, both engaged in examining the pages of a "Universal Atlas."

Mr. Daniel's hand rested familiarly on the pretty girl's shoulder, and the pretty girl's braids of black hair were close to Daniel's own iron gray locks.

"Daniel!" almost shrieked Mrs. Dorking, "I'm astonished at you, that I be!"

Daniel Dorking started up, with an exclamation of surprise; the atlas fell from the pretty girl's knee.

"Why," cried the farmer, "it's Maria!"

"Yes, it's Maria!" enunciated Mrs. Dorking; "and about the last person in the world that you wanted to see, I guess!"

But, to her surprise, Daniel Dorking's face relaxed none of its beaming cheeriness.

The pretty girl, instead of fleeing guiltily from the room, came forward with outstretched hands.

"Won't you kiss me, Maria?" said she.

"I?" gasped Mrs. Dorking, "Kiss you!"

"It's Jenny," said Daniel; "my youngest sister, Abigail Jane, from the old farm at home. I wrote to her how bad off we were here, and she's come, bless her dear little heart, to stay all winter with us. We was goin' to surprise you, as soon as you felt a little particle better. But we didn't expect any such good luck as your comin' down stairs yourself, did we Jenny?"

"No, indeed!" smiled the pretty girl. "But now that you are here, Maria, we'll make you so comfortable!"

Mrs. Dorking now turned to Mrs. Getchey.

"You never told me she was Daniel's sister, from Vermont," said she.

"You never gave me time," said Aurilia Ann, with an odd sparkle under her eye-lashes.

That was the way in which Mrs. Daniel Dorking was beguiled down stairs; and she never "took to her bed" again.

But neither was she ever known to admit that she was fanciful and foolish. No, no! Mrs. Daniel Dorking was not to be caught in that trap. She always alluded to that season as "the time of my dreadful illness!" and the doctor called it "a wonderful cure," and sent in a big bill.

"I guess we were the true doctors!" thought Mrs. Getchey and Jenny Dorking, looking archly at each other.—Helen Forest Graves.

◆

John D. Long in Maine.

The Journal was rambling through Buckfield not long ago and read a sign on the extension of a house now owned by U. S. Marshal Bisbee. I fell in with an old resident and called his attention to a weather-beaten shingle, reading: "John D. Long." "Yes, I knew Long well; and did you ever hear why he came to leave Buckfield? Well, if you won't publish it—I'll tell you—'twas because of chagrin—nothing else. You see he was run down for the legislature—and he took it so to heart that he packed up his law books, turned the keys and moved to Boston. I don't believe he would ever have made a success of it, in this town. You see he wasn't just the man for the back-lots. No, he wasn't aristocratic at all; that wasn't the trouble; but he had no knack at looking up cases, no taste for it. He'd stay all day in his office and read Webster's speeches and the Spectator, and Horace and Milton, and so on—and never look inside a law book. He wasn't born for the green bag—no taste for the drudgeries of clientage. He was too literary a feller for this latitude, and he once said to me alluding to his stay in Buckfield, that he 'never earned enough at law here to pay for his sign'—and a mighty mean looking one it is—'and his fee for admission to the bar.' His defeat for the legislature was an awful sockdolager on him—it was brought about, too, by the republicans, as he had a sort of attack of Mugwumpism, that fall. But he made amends for that last year. As he says, all the Mugwumps always come back to the fold, just as Roger Williams did to the Puritans.

"But John Long is one of the brightest men in this country—always growing, too. And he has the most popular way with him. When he comes back here he always sits down on the nail cask and talks over old times and asks about the old folks. It is a liberal education just to shake hands with John Long. He's the masterest man to get on the good side of the ministers of any man I ever saw. The last time I was at his house in Hingham, there were a dozen ministers, of all denominations, eating his hot biscuit and Long seemed to be the 'yours truly' of every one of 'em. He lives in Hingham, Mass., in good style but without fuss. Long never has on a high dickey, and the people like him. For one of them literary fellers he is wonderful; for he has no more airs than his humblest constituent. It's a good place to go—is Hingham.

"And the very best part of John Long is his character. He is clean. He never did a mean thing; he is free from vices of all sorts.

Gray hair is uncommon in Persia. The St. Louis Globe-Democrat says: "One rarely sees a gray beard or gray locks in Teheran. Even the most venerable men have dark or red hair. The reason is because all from the highest to the lowest, dye their hair. This is done first with henna, which gives a reddish tint. Many prefer to leave it thus. But others add to the henna a second stain of indigo, and the combination of the two colors imparts to the hair a dark-brown hue."

Cancer on the Tongue.

GEN. GRANT'S ILLNESS AND ITS CAUSE.

The Washington correspondent of the New York World writes:

General Grant has for a number of years smoked more and stronger cigars than any man of the most robust health could endure. When he was in the White House he smoked from 15 to 20 cigars a day. They were not small cigars, either. They were of the old Reina Victoria size and were the blackest of Maduras in color. Very few experienced smokers had strong enough heads to smoke Grant's cigars. More than one caller at the White House has been made sick by attempting to smoke with President Grant.

Judge Kelly, of Pennsylvania, who had a similar cancerous trouble in his mouth two years ago, has been cured although he was given up by his physicians when he went to Europe for the last operation. The cancer in the judge's mouth was also caused by the excessive use of tobacco. He was not a smoker but he chewed tobacco constantly. Up to the time the cancer appeared he was hardly ever without tobacco in his mouth. He went to sleep with a twist of it in his cheek, and it was upon the spot on the tongue touched by the tobacco that the cancer developed. There was this difference between his case and that of General Grant's his was upon the tongue itself, where it could be gotten at by the surgeons; the cancer in General Grant's mouth is said to be at the roots of the tongue, and in a place where it cannot be successfully treated.

This is identical with the case of Senator Ben Hill. He chewed tobacco immoderately, and while he was seemingly in the prime of health a cancer appeared at the roots of his tongue. He went through the martydom of a number of surgical operations, but the result was nothing but a prolongation of a life of pain and endless struggling. The closing days of Ben Hill's life were very pathetic. During the very last days of Hill's life, he was able to eat only a small saucer of the thinnest oatmeal. To eat even this small quantity took him fully an hour. Every mouthful caused him the most violent pain. Hill showed great fortitude throughout the closing hours of his life. Although he never had a single moment that was free from pain, his courage was never shaken. He never made a complaint.

When General Grant was here last spring, being treated for injuries received from a fall upon the sidewalk during the winter previous, he received a great deal of attention. His rapid recovery from his injuries under the treatment here made him very contented. Those who saw him then say that Grant was never happier in his life than he was during that last visit. He believed he had a great fortune. He had a large parlor, with three or four rooms attached, at the Arlington hotel. He sat enthroned during the day in a great leather chair, with Mrs. Grant near him, busily engaged in receiving visitors, who comprised the most distinguished and prominent people of the day. He never had more prominent callers when he was president. People of both parties vied in paying him honor. Had it not been for the disastrous failure in which he was involved he would have been a very important figure in the campaign. The republicans believe that if Grant had not been crippled by his financial disaster he would have had carried the balance in the state of New York for Mr. Blaine.

The First Steel Pen Makers.

The word Pen. in Holy Scriptures, refers to either an iron style, or to a reed; the latter being the earliest form of pen used for writing on papyrus.

One of the earliest attempts to make steel pens is attributed to Wm. Gadbury, England, who, for his own use, constructed a clumsy article from the main spring of a watch.

Steel Pens were first brought into use about the year 1803.

James Perry, of London, commenced to manufacture pens in 1824, and was the founder of the firm named Perry & Co., who are now the largest pen makers in the world.

Their celebrated "U" and Falcons for correspondents, and fine points Nos. A. O. 4 and 1073 for schools, are, without doubt, the CHEAPEST PERFECT PENS in use—they can be had from stationers. Sole Agents for the United States, Messrs. IVISON, BLAKEMAN, TAYLOR, & Co., New York.

The Right Sort of a Tenant.

"Oh, yes, I have all kinds of tenants," said a kind-faced old gentleman to a Chicago Herald reporter: "but one that I like the best is a child not more than ten years of age. A few years ago I got a chance to buy a piece of land over on the west side, and I did so. I noticed that there was an old coop of a house on it. After a while a man came to me and wanted to know if I would rent it to him."

"What do you want it for?" says I.

"'To live in,' he replied.

"'Well,' I said, 'you can have it. Pay me what you think it is worth to you.'"

"The first month he brought $2, and the second month a little boy, who said he was this man's son, came with $3. After that I saw the man once in awhile, but in the course of time the boy paid the rent regularly, sometimes $2 and sometimes $3. One day I asked the boy what had become of his father."

"'He's dead, sir,' was the reply.

"'Is that so?" said I. 'How long since?'

"'More'n a year,' he answered.

"I took his money, but I made up my mind that I would go over and investigate, and the next day I drove over there. The old shed looked quite decent. I knocked at the door and a little girl let me in. I asked for her mother. She said she didn't have any.

"'Where is she," asked I.

"'We don't know, sir. She went away after my father died and we've never seen her since."

"Just then a little girl about three years old came in, and I learned that these three children had been keeping house together for a year and a half, the boy supporting his two little sisters by blacking boots and selling newspapers, and the elder girl managing the house and taking care of the baby. Well, I just had my daughter call on them, and we keep an eye on them now. I thought I wouldn't disturb them while they are getting along. The next time the boy came with the rent I talked with him a little, and then I said:

"My boy, you're a brick. You keep right on as you have begun and you will never be sorry. Keep your little sisters together and never leave them. Now look at this."

"I showed him a ledger in which I had entered up all the money that he had paid me for rent, and I told him it was all his with interest. 'You keep right on,' says I, 'and I'll be your banker, and when this amounts to a little more I'll see that you get a house somewhere of your own.' That's the kind of a tenant to have."

Why a Governor Signed the Pledge.

"Am I my brother's keeper?" fell from the lips of Cain. God has so identified our interests with others that we are in some respects our brother's keeper. No man liveth to himself, no man dieth to himself.

A governor of Pennsylvania signed the pledge, "not because he thought himself in danger, but to save a friend." The head of one of the best families was becoming intemperate, to the great distress of his house. "I saw," said the governor, "their grief. I resolved to speak to him on the subject; did so, and urged him to sign the pledge He suddenly turned upon me, saying, 'governor, I will if you will.' 'It's a bargain,' said I, and we went immediately to the office of the secretary, and both signed; and I know not that I ever touched a drop of liquor afterward. Nothing else would have induced me to sign; but I think of it as one of the best acts of my life."

THE LICENSE QUESTION.

We have not forgotten the presidential campaign of last summer, nor that we were defeated by the professed friends of temperance, and yet at the same time our inclination is and we believe it a duty to fight the rumsellers of Woburn to the bitter end, and to urge every law-abiding citizen to fall into the ranks and help crush them out. We frankly confess that our faith in a political prohibitory party received a terrible wrenching last fall, and that we have no more confidence in the leaders of that party than the law allows, but we hate the rum traffic and despise those who are engaged in it. We therefore think that every decent-minded man in town ought to do everything he can next election day for the success of "no license." The majority "for license" last year was only about twenty, which we believe may be overcome if the proper amount of earnest work is put into the election.

And another thing: the rumsellers ought to be defeated on account of the damaging influence they exert on the conduct of our municipal affairs. We have said it more than once, and repeat it, that rum rules the roost here. Rumsellers are a tyrannical set and make everybody and everything they can bend and contribute to their unholy trade. Men who want office are afraid of them, and to secure their influence meanly yield to their demands. They will not allow candidates to be elected who refuse to cater to their interests. The stigma of mal-administration of town affairs—extravagance, high taxes, and those innumerable other bad things which prevent people from becoming citizens of Woburn—is due to the influence of rumsellers. It is unnecessary for us to go into details: every intelligent citizen understands it.

Well, the question comes up for decision next Monday whether or no this condition of things is to continue and Woburn be governed by rum and rumsellers next year, and perhaps forever? Are the decent men of the town, tax-payers, moral citizens with families, lovers of good order—are these people going to yield to and put up with the tyrannous demands of the rumsellers any longer? The only way to prevent it is to vote that they shall not have licenses to carry on their nefarious traffic. Take the right to sell rum away and you deprive them of their influence on the administration of our town affairs, and when this is done the stigma now resting on our reputation will disappear.

THE LEGISLATURE.

The present session of the Massachusetts Legislature has been a working one so far. Nobody can remember when there has been one that has buckled right down to business like it. Many important acts have become laws with a great deal less fuss and feathers than has commonly characterized such work, and we have no doubt the industry of the members will continue to the end. Of course in due time the papers will pitch into it and call it the weakest, most indolent, and least efficient session that ever disgraced the Commonwealth. That is to be expected. The papers would consider themselves remiss in the discharge of their duty to the public if they did not abuse the public's servants; but having done first class work and a great deal of it the members may with the utmost propriety place the right thumb at the nose, spread fingers apart, touch right little finger with left thumb, spread out the whole arrangement to its utmost limits, and let it gyrate.

☞ The Boston Herald of last Monday morning contained a strong editorial plea for the enactment of a law by the present Legislature to secure permanency of employment to good and worthy school teachers and protect them against the whims or prejudices of School Boards. As the law now stands teachers, although engaged for the year, may be dismissed by the Board at any time and without cause, and cases of this kind have occurred in Woburn during the present school year. The Herald makes a strong and conclusive argument for a "tenure of office" law for teachers and illustrates it with the Woburn cases referred to. It says:—

> Suppose prejudice rule and the tyranny of ignorance, what then? Before us is a minority report of the school committee of the town of Woburn, four of the nine members signing it. To this report is appended the names of the superintendent of the schools of Newton, Hon. John Cummings, and two other prominent citizens. These men declare that able teachers have been discharged from the schools of Woburn without cause. We know nothing about the circumstances of the case, and it is not essential to our argument that we should. All we know is that the gentleman whose name is appended first to this report knows a good teacher from an inferior one, and that any influence that would drive out ability from the schools of a city or town is hostile to public instruction, and the commonwealth does not lift a finger in defence.

These cases are right to the point. Prejudice and "the tyranny of ignorance" did rule, and the result was that several of our best teachers were dropped out and incompetent ones elected to fill their places.

☞ The re-appointment of Postmaster Pearson of New York city is altogether the hardest blow the Democracy have yet received from President Cleveland. They have not liked his appointments but have managed to swallow them and declare they were nice; but when it came to retaining Postmaster Pearson, that was more than they could stand without revolt. It was a very bitter pill for the Democracy, and will give New York State to the Republicans next fall.

— We call attention to the change of Charles H. Barnes's card in this paper. As we have had occasion to say before, this is an old, popular and reliable house and worthy of a liberal patronage.

— The strong and unwholesome hand of the Centre ring was seen in the make-up of the committee to report candidates. Every one of them will be nominated: you see if they are not.

— The Railroad Commissioners publish a notice in this paper to which attention is called. This we hope is the final step so far as Commissions are concerned, and when their decision is rendered work on the Branch extension will be pushed vigorously. Perhaps it is at this meeting that the opponents of the measure intend to make their fight.

— The Woburn Coal Co., of which Mr. E. D. Newton is agent, keeps all the varieties of coal used in this or any other town. He sells it cheap, fills orders promptly, and is liked by the public.

— The Mendelssohn Club held a rehearsel last Monday evening at Fraternity Hall. It was a prime one. There will be two more, immediately after which the grand concert will be given.

— There are hints of huge proportions floating in the air concerning some items in the annual report of the Selectmen. It is said the matter is to be thoroughly ventilated before Town Meeting.

— Some say the Democratic nominating committee of 21 means death to the ring. It probably means a Democratic ticket, a ring ticket, and a go-as-you-please ticket, with odds in favor of the latter.

— There was quite a snow storm here Saturday night or early Sunday morning. It made dreadfully sloppy streets, and the little flirt of the same article on Monday night didn't help matters much.

— I think it will be to the advantage of builders to examine my yards of lumber, building material and prices before contracting with anybody else. I guarantee them bottom figures.—J. B. McDonald.

— Mr. George H. Conn has been confined to his house on Court street for a couple of weeks by illness, and has the cheering prospect before him of having to remain there several weeks longer. Drs. Graves and Dodge are his physicians.

— It is reported that the temperance people of this town will make a gallant stand on election day to secure a "no license" victory, and it would not surprise us at all if they carried the day. There are many good workers among them, and right and justice are strong weapons to fight with.

— There was no attendance of the opposition to the Branch extension at the meeting of the County Commissioners at the Woburn depot last Friday. The Commissioners viewed the route with Clerk Hill and other Selectmen from here to Wilmington, and will make a favorable report.

— A well known temperance lecturer from Middlesex County was about Boston with a battered face last Saturday. He looked as if he had been insulting John L. Sullivan or John Barleycorn, but he said he fell in the Woburn Rink. —Sharon Advocate.—We can't seem to think who that man could have been.

— We advise any of our readers in want of a first-class snug place near churches, schools, post-office and all conveniences of that sort, and where a man of good ideas can pay for it in a few years, to drop into Mr. Buckman's shoe store, on Main street, and ask him about the place he advertises in this paper.

— Woburn's favorites, the Whitmore & Clark Minstrel troupe, will give one of their superb entertainments in Lyceum Hall on tomorrow, Saturday, evening. This company never fail to draw a big house here, because they are very popular with our people and always give full money's worth. They take the lead of anything on the road.

— The President has ousted our old and esteemed friend, Ed. Russell, from the postoffice at Davenport, Iowa, to which he was appointed more than twenty years ago, but it looks as though Mr. Warren Teel, a Woburn boy, who during all his service has been Mr. Russell's right bower, stands more than an even chance of being retained by the new incumbent as Deputy P. M. We hope so, at all events.

— After seventeen years of good faithful service, Mr. P. G. Hanson has resigned the office of Head Farmer for Hon. John Cummings. The long time he has filled the responsible position speaks well for both parties. The cases are very rare where two men work seventeen years harmonously together as Mr. Hanson and Mr. Cummings have, and to separate at the end of a period of that length must be attended with regret.

— Mr. John Bacon was considerably bruised and shaken up by being struck with the carriage his horse started to run away with last Tuesday, but fortunately his hurts were not of a serious character. In trying to head off the same team near Mr. William Winn's on Pleasant street, Mr. D. B. Morrill was severely cut on the head and face and somewhat bruised. Mr. A. Robie succeeded in stopping the horse before it had done any damage. Dr. Kelley was called to see the injured men.

— Representatives of the Sun Electric Light Company of Boston met the Executive Committee of the Woburn Board of Trade in the banqueting rooms of Masonic Hall last Tuesday evening. Chairman James Skinner of the Committee presided. The representatives made very satisfactory statements to the meeting in relation to their business, and the feeling was strong in favor of securing the establishment for this place. If it is what it appears to be the $25,000 asked for is a mere bagatelle.

— The majority on the School Board kick like fire over the publication of the minority report. They didn't want the public to see it knowing full well it would show up the bad management of the majority. We are glad it came out so that the voters of this town can see for themselves just where the odium belongs. There must be reform in our School Board. It might just as well be said here and now as at any other time and place, that the leader of the majority of the Board is an enemy to the American system of Public Schools.

— It is fair to presume that the women voters of this town have got things all cut and dried for election day, but their plans, or what they have done, is what no fellow about our size can find out. From the hush which pervades their movements we are led to believe that they are becoming expert political machinists and understand the whole business of laying pipes and springing traps as effectualy as the most experienced men folks. Well, we don't care a snap about the how if they only do it, and the doing it is just what is expected next Monday.

— Canvassers for membership to the Board of Trade are meeting with capital success. The business men are taking right hold of it in good earnest, which is an assurance that it is bound to go. If all the leather manufacturers will give the movement their countenance and support, as they ought to do, we wouldn't ask a stronger guarentee of success. There is no question but that it is the best institution Woburn has ever had. Vigorously carried on and its benefits to the town will astonish the conservatives and slow coaches. The organization is in the very best hands, and the Executive Committe is composed of workers.

— It is whispered around that the publication of a report on school affairs by a minority of the Board has frightened the majority members to such a degree that they contemplate issuing a manifesto, or bull, or something of the sort, to counteract its influence and save their candidates at Town Meeting. We doubt very much if they make a "clean breast" of it, for if they do, salt can't save the men they put up for candidates. The majority are in a tight place. The public eye is focussed squarely on them. No wonder they squirm, and issue "statements." They'll squirm worse before the leaves fall. And Mr. Flagg spoke.

— It is reported, with how much truth we are unable to state, that ex-policeman Bernard McHugh is after scalps this year too. He has a few wrongs that he proposes to make an effort to have righted. A great injustice was done Mr. McHugh when he was dropped from the force on the demand of a few scheming politicians who were bent on making room for a friend or two, and so he is going to do a bit of fighting on his own hook next Monday. No fault was found with Mr. McHugh as an officer. His duties were all properly discharged, but if he remained on the force somebody else would have to stay off, and the ring wanted this somebody else on. We hope Mr. McHugh will fight the ring till the cows come.

— The unterrified held their caucus in Lyceum Hall Tuesday evening. The hall was nearly full of people. Mr. James Skinner, Chairman of the Democratic Town Committee, called the caucus to order at 8 o'clock and announced that the choice of Chairman was in order. In the first series about ten nominations were made and voted down. Then Mr. Skinner called Hon. A. E. Thompson to the chair temporarily and retired. Mr. Thompson announced that the election of Chairman was in order. In this second series about ten nominations were made and voted down. At last Hon. A. E. Thompson was chosen. Martin Walch was chosen Secretary. A Committee of twenty-one was chosen to nominate candidates for town officers and report at the polls. Dr. Conway conducted the exercises.

— "Things is workin." The pot is boiling. The Democrats of Montvale have nominated Mr. Michael Golden, freight receiver for the B. & L. R. R. at their Boston depot, for a member of the Board of Selectmen; and at a Citizens' caucus held last Saturday evening Mr. William Babb received the nomination for the same office. That bars brother Samson. Golden was euchered out of an election by the Democratic leaders a year or two ago, and just about this time he proposes to see what can be done concerning it. Unless there is fair play and no gourging Golden will immediately start out on the war-path for scalps, in which event Samson and his friends had better take to the woods. He has enlisted "during the war," and if the ring at the Centre beat him this year they've got to get up earlier than they have been in the habit of doing. There will be stacks of fun for the disinterested observer next Town Meeting day. When the ring "report at the polls" the ticket which they are now incubating and mean to swindle the marines with, a howl will float up over the ridgepole of Lyceum Hall that will make the welkin creak and tremble in every joint. Golden and his friends, 200 strong, will be there that morning bright and early, and don't you forget it.

— If Mr. Thomas Salmon is nominated for re-election to the Board of Selectmen, as no doubt he will be, the laboring men of this town to a man ought to vote against him next Monday. It is a duty they owe themselves and families to compass his defeat, horse, foot and dragoons. Personally we have nothing against Mr. Salmon. He is a very pleasant, agreeable sort of a person, and his company is about as enjoyable as that of any one we meet on the streets. But he is not a friend to the workingmen. He is the worst enemy they have in this town and we feel it our bounded duty to say so. He ought to be defeated at the polls next Monday by an overwhelming majority, and will be if the workingmen do their whole duty. It is this way: Mr. Salmon is Chairman of the Committee on highways, bridges, sidewalks, etc., which is the same thing as holding the office of Street Commissioner. He employs all the laborers on the roads and regulates matters to suit himself. Now, it is a notorious fact, at least it has been many times so reported to us, that he utterly refuses to hire any man to work on the streets who does not, or will not pledge himself to, do all his trading at his store. He says to all applicants for work, "trade with me or no work"—not in this blunt way perhaps, but in a way that all understand. A good many had rather yield to Mr. Salmon's conditions than starve, and so get jobs. Mr. Salmon is a rich man. How did he accumulate his wealth? This question will bear thinking about by many poor men. At any rate, the laboring men of this town would be a great deal better off is somebody besides Mr. Salmon was Chairman of the Committee on highways, etc. And therefore we say to such make it a business next Monday to lay him out.

— One would have to search a long time and diligently to find a better temperance meeting than that held in the Congregational church last Sunday night. We have heard a great many people say it was a grand one. There was a strong array of talent on the platform: Rev. Dr. March, pastor of the Congregational church; Mr. Fisk, pastor of the Methodist church; Mr. Westall, pastor of the Unitarian church; Rev. Charles Anderson, pastor of the No. Woburn Congregational church; Dr. Hamlin, founder of Robert College, Constantinople, Turkey, and now President of Middlebury, Vermont, College, and last, Rev. Dr. Plumb of Boston, who was the chief speaker of the evening. Nearly all of these gentlemen had something to do with the meeting—all of them perhaps—and everything went on swimmingly and pleasantly from beginning to end. The lecture by Dr. Plumb was a splendid one. The only fault we heard found with it was that it was too short. A large number of the audience said they would have liked an hour and a half more of it, and that feeling was general. Dr. Hamlin was not invited to sing, although we saw it stated in a Boston paper a few days before that in his younger days he learned to sing "Morning bells I love to hear ringing merrily loud and clear," and that in Turkey he executed twelve series of concerts at brief intervals, at each of which only two pieces were rendered, and they were: "By-lo-baby, on the tree-top," and "Hush my dear, lie still and slumber," one of which concerts, we surmise, was for the benefit of his daughter, Mrs. Rev. Charles Anderson of No. Woburn. The meeting was a great and gratifying success, and we hope Dr. Plumb will be invited to come again soon and give us another of his able and entertaining lectures.

— There will be an Easter Sunday School Concert at the Baptist Church Sunday evening at 7 o'clock.

— Rev. Mr. Winkley will officiate at All Saints Chapel, Montvale, at 3 o'clock, P. M., next Sunday.

— The parlors of the M. E. Church have been tendered to the ladies who go to the polls next Monday, and will be used by them as a rallying point.

— Mr. G. R. Gage gave us a perfectly preserved and finely flavored pear this morning which was raised last fall. It is a very uncommon thing for pears to keep until Fast Day.

— Fast Day was a dull, quiet, uninteresting, long, tedious day. The Union meeting in the Unitarian church was well attended, and Rev. Mr. Winn preached an excellent sermon.

— The Ladies' Social Benevolent Society of First Congregational Church will hold a festival and give an entertainment on the evening of Thursday, April 9. For full particulars see posters.

— Kiern J. Kenney, leather splitter, had both arms broken Wednesday afternoon, being caught in a splitting machine at Kenney & Murphy's shop. Mr. Kenney is one of the oldest and most experienced union splitters in Woburn, and a worthy citizen. Dr. Graves attends him.

— East Lynne by Miss Stanmore, supported by a strong company, attracted a good house at Lyceum Hall last evening. All were highly gratified with the excellent entertainment. Miss Stanmore is a fine artist—one of the very best we have ever seen in East Lynne—and when she visits us again will receive a warm welcome.

— We are requested to say that a ticket in opposition to the ring has been agreed on, and that a plenty of ballots containing the names will be found at the polls early on Monday morning. It is of the utmost importance that every friend of a good, clean town government should attend town meeting and vote the Citizens' ticket. Let all rally for the right.

RINK NOTES. — There have been several drawing cards at both rinks this week, and the attendance has been good. General skating has been on deck considerably, several pleasant sessions of which have been held. Last Saturday evening a large audience assembled at Newton's City Rink to witness a game of polo between the Marlboro team and Woburn Citys which was won by the latter in three straight goals. McCarty received much praise as goal-tender for the Woburn Citys. The Marlboro boys were highly pleased with their reception here.——The Woburns were defeated by the Globes at Haverhill one night this week.——A fine exhibition game was played at Carter's Academy between the Peabodys and Woburns last Saturday which was a draw game.——The Skinners and Clerks went in for victory at Carter's Academy last Wednesday evening. ——The matinees of the children at Newton's City Rink have been largely attended and very pleasant.——In the High School League game of polo at the Woburn City Rink, last Tuesday night, between the East Boston and Woburn High Schools, the Woburns won the first goal in 8 minutes, the second in 7 minutes and the third in 18 minutes, winning the game in 33 minutes actual playing time. Referee, Mr. McCarty.——The Mother Hubbards and Dudes, both of Stoneham, drew a large crowd at Woburn City Rink last Monday evening.——Newton of the City Rink has issued a card extraordinary for the coming week, to which particular attention is called. ——This, Friday, evening the Globes of Haverhill and Woburns will play a League game at the Academy. Gourley of the old Paris team will play with the Woburns. This will be an interesting game.——On Easter Monday there is to be a grand 3-mile race at Newton's City Rink.——Particular attention is called to the announcements of both rinks in this paper. Rare attractions for the week are offered by them.

Old Woburn Homes, No. 4.

When these sketches of Old Woburn Homes were begun, the writer had no plan and no intention beyond a second article. But the subject has grown, and it is yet far from being exhausted. Time and room will be taken, at least for the present, for only one more.

A few feet north of the house of the late Capt. Joseph Gardner and now occupied by his son-in-law, Rev. Allen Lincoln, at the "West Side," there once stood a very large house which was entered by a massive double front door with a heavy brass knocker without and a strong cross-bar within. In its best days, it had an unusual amount of architectural ornament and must have ranked, in imposing appearance, far above the majority of Woburn homes. It was the house of four probably five generations of Wymans, descendants from John, who, like his brother Francis, was one of the first settlers of Woburn. In at least four of these generations the name of the patriarch was Samuel. And among these Samuels, Dea. Samuel Wyman was prominent both in Town and Church affairs. He was succeeded by his son, Samuel, the grandfather of the present writer.

The writer well remembers going there, when a small boy, to visit his grandmother, then a widow. Instead of a carpet, unknown in those days, the white floor of the great square family room was sanded. In one corner, extending diagonally from floor to plastering overhead, was the "buffet," a word rarely heard now, and this from top to bottom, was filled with various utensils of pewter, mostly plates of different sizes, which shone like polished silver. That pewter, sometimes mistaken by young eyes for a more precious metal, was the standing wonder of the grandchildren. And more than all did they look, with a strange sort of awe, at the ancient English clock in the opposite corner. It had one of those human looking faces or assemblage of faces, which seemed always to look and sometimes to wink at one. Moon and stars silently told their story and moved on. The second hand and minute hand and hour hand and month hand all seemed to be at their business, and all faithfully, though noiselessly, accomplishing the work assigned them. But all is silent there now. The great old house, built probably more than 200 years ago, was long since swept away by the onward march of affairs. Probably not a vestige now remains, nor any thing to so much as hint that so many generations of a once well known and influential family there had their home.

Across the fields westerly toward what is now known as Cambridge street though considerably back from and below it, stood an ancient house with which the associations of the writer are still more intimate. It was not so large and not so imposing as its neighbor, the Wyman House. Standing a few rods east of the present Weston house and a short distance down the hill, it was for many years, the home of one branch of the Fowle family. James Fowle, Esq., born in 1720, prominent in town affairs, and Town Clerk for 34 years, lived and died there. His father probably, and, his grandfather possibly, lived there before him.

As Dea. Samuel Wyman was the writer's great-grandfather in one line, so James Fowle, Esq., was his great-grandfather in another. And that same old grandmother, whom he used to visit in the Wyman House, at length moved into the Fowle House, which she inherited from her own father. There, in the last three years of her life, when she needed constant care, the writer, with the family to which he immediately belonged, also lived. He can never forget the quaint antiquity of that house,—old, but to him new, and very strange. Too young then to appreciate the thronging associations that gathered around the house of so many Fowles, several of whom had made a decided mark, he has found memory since to be full of suggestion. The only son of James Fowle, Esq., bearing the same name, was also Town Clerk for many years, and his son, Marshall Fowle, succeeded him and retained the office, 19 years, till his death in 1833.

Before closing this account of one of the oldest homes of the Fowle family, it may be proper to mention an old family tradition, perhaps almost a family secret. The old grandmother, mentioned above, had a sister, Mary, the oldest daughter of James Fowle, Esq. This daughter, in 1772, became the wife of Col. Loammi Baldwin of North Woburn. Before his marriage, he was accustomed, in his visits to her, to go on horseback, leaving the horse tied near the house. On one of these occasions, after a rather lengthy visit, he left the house to return home, when, to his great amazement, he discovered that the horse had lost his saddle. After considerable search, the missing article was descried astride the ridge-pole of the house, it having been placed there, evidently with great painstaking, by some wags who thought they understood their own business, if not his. The tradition does not inform us whether the horseman got his saddle that night, or how he performed his three miles journey home. That old house, too, of which a perfect picture still lingers in the writer's mental eye, long since disappeared.

Many of our older people remember the "Black House," which once stood on the spot now occupied by the residence of Daniel Kimball, Esq., on the way from North Woburn to Central Square. We have no means of determining when or by whom it was built, but it must have been very old when torn down. As early as 1769 and probably considerably earlier, it was occupied, according to an old tradition, by Dr. John Hay, at one time of Reading. In that year, the young Benjamin Thompson, so celebrated afterward as Count Rumford, studied anatomy and physiology under Dr. Hay's instruction with a view to qualifying himself for the practice of medicine. Several years later, Isaac Snow Thompson, the oldest son of Daniel Thompson, the martyred hero of Lexington, studied medicine with Dr. Hay and, after settling as a physician in the state of Maine, married Charlotte, the doctor's daughter. In its later history, the "Black House" was occupied by Nathan Parker, one of the victims of the Clapp House disaster in 1807. He had probably lived there for some years before his sudden death, as his widow and daughters did for many years after that event. The widow finally married a Crosby of Billerica and of her five daughters, three married men well known in Woburn and two, after reaching womanhood, died, unmarried of consumption. Whether the house had once received a coating of black paint that gave it its sombre name, or not, the writer cannot say. But its very dark appearance certainly made that name no misnomer.

The writer remembers many more old Woburn Homes, some of which still remain, though most of them do not. There was the old Silvanus Wood house on Cambridge street between Cummingsville and the "West Side," the home of Thomas Douglass, somewhat famous, long before Wood's occupancy. There was and is the "Zeb. Wyman" house and store, facing the "Common," and very old. There is the "Bartle Richardson" house, corner of Salem and Bow streets, said to have been once a part of the very old Converse house that used to stand near it. There is the Daniel Johnson house on Main street, where now stands the house of Daniel Richardson, with the same old tree of the olden time before it; the John Flagg house where now is the house of his grandson, B. F. Flagg, on Burlington street, near Cummingsville; the Tottingham house on the corner of Main and Kilby streets; the Lilley Eaton and the "Gov." Brown houses at North Woburn, the former still standing and occupied, and others too numerous to mention. The names of Flagg, Page, Edgell, Wyman, Richardson, Fowle, Eaton, Miller, Keimer, Eames, Ames, Munroe, Lyman, Cummings, Reed, Kendall, Parker, Pierce, Coggin, Johnson, Wright and others are associated with many ancient dwellings beside those already noticed. But, though the writer remembers them all, he knows too little of their history to be able to suggest any thing of special importance. If what he has attempted, though imperfectly, in these sketches of the Old Homes, shall stir others to continue the same sort of work and do it better, he will feel fully rewarded for his pleasant labor.

HEREDITARY SCROFULA.

ARE you aware that in your blood the taint of scrofula has a prominent place? This is true of every one. It is liable at any time, on the slightest provocation, to develop itself in some insidious disease. Consumption and many other diseases are outgrowths of this impurity of the blood. HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA has a wonderful power over all scrofulous troubles, as the remarkable testimonials we have received unmistakably prove.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO.: Gentlemen— * * My youngest son has always been troubled with Scrofulous Humor; sores in his head discharging from his ears, and a running sore on the back of his ear for two years; his eyelids would fester and ulcerate, discharging so that I was obliged to wash them open every morning, his eyelashes nearly all coming out; he was exceedingly dainty, most of the time eating but two slight meals a day. We were unable to find anything that had the least effect upon him till last spring, 1876, we gave him two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla. His appetite improved at once. * * The back of his ear healed up without a scar, and not a sore in his head since. Sincerely yours,
MRS. N. C. SANBORN,
No. 103 Merrimack St., Lowell, Mass.

"We do not as a rule allow ourselves to use our editorial columns to speak of any remedy we advertise, but we feel warranted in saying a word for Hood's Sarsaparilla. Sarsaparilla has been known as a remedial agent for centuries and is recognized by all schools of practice as a valuable blood purifier. It is put up in forms of almost infinite variety, but Messrs. Hood & Co., (Lowell, Mass.) who are thoroughly reliable pharmacists, have hit upon a remedy of unusual value. Certainly they have vouchers of cures which we know to be most extraordinary."—Editors Lowell Weekly Journal.

Recently the Unitarian pantry was robbed of all the knives and forks it contained and when the Ladies' Friendly Society went to have their supper there the other day they found those useful implements minus. Not long since the Catholic church was robbed of a solid silver communion service. From which it appears that we have rogues about. This idea is strengthened by the fact that Mrs. Charles T. Symmes had her pocketbook snatched while proceeding from the train to her home the other day. Fortunately the thief made a miss-go of it, and Mrs. Symmes retained the valuables.

A sad case of burning occurred here last Tuesday which will prove fatal. While Miss Maggie Callahan, a niece of Mr. Michael Callahan of No. Woburn, was kindling a fire at the residence of Mr. William Pratt her calico sack took fire and almost instantly her clothes were all ablaze. She ran into the street where her screams attracted the attention of neighbors who immediately ran to her rescue, and found her horribly burned. On Tuesday evening Mr. Frank Pratt took the unfortunate girl to the Massachusetts General Hospital, where her burns were pronounced fatal. It was reported that she was using kerosene to kindle the fire, but such was not the case.

The adjourned Town meeting was held on Monday evening.——The report of the selectmen for laying out a street from Winthrop to Mt. Pleasant streets was accepted.——Voted to allow the Treasurer 5 per cent. on all money paid into the the fund of Wildwood Cemetery——$250 was appropriated for care of the common.——$300 was appropriated for watering the streets.——$500 was appropriated for laying a drain from near Sanderson's store to the river.——$600 was appropriated for new streets.——On motion of Mr. J. F. Dwinell, Art. 4 was taken up, and Mr. J. H. Tyler offered a motion as a substitute for the vote passed previously with reference to the Tax Collector's report, which was the same in substance, with the addition that "on all taxes paid before Nov. 1, 5 per cent annum be allowed from the time of payment to that date." This was unanimously passed. Also under this Article, the Selectmen submitted a supplementary report relative to the calling of town meetings, which was referred to the committee on revising Town By-Laws.——Under Art. 43 it was voted that a sum of money not less than $300 and not more than $500, be taken from the appropriations for and Bridges and expended in the improvements of the roads in the Hill District.

A party of forty of the friends of Miss May E. MONTVALE.

Mr. William Babb has been nominated by the tax-reformers of this hamlet for a member of the Board of Selectmen, to be supported at the approaching election. We think over here that he is a first class man and would make a tiptop reform member. His nomination is endorsed by the better element of this part of the town.

Friends of sobriety, good order, and a clean town government over in this village want to see their brethren in other parts of the town take hold and help bring out a citizens' ticket for the offices this spring, and try hard to elect them. If all who are opposed to the rule of rum in this town would cordially unite and work earnestly for a better state of things I have no doubt a change could be brought about. A majority of the Board of Selectmen are identified with the rum interests, and that accounts in a large measure for the vice and immorality that abounds among us. It must be that there are enough voters in town opposed to Rum Rule to destroy it if so disposed. May not then all take hold together and see what a united, determined, cling-to-it effort can do towards cleaning out the rum-sellers, rum-drinkers, and rum-sympathizers who fill the town offices here today?"—X.

An Interesting Relic.

By the courtesy of a friend we have examined a pamphlet, bearing on Woburn, entitled, "Five Letters, with Remarks," printed by J. Ball for Elias Smith, Boston, 1804. The pamphlet illustrated a phase of some church squabble, the idea of which is conveyed in the Scripture texts quoted on the title page: "I wrote unto the church, but Diotrephes, who loveth to have pre-eminence among them, receiveth us not;" "Alexander the Coppersmith, did me much evil; for he hath greatly withstood our words." Elias Smith was pastor of the First Baptist Church in Woburn about the close of the last century; installed Nov. 14, 1798, per a contemporary diary. The first three letters of his pamphlet concern persons residing in Boston. The first shows Smith to be what people now call a "crank." If what is said in them is true, the poor churches must have had a sorry experience with certain of their too enthusiastic members. He mentions one woman who began to pray openly in a Boston church of the Baptist denomination, and her friends were ordered to carry her out, that she might pray at home; and that men were appointed in the churches, to see that every person went out of the house after the ministers had done, that there might be no singing, praying or exhortation there, showing that the regular Baptist societies were opposed to such actions. Smith favored and practiced, when allowed, the irregular course of worship, and did not consider necessary the "regular society," with an ordained minister.

The third letter mentions some trouble concerning the church at Woburn. Thomas Paul, a colored preacher, who afterwards preached for the society in Woburn for some time with considerable acceptance, according to Smith, was at first not well received by the regular Baptist clergy of Boston, because, as he was told, "It was Boston, and that they did not mix colors;" in other words they were "too proud to have him preach;" and as long as there were other "white men" to preach, it was not thought best for him to preach there. The trouble still seemed to centre about Woburn, and letters four and five are on that subject, Letter four, from the church at Woburn to Elias Smith, is signed by order of the church, by Joseph W. Beers church clerk. The letter is quite long, respectful in its tone, and begins: "The Baptist church of Christ in Woburn, of which you were late a pastor, and of which you are still a member, feel it to be their duty once more to address you." The church then proceeds to tell its grievances on his account. On reading both sides as presented in the pamphlet, to the credit of the church we can say that the people appear to have treated him with more consideration than he deserved. His style shows him to have been a man of education, but the people where he requested, hesitated to recommend him as a minister. Woburn parties named in the letter are Deacon Convers and Mr. Winn. Smith speaks of this missive of the Woburn church, as "this childish simple letter;" he says, "this Woburn matter has been a great affair in Boston this year past;" on account of the Woburn matter, the regular Boston Baptist ministers could not ask him to preach.

Letter five, is from Elias Smith to the church in Woburn. It is dated at Portsmouth, Sept. 1, 1804. In this letter he disclaims being a member with them, or of the Baptist denomination. He answers the other points in detail in an unconciliatory tone. In some remarks on the letter he mentions "Deacon Fowle one of the church at Woburn." On a following page he gives the following note, communicated to the Warren Association of Baptists, held in Boston, Sept. 1804, in the letter from Woburn showing the action of the Woburn church on his case: "This day, September 10, 1804, voted, to withdraw the hand of fellowship from Elias Smith." He then gives ten pages to the consideration of this topic. Under the seventh head he says, "The Baptists in Massachusetts hold to installing or re-installing ministers. The meaning of this is anything you please. This practice I reject. I once went through this part of Anti-Christianism in Woburn: 'the Lord pardon me in this thing.'" He could not so easily endure the Woburn church's casting him off.—X.

Just What I Want.

A Ladies' or Gent's Boot that in the first place has real wear, in the second place that has style and looks well; and in the third place one that I can buy for just two dollars. Now, the store that makes this statement to you has just this kind of a Boot. The style for ladies of course is button while Gent's can have congress, lace or button. It will pay you to look at them before purchasing. Also a fine assortment of boots and shoes adapted to the wants of those who want reliable goods at fair prices. Woburn Town Reports.

Another financial year of the Town has rolled around and the citizens have been presented with the annual reports of its offices. A wonderful book it proves to be. Any intelligent person who has carefully read it must have discovered the many inaccurate and conflicting statements made.

On page 187 of the report we are told by the Treasurer that the cash balance in the Treasury is $9,132.38; and on page 178 and 79 the cash balance, as stated by the auditors, is $9,411.18, Which statement shall we accept? We find also on page 116 of the Selectmen's report the temporary loan account, hired in anticipation of uncollected taxes (including a loan of $3000 on account of 1885 tax), stated at $56,818.18. Now if we turn to page 175 of the Auditors' report, also page 178 showing the "Trial Balance," the temporary loan is placed at $1000 less than that stated by the Selectmen. Which statement shall we accept?

The regular Town indebtedness has been very carefully tabulated and stated on page 177, but we fail to find any itemized statement of temporary loans hired in anticipation of taxes, consequently are unable to determine which statement is correct, the Selectmen's or the Auditors', if either. There is a report about town that the temporary loans hired in anticipation of the taxes for 1884 exceed by several thousand dollars the amount of uncollected taxes reported due for said year. It is difficult to ascertain by the report any thing about this for the reason that no itemized list of temporary loans is given.

We find in looking at the income and expense of the water department, the sum of $1700 and over reported as uncollected water rates, which is a new feature in the history of our water department. If this system is to prevail what is their to hinder a much larger number of water takers to refuse or neglect to pay their rates and thereby increase the amount of uncollected water taxes next year to three or four times the amount reported due this year?

The Town is called upon to assess and appropriate over $5,000 annually to pay its officers for conducting its business: $300 of this, with some $500 additional, is for preparing a statement of the accounts and printing the same for distribution; but in view of the conflicting statements of the last report it would seem that the time had come for a radical change. What is needed for honestly conducting the town business is a non-partisan Board of officers—good, honest, capable and discreet men—men who will not be controlled in the interest of any party, sect or ring—and until this state of affairs can be brought about, we need not expect there will be any improvement in the administration of our town business.

Very Remarkable Recovery.

Mr. Geo. V. Willing, of Manchester, Mich., writes: "My wife has been almost helpless for five years, so helpless that she could not turn over in bed alone. She used two Bottles of Electric Bitters, and is so much improved, that she is able now to do her own work." Electric Bitters will do all that is claimed for them. Brave Yaqui Indians.

Referring to trouble growing out of the encroachment of would-be settlers on the territory of the Yaqui Indians in the State of Sonora, Mexico, a correspondent of the New York Star, says: The disturbance brings into notice an aboriginal tribe well worthy of descent from the people whom the Montzumas ruled, cultivating the arts of peace when not assailed or wronged, but rivaling the Boers in fighting qualities when aroused and led by a chief who combines the dignity of Toussaint L'Overture with the martial aggressiveness of Sitting Bull.

Mr. A. M. Womble, of this city, having long been identified with railroad and mining enterprises in Mexico, and having dwelt and traveled in Sonora, is acquainted with the tribe and the story of its collision with the Mexico authorities. The Yaqui tribe occupies a fertile territory of more than 10,000 square miles on both banks of the Rio Yaqui. The domain has always been jealously guarded, and every attempt to colonize or seize it has been vigorously repulsed. The Yaquis number about 14,000, of whom fully 4,000 are available for service in the field when occasion demand. They are the most civilized of the surviving aboriginal races, having been converted and instructed in agriculture as well as various simple arts and manufactures by the early missionaries. They are said to be very strict in their civil government is of the patriarchal type.

The present ruler of the Yaquis is a man of unusual ability, and though a full-blooded Indian, possesses a liberal education, which he acquired in the City of Guaymas. The chief's name is Kehamy. His military skill is said to be remarkable, and his firmness and integrity of purpose so great that his word is regarded as safe as a bond. Apart from their right of original possession, the Indians claim to hold a title, given by one of the old Spanish kings, which antedates any deed or parchment the Mexican ranchers can produce. Finding it impossible to bar out boomers and settlers by verbal remonstrance and threats, Kehamy drove them out forcibly and thereby incurred the wrath of the prefect of Guaymas.

When the Indians first took to the war-path in defence of their homes end fields General Pesquerias led a force against them and was amused to see the "savages" use blankets as a shield against his soldiers' bullets. Holding up a blanket at both ends, so that the edge just touched the ground, the Indian riflemen marched boldly toward him behind the apparently flimsy protection. The Mexican general was soon alarmed, however, to find that his bullets did not stop the strange advance, and the moving fort of blankets soon came so close to him and poured in such a deadly fire that he was fain to fly the field in confusion and with great loss. The Yaquis had become acquainted with the simple fact that while a bullet will pass through twenty blankets strained over a frame or laid against a firm surface, it will not penetrate a single one if moistened and hung up so as to swing clear of the ground. The bullets which General Pesquerias imagined were thinning the ranks of the savages were falling harmlessly on the outside of the woolen blankets.

So, when the next unpleasantness arose, the Indian prefect organized a conspiracy on the part of renegade Indians to either kidnap or kill Kehamy. It was a dismal failure, for the Yaqui chief scattered the renegades life chaff, capturing many of them and seizing boats. He then sent word to Guaymas that unless a specified ransom were promptly forthcoming he would burn the boats and execute the prisoners. The ransom not coming, Kehamy fulfilled his word. Prior to that he had been formally cited to appear at Guaymas, and his reply was:

"It's no further from Guaymas to Yaqui than from Yaqui to Guaymas. The prefect is welcome to come in quest of an explanation."

Some time ago the Mormon elders, casting around for a new El Dorado, fixed covetous eyes on the fruitful land along the Rio Yaqui, and sent trusted delegates to spy out the country. Brigham Young, Jr., proceeded to Guaymas and interviewed the governor with a view to getting official sanction to prospect the Yaqui county. Young soon found that if he was to explore the Rio Yaqui he should do so without Mexican assistance, moral or physical. Young then, it is said, tried his blandishments on the educated chief of the Yaquis, and requested the favor of an interview with that determined diplomatic personage. Kehamy was thoroughly conversant with the Mormon question and tenets of Young's church, and having no admiration for them declined to meet the Mormon apostle. He appointed a delegate however, to meet the Mormon outside Yaqui territory, and the result of the negotiations was that Young concluded that the Rio Yaqui was not just then the most inviting El Dorado to which the advocates of polygamy could fly from the rigors of United States law.

Origin of Some Popular Songs.

"What is the latest popular ballad?"

"Vaniti," replied the music publisher. "Frank Howard, the author of "I'll Await My Love" and 'Only a Pansy Blossom,' wrote it—that is, he wrote as much of it as he did the others I have mentioned. He is a ballad singer with Thatcher, Primrose & West's minstrels, and his income from song royalties is between $300 and $400 a week. No, he is not a remarkable musician. He understands music and has a nice voice. Howard is the son of an Iowa clergyman. Half a dozen years ago Milt Barlow, the minstrel, found young man traveling with a liver-pad pedler in the West. Howard by his singing drew the crowds, and then gave way to his partner who sold the pads. Barlow was struck by the sweetness of Howard's voice, and hired for twenty-five dollars a week to sing in Barlow, Wilson, Primrose & West's minstrel company. His voice and his songs made him popular and he now receives $100 a week salary. The way his songs are composed would astonish many better musicians. Howard will write the words of a song, and with three or four members of the company will proceed to hammer a suitable air out of hotel pianos. They will work hour after hour for days, correcting, changing and culling out bar after bar until they at last agree that an appropriate air has been made. Then it is written out and tried in public. If at all successful Howard sends a copy to his publisher and it is put upon the market. There is a story among minstrels that Howard paid another singer, Harry Talbot, twenty dollars for the words and music of "I'll Await My Love.' If so it was a good piece of judgment on Howard's part, for he has made two or three thousand dollars out of that song alone. —Philadelphia Times.

LITERARY NOTICES.

The Musical Herald, published by Oliver Ditson & Co., Boston, is a "standard" magazine with the profession, by whom it is liberally patronized. The April number contains several very fine new pieces of music, a great deal of musical news, and is altogether bright and interesting.

We have received from The Charles A. Vogeler Company, Baltimore, a copy of their "St. Jacobs Oil Family Calendar and Book of Health and Humor for the Million, 1885," which is a neat publication that will please everybody. It is brimful of good things, and will be a welcome visitor in every family.

Our Little Ones is bright and handsome this month, and will be eagerly sought and scanned by the small people. Its illustrations are all beautiful, while the stories and poetry are not only suited to the juvenile mind, but are interesting and entertaining. Our Little Ones is a beautiful magazine. It is published by the Russell Publishing Co., Boston.

The April number of Cottage Hearth comes fully up to its established high standard of excellence. The table of contents presents many papers of great interest to the general reader, while the fashion, domestic and other departments are full of fresh and valuable information. At the price charged Cottage Hearth is undeniably the cheapest magazine in this country. It is essentially a family monthly, and among intelligent readers there is no one that stands higher. It is published by The Cottage Hearth Co., 11 Bromfield street, Boston.

The April number of St. Nicholas opens with a frontispiece illustration of The Gilded Boy, a true story of a Florentine pageant in 1492. Indeed, the romance of history forms a prominent feature of this number. E. S. Brooks tell the story of the girlhood of Zenobia of Palmyra Coming to more modern days, there is a sketch of Bach which forms the first of a series of brief biographies of the great musicians From Bach to Wagner. Lieut. Schwatka tells of some of the popular games of the Eskimo; while Charles Barnard relates how some little New York savages, that have been caught and tamed, amuse themselves in a fine club-house. Another Ready for Business paper discusses the chances for young men in the field of practical chemistry; and E. P. Roe, in Driven Back to Eden, contributes some sound and timely advice to young tillers of the soil. Among the Law-makers contains an amusing chapter on the pranks of the Senate-pages, and J. T. Trowbridge's serial, His One Fault, goes brightly on. Of the many other features of the number, a few are: a beautiful double-page picture called Easter Morning; The Conscientious Cat; a poem by Celia Thaxter; one by Margaret Johnston, illustrated by Jessie McDermott; and another called Who's Afraid in the Dark? with a full-page picture by R. B. Birch. What will greatly interest many readers is the announcement of the names of the winners in the prize-story contest for girls.

In the April number of The Century Admiral David D. Porter contributes to the War Series a striking paper on The Opening of the Lower Mississippi. While Admiral Farrrgut led the men-of-war past the New Orleans forts, Porter paved the way for and supported the attack with the Mortar-Fleet. At the beginning of his paper Admiral Porter speaks of the New Orleans Campaign as the most important event of the War of the Rebellion, with the exception of the fall of Richmond. Accompanying the article are portraits of Admiral Farragut, Admiral Porter, Captain Theodore Bailey, General Butler who was in command of the land forces, General Lovell, the Confederate commander, and other leading participants in the conflict. Besides the portraits there are more than twenty-five maps, plans and pictures of incidents, most of the latter being after designs by Admiral Porter. George W. Cable, in a brief article, gives a spirited description, from personal observation, of New Orleans before the Capture. Theodore Roosevelt contributes Phases of State Legislation. A reply to Mr. Cable's recent paper on The Freedman's Case in Equity is contributed by Henry W. Grady under the title In Plain Black and White. Another article of political interest, found in theOpen Letters Department, is a discussion of The Solid South, and in Topics of the Time are Practical Politics, Not the American Way, The Attempt to save Niagara, The Difference between a Painting and a Pound of Sugar. A Florentine Mosaic, Mr. Howell's second illustrated paper on Florence, is the opening article in the magazine. Eugene V. Smalley describes his journey From Puget Sound to the Upper Columbia. Dr. Edward Eggleston's Colonists at Home is one of the most popular of his series on life in the Colonies. The fiction of the number includes The Rise of Silas Lapham, The Bostonians, and The Meditations of Mr. Archie Kittrell. The poetry of the number is by Mrs. Helen Jackson (H. H.), Mrs. Louise Chandler Moulton, Anne R. Aldrich, and C. H. Crandall; and in Bric-a-brac, by Frank D. Sherman, Miss Alice Trumbull Learned, Margaret Vandegrift, and others.

A Sad Death.

In Philadelphia recently at a corner's inquest over the body of a child the jury returned a verdict that death was caused by the administration of a patent cough syrup, containg morphia. Dr Sam'l K. Cox, of Washington, states that not one cough medicine in ten is free from this objecion. After careful analyses and practical tests he endorses Red Star Cough Cure as being purely vegetable, absolutely free from opiates poisons and narcotice. He regards it as a most happy and valuable discovery.

The Root of the Evil.

To thoroughly cure scrofula it is necesary to strike directly at the root of the evil. This is exactly what Hood's Sarsaparilla does by acting upon the blood, thoroughly cleansing it of all impurities, and leaving not even a taint of scrofula in the vital fluid. Thousands who have been cured of scrofula by Hood's Sarsaparilla, testify to its wonderful blood-purifying qualities. Sold by all druggists.

Timely Topics.

An exchange correctly says "that no town can live and prosper and grow that does not contain live business men who advertise their goods. Show us a town that is without this class of men, and we will show you a town where trade is dull, where the people complain of hard times, and where enterprise is almost entirely wanting."

An agriculturist at Oakland, Cal., is making a determined effort to introduce the cultivation of tea in that State, He has over 2,000 tea plants in a very thriving condition, and when they arrive at the age of four years he will obtain Japanese labor and pick and cure. He has also a number of camphor trees that are growing well.

In this country the losses by the burning of buildings and their contained property are about one hundred millions of dollars per annum, and the losses of lumber by the burning of forests are estimated at three hundred millions yearly; in all, four hundred millions of dollars. Could these enormous losses be stopped, the country would soon grow very rich.

By means of a simple and conveniently worked device of coiled spring, an English inventor has succeeded in dispensing with the need of driving sewing machines by hand or foot; a few turns of a handle winds up sufficient power to keep a machine going at full speed over an hour. It is completely under control as to the rate of stitching and stopping, and can be applied to any existing machine at moderate cost.

John B. Gough, in a recent interview, expressed the opinion that of all temperance societies the Woman's Christian Union is doing more good work than any of the others. There is less drinking and drunkenness now than there has ever been, and public sentiment is moved in favor of prohibition. The work in this country, however, is not to be compared to the work in England. All over the United Kingdom the temperance workers are making rapid strides, and there are 9,000,000 total abstainers there.

Dr. Pehl, of St. Petersburg, claims to have made the important discovery that motion destroys the impurities of water. At a test when water was brought into rapid motion for an hour by means of a centrifugal machine the number of developing germ was reduced by ninety per cent. Further experiments will show if this destruction of germs is due to the motion of the mass of water or to molecular motion. If this discovery of Dr. Pehl be confirmed, it will become possible to destroy bacteria and render water comparatively pure simply by passing it through a centrifugal machine.

A scientific naturalist, who has made the subject a matter of careful investigation, says: "If a man ate as much in proportion to his size as a spider, a man weighing 150 pounds would require the whole of fat steer for breakfast, the dose repeated with the addition of a half dozen well-fattened sheep for dinner, and two bullocks, eight sheep and four hogs for supper, and then as a lunch, before going to his club banquet, he would indulge in about four barrels of fresh fish. "When that point of development is reached," suggests the Graphic, "it is probable that boarding houses will go out of style."

An old proverb says "A little learning is a dangerous thing." But many things indicate that too much learning is quite as dangerous as too little. Every day the scientists are discovering disease and death lurking in the commonest articles of our daily use and surroundings. Poison stares at us from our wall paper; malaria is hidden in our carpets and mattresses; tea and coffee are the deadliest of drugs, and, in short, nothing is safe of all the articles of food we eat or drink. Perhaps in many of these cases the other proverb is better—"Where ignorance is bliss," etc.

It is a question which has often been asked, without bringing forth any satisfactory answer, "Why is the king of the Belgians so interested in Africa?" "What is the secret of this interest?" It is said that some such question was recently put to the king himself. His answer was, "You know that God took away from me my son, my only son, and then laid Africa on my heart. I am not spending the revenue of Belgium upon it, but my own private resources: and I have made arrangements that when I die this civilizing and evangelizing work in Africa shall not be discontinued." It is said that the king is spending at the rate of $800,000 a year on Africa out of his private purse.

For the Boys.

The way in which a boy uses his leisure often determines what sort of a man he will be. The Wide Awake gives the following incident in proof of the statement:

Two men stood at the same table in a large factory in Philadelphia, working at the same trade. Having an hour for their nooning every day each undertook to use it in accomplishing a definite purpose; each persevered for about the same number of months, and each won success at last. One of these two mechanics used his daily leisure hour in working out the invention of a machine for sawing a block of wood into almost any desired shape. When his invention was complete, he sold the patent for a fortune, changed his workman's apron for a broad-cloth suit, and moved out of a tenement house into a brown stone mansion. The other man—what did he do? Well, he spent an hour each day during most of a year in the very difficult undertaking of teaching a little dog to stand on his hind feet and dance a jig, while he played the tune. At last accounts he was working 10 hours a day at the same trade and at his old wages, and finding fault with the fate that made his fellow-workman rich while leaving him poor. Leisure minutes may bring golden grain to mind as well as purse, if one harvests wheat instead of chaff.

Antiquity of Roller Skating.

Roller Skating rinks are multiplying so fast that it is almost impossible to keep track of the entertainments which take place at these popular places of amusement. The origin of roller skating dates many years back, having been introduced at Paris in the year 1819 by M. Dumas, at the Porte St. Martin theatre, where a pas de deux was executed on roller skates. No attempt was made at that time to popularize the new invention. In the year 1829 the ballet in the opera of "Le Prophete," by Meyerbeer, were mounted on wheels or roller skates.

In the celebrated skating scene in "Le Prophete," to which the composer has written such characteristic music peasants, soldiers and sailors, in fact all classes of the population of Holland appear on the ice of the stage river and skate away to their destination. Unfortunately some of the skaters found it sooner than they had expected by bringing up in one of the boxes on a level with the stage. The skates of that period were very clumsy as compared with those now in use. The pivot principle had not at that time been adopted, and the skaters and dancers found it difficult to either stop themselves or turn without slackening their speed. In France and Brussels large rinks were opened with considerable success over fifty years ago.

EXZEMA OR SALT RHEUM.

Another Clear and Positive Recovery—An Elderly Lady's Letter.

Among the numerous letters received by Dr. Kennedy testifying to notable Salt Rheum cures, the following will be found of interest to our readers, who may accept our assurance of its perfect authenticity and truthfulness:

Worcester, Mass., March 23, 1884.

Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.

Dear Sir: Until recently I have been for three years a sufferer from Salt Rheum. It followed upon an attack ot Erysipelas, for which I was for a long time under medical treatment. I placed myself again in the hands of the physicians who did, I have no doubt, all that could be done. One thing is sure, however, I was none the better for all the medicine they gave me. The painful and unsightly disease made continual progress, until I began to fear I should never get rid of it.

By means of one of those accidents that often result in so much blessing I had my attention called to your FAVORITE REMEDY, which I was told would surely do me good. I used it, and within a much shorter time than I would have believed possible, I received a permanent cure. I am now perfectly free from Salt Rheum. What a comfort this is, and how it places your wonderful medicine in my opinion, you may guess at, but never know. I keep it now constantly in the house as a family medicine.

Yours truly, MRS. DINAH PHAIR.

Mrs. Phair sometime since, when on a visit to Kansas, found a case of Salt Rheum, could not get FAVORITE REMEDY, sent to New York City for it, and cured the case.

WILBOR'S COMPOUND OF PURE COD LIVER OIL AND LIME.

Wilbor's Compound of Pure Cod-Liver Oil and Lime. The advantage of compound over the plain Oil is, that the nauseating taste of the Oil is entirely removed, and the whole rendered entirely palatable. The offensive taste of the Oil has long acted as a great objection to its use; but in this form the trouble is entirely obviated. A host of certificates might be given here to testify to the excellence and success of "Wilbor's Cod-Liver Oil and Lime;" but the fact that it is regularly prescribed by the medical faculty is sufficient. For sale by A. B. Wilbor, Chemist, Boston, and by all druggists.

EVERY-DAY PHILOSOPHY.

When weariness with life my spirit fills,
When deep disgust consumes me with my lot,
I draw some store of comfort from the ills
I haven't got.

To find that fortune of your coming flies,
To be bankrupt in health, in fame, in purse,
Is bad enough, but I philosophize,
It might be worse.

Incessantly we make a great ado,
The mouth of Misery is wide agape;
But happier we I fancy, if we know
What we escape.

The common woes of life are bad enough,
Misfortunes fall as easy as the dew,
And still for every morning steak that's tough
There might be two.

This one is sick; his wayward fate cries out
Against the leech, the calomel, the bed;
Oh, inconsiderate person, cease to pout—
You might be dead!

And this one hath the mitten; he has wooed
Vainly, alack! his wooing it has sped;
Well—even in this there's comfort, rightly view'd—
He might be wed—

And here is one who whines; his all is swept Away in panic; he has had to "fail."
He should, I think, be cheerful, that he's kept Safe out of jail.

But late I lost a twenty-dollar bill—
And did I wring my hands that I had blundered?
Not I, indeed!—I'm very thankful still
'Twas not a hundred.

Sooth, should I e'er capsize when walks are bad,
And my good clavicle invole in wreck,
Serenely I should say, "How very glad It's not my neck!"

Oh, trust me—better not make ado
At the few miseries of our common lot;
There's millions of 'em—if we only knew—
We haven't got.

SANDY'S DIAMOND.

"Now, Sandy, it's your turn; why don't you read? have you lost the place?"

Sandy straightened the tails of his ragged coat with an air conscious virtue; he was not given to losing his place, whatever the others might be. "Now, Judas said this, not because he cared for the poor, but because he was a thief, and had the bag," he read out in a shrill treble. "It was an awful pity they let him keep the bag, then,', he added by way of comment.

"Maybe they'd no ken he was a thief," suggested his neighbor, who was Sandy's chief friend and ally; "and maybe you wad have helped yoursel' a bit now and again, Sandy, if you'd had as good a chance."

"Speak for yoursel', Sam Knox," was Sandy's hasty retort. "I'm no thief, at any rate."

"Boys, attend to the lesson," interrupted the teacher, and the debate had perforce to be postponed for the present.

Sandy marched home after school swelling with indignant pride, utterly declining Sam's usual escort. The two were friends more from force of circumstances than natural affinity. Both earned a scanty income in London, carrying parcels and messages from the railway to the different quays; but though they held the same profession, and were comrades to a certain extent, Sandy by no means considered Sam in the light of an equal; his clothes were in many degrees more ragged, his shoes a thing of the past, or future, and, in point of family connections—well, the could be no comparison between Sam's drunken father and his own thrifty, hard-working mother. Decidedly Sam must be made to understand that he was not to disparage his superiors in public with impunity.

The coolness lasted some days, and might have lasted much longer, but for a startling adventure that befell Sandy. Trudging round the edge of the dock at dusk one evening, with a huge package for a coasting steamer, his foot struck against something—something that glittered in the dim light. "Just a bit of glass," he said to himself, turning it over with the toe of his shoe; and then he dropped his burden with a crash, and swooped down upon "his find."

It was a ring, dull and tarnished with mud, but neither crushed nor broken, and the "bit of glass" was the stone. It gleamed out like the windows on the opposite shore at sunset. In his younger days, before he became such a practical person, he had firmly believed that Paradise lay over there; he knew better now, but for a moment, as it lay on his palm, he almost fancied it must have come from that region.

Only for a moment; than Sandy was his cations little self again. He rolled it up carefully with the private store of halfpence that even his mother, worthy woman, did not know of, shouldered his package and delivered it at the tiny booking office at the end of the quay, sturdily argued out the question of an additional penny on account of its size with the clerk, and got it, and then he betook himself to a solitary corner of the dock wall and sat down behind a sugar cask to consider matters.

First and foremost, should he tell his mother? He rather thought not. She might insist upon delivering up to the authorities, and taking the chance of a possible reward; and Sandy had an exceedingly uncomfortable conviction that that was just what he ought to do. Yet he remembered a boy who found a pocketbook on the gangway, and the owner only gave him a shilling for it; and another who found a telescope and got nothing. Sandy felt that fortune lay within his grasp, and that if he had to barter it away for one shilling, or even five, it would be paying too dearly for principles.

He had heard of rings being worth hundreds of pounds, and if this was worth but one—or even, to be safer still, fifty. The tide rippled in below his feet unheeded, the long line of gas-lamps twinkled like yellow stars in the black, restless river, the keen wind whistled through the rigging behind; Sandy saw and felt nothing, wrapped in blissful visions of that modest fifty.

For two whole days he carried the secret alone, then his responsibility became too heavy, and tacitly ignoring past differences, he waited on the quay one dinner-hour for Sam Knox, binding him over to strict secrecy, though on that head he had little fear, for Sam, whatever his failings might be, had never been known to do a shabby thing to a friend.

"Sam, I've got something to tell you; I've had a find."

"One bawbee or twa?" queried Sam, indifferently.

"Just wait till you get a sight of it! It's worth more bawbees than you ever saw all your days."

"So you're not going to give it up to the authorities?" Sam asked, curiously, when he had heard the story.

"And maybe get nothing at all, like Jem McCullock," answered Sandy, shortly. "You'd no do that yoursel', Sam Knox."

"No, I'd not," agreed Sam, frankly; "but you've always professed such a lot more."

A dull red flush crept up to Sandy's brow. He had not counted upon Sam being sharp enough to view the case in that light.

"Anyhow, let us have a look at it," went on Sam, magnanimously pursuing that point no further.

Behind the sugar-cask, after infinite precautions, the treasure was produced for inspection.

"How much do you think I'll get for it?" he asked, deferring to Sam's judgment for once. He was much older, and might reasonably be expected to have some little experience in valuables—other peoples, if not his own.

"I mind of hearing a man say once, that he gave £20 for one not near as big as that; but you'll not get as much, for who's going to believe you didn't steal it?"

"Steal it!" echoed Sandy, in angry dismay.

"Aye, but you've got to make folks believe your story, and who are you going to get to buy it?"

"I thought you might ken of some place," faltered Sandy, rather crestfallen.

"Well, I ken of one twa. I'll look out and tell ye in the morn."

And then the conference broke up, and the two went back to their parcels.

Sam ponded the matter over as he lounged about the docks that day. Steady work was not his strong point, and the diamond had taken powerful hold of his imagination. He did wish with all his heart it had been his luck instead of Sandy's to have found it; he felt he could have made far better use of it.

"If there was any hope of his sharing it with a fellow, it would be different, but he'll just keep every penny to himsel'. Serve him just right if he went and lost it again."

Over and over that reflecion crept up. Sandy had already strayed from the right path for the sake of the diamond. Sam was the next to fall a victim to its fascination.

He thought of it hour after hour, till it seemed as if he must have it by fair means or foul, and he doubted fair means would avail little with a lad like Sandy.

Saturdays were busy days on the quays, and the next day both Sam and Sandy were hurrying backward and forward till after dark. It was a gusty, stormy night, and as Sandy went down one of the gangways on his last journey the steamer gave a sudden lurch that sent him and his packages flying across the deck; worse still, out rolled the contents of his pockets, and before Sandy had recovered his feet and his scattered senses the scrap of paper shrouding the precious ring was lodged inside Sam's waistcoat. He happened to have been standing just under the gangway, and lost no time in availing himself of the unlooked-for chance.

It was all the work of a minute. Sandy gathered up his property and went back on shore without observing his friend. Sam fairly glowing with satisfaction at the beautiful way things had arranged themselves, quietly retired to the dock wall to congratulate himself at leisure. No more heavy packages to drag up and down those steep bridges, no more supperless nights and breakfastless mornings. Sandy had built no taller castles round that diamond than he was building now.

"Sam, Sam!" broke in a pitiful voice, "I've been looking everywhere for you. I've lost my diamond."

"You've what?" cried Sam, with an incredulous stare that reflected credit on his powers of dissimulation.

"Lost it—in that boat, and she's away now, and I'll never, never get it back. It's hard."

Sandy put his head down on the iron rail, and groaned aloud in bitter disappointment.

Sam looked on in silence: he was naturally a hard-hearted lad, and for a minute the impulse was strong to give the ring back; the feel of his empty pockets brought back more prudential considerations.

"After all, it's only what he did himself," he argued; "he found it and kept it, and that's what I'm doing."

He made one or two ineffectual attempts to console poor, miserable Sandy, and got himself away as speedily as practicable into a back street, where dwell a certain German who kept a kind of money-lending and general exchange and barter establishment for the benefit of sailors and emigrants Saturday night was far advanced, and if he, Sam, meant to reap any immediate benefit from his possession, it was necessary to lose no time.

He slipped softly in and addressed himself to the proprietor.

"I picked up something in the dock to-day, and I wad like to ken the worth of it gin I cared to part with it."

"What is it?" demanded the man, briefly.

"It's a ring—a diamond one,' answered Sam, speaking under his breath.

"Where is it?"

Sam slowly unfolded the wrappers, and laid it, with a sort of gasp, in the man's dingy palm. How it glittered in the gaslight! Sam watched it with eager eyes. "A nice thing to have gone and given that away again," he said to himself.

The German looked at the treasure under the gas-jet for a moment, and touched it with his tongue; then he threw it down on the counter with a sort of laugh.

"Diamonds, indeed! A bit of glass!"

"It's no!" ejaculated Sam with dry ligs. "You're cheating!"

The man knocked it smartly against the iron scales. Alas! the unfortunate diamond vanished away into dusty powder.

"But the ring—that's gold!" cried Sam in despair. It was the one last forlorn hope.

"Take it away; no one would give you a sixpence for it."

Sam picked it up without a word. When he got outside he flung it into the nearest gutter. Was it for this he had cheated Sandy, and made himself afraid to meet him—for this? Why couldn't he have left him to find out the miserable cheat for himself? It was the very first time he had ever played a friend a shabby trick, and in wrath and bitterness of spirit Sam registered a solemn resolution that it should be the last.

The sight of Sandy's woe-begone countenance when they met at the school next morning also helped to strengthen it. Sam realized, with a sinking heart, that he would never be able to explain to him how little cause for regret he really had. For weeks and months—even years—he might have to listen to the lamentations over that unparalleled loss.

They had the conclusion of the Judas tragedy that morning. The two lads wandered round the quay afterward almost in silence, each privately repenting after his own fashion.

"If I had taken that diamond to the station," soberly remarked Sandy breaking into a long pause, "I might—I might have got three or four pounds for it, instead of just nothing. It served me right. I'm thinking maybe there was some allowance to be made for Judas. After all, riches are an awful snare—nobody knows till they get them."

"They are," ejaculated Sam, with great fervor. "There's no depending on them, and I'm thinking we'll be just as well without any."

"Ah, but you never had a diamond," retorted Sandy, with a sudden burst of sorrow for his lost treasure.

"No, I never had," was Sam's truthful answer.

Progress in Forrestry.

Tree-planting is becoming almost universal on the great prairies of Minnesota, Dakota, Kansas and Nebraska, where it once was believed no tree would grow. Many causes have contributed to this remarkable result, prominent among them being the timber-culture act passed by congress ten years ago, amended in 1874 and again in 1878. Already 89,246 entries have been made, the area covered by them being 13,677,146 acres. Nearly one-fifth of this vast area was "entered" in 1882, which shows the growing influence of the princely premiums offered by congress and by many of the Western states to encourage tree planting.

The timber act may need further amendment to prevent frauds, but recent inquiries of those who have had the largest experience and observation in Minnesota, Dakota, Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas convince me that its benefits have been so manifest as strongly to commend it to the people in those states. Many settlers have planted much more than the required ten acres in their 160 acres, or "quarter section." Said a Nebraskan: "We have thousands of trees, thirty to forty feet in height and eight or nine inches in diameter, grown from seedlings or cuttings planted less than ten years ago. The fuel problem is settled for many farmers. The trees and land are already worth three times their cost."—[The Century.

ANNA MARIA'S HOUSEKEEPING. By Mrs. S. D. Power. Boston: D. Lothrop & Co. Price $1.00. If we were asked to recommend any one single book to a young housekeeper which should serve as a domestic guide, counsellor and friend, we should unhesitatingly name Anna Maria's Housekeeping. So far as our knowledge extends, there is no other book which so exactly and thoroughly fulfils the needs implied in those titles. It is no mere collection of receipts, but a complete and common-sense treatise on the whole science of housekeeping, tersely and clearly written, with a flavor of experience about it that makes one accept it as authorative. It is a staff upon which the young housekeeper may confidently lean, and by the aid of which she may overcome obstacles which without it would seem insurmountable. Mrs. Power does not believe in a house keeping itself. It requires continual care and oversight, and a clear knowledge of what is to be done. She believes, too, that a house can be well kept as easily as badly kept, and that a bright, clean, well-ordered home has a deal to do with molding the temper and even character of its members. "It is no small thing," she says, "to stand at the head of affairs, and be the motive power on which depend the welfare and credit, the health, temper and spirit of the whole family. When in midlife you come to find how essential the comfort of a well-kept home is to the bodily strength and good conditions, to a sound mind and spirit, and useful days, you will reverence the good housekeeper as I do, above poet or artist, beauty or genius." In the opening chapter of the book the author instructs Anna Maria in the art of "How to Make Homework Easier." In the succeeding chapters she takes up the various kinds of work there is to be done about the house, and describes the easiest methods of doing it. "No attitudinizing," she remarks, "no fine lady affectations over the griddles and saucepans; insted, cultivate the fine character which acts up to the need of the hour swiftly, promptly, but with quiet and certainty." Her definition of "good food" is to the point. "It is not," she says, "rich food, nor even the tolerable fare which is just undercooked and flavorless enough to tax digestion more than it ought. It is the best of everything cooked in the nicest possible way, and with pleasant variety." Passing from the kitchen the care of the different rooms of the house is taken up—the chambers, the sittingroom and the storeroom; instructions are given for making "blue Monday" less blue; the arts of starching and ironing are discussed; and a chapter is given to the mending and darning basket. Other portions of the book are devoted to "Company Davis," "Shopping," "Sickness in the House," "Making the best of Thing," and "Helps that are Helps," the servant-girl question forming the subject of the closing chapter. The volume is very handsomely brought out, but even were it not, it would be worth its weight in gold to the young and inexperienced housekeeper.

Her Soul's Yearnings.

"Aunt Polly," said a poetic young lady, who was visiting the country.

"What is it, child?"

"Do you never feel as though you wanted to leave the milk and butter ——?"

"If I did, child, it would be sure to spile."

"But your mind; how can you keep it chained to these common things?"

"Poor child! Why, bless you, my butter ain't common. It allus brings an extra price in market, and is spoke for 'way ahead."

"But does your soul never yearn for the beautiful, Aunt Polly?"

"No, child; I never yearn for nothin' but baked partaters. But I do hanker for them dreadful sometimes, when they're skeerce an' high."—Chicago Ledger.

Whether life would be worth living without the lobster, is a question that the late Sam Ward would doubtless have answered in the negative, though fortunately that great gastronome was not put to the crucial test. But it is one which the rising generation will in in all probability be called upon to confront. The succulent and toothsome crustacean is growing small by degrees, and so "beautifully less" that he will soon cease to exist except as a curiosity. Gather ye rosebuds—we mean lobster salads awhile ye may!—Boston Courier.

Budd's Very Smart Boy.

In the flush stock times, when W. C. Budd was the idol of the Stock Board and many who are now satisfied with beer and sandwiches could not endure anything but champagne, he had a boy in his office who made a little turn in speculation and he determined to go on a little tour of the State. He got a holiday and started. At last he reached Los Angeles and there he met a couple of card speculators, who took the chances, with more or less certainty, at poker. Two days after this meeting Budd received a telegram:

"W. C. Budd, San Francisco: Please send me $200 to pay my debts and expenses back."

Mr. Budd did not answer. The young gentleman evidently proceeded to tackle the poker game again, and next day Budd received another telegram:

"W. C. Budd, San Francisco: Please send me $300 to pay my debts and expenses back."

Still Mr. Budd did not reply, and next day came this:

"Wayman C. Budd, San Francisco: Send me $400."

Budd was getting annoyed. So was the clerk apparently, for he telegraphed again:

"Budd, San Francisco: Send me $500."

Mr. Budd took the money and went and telegraphed it to Los Angeles.

"Why did you do it!" said a friend.

"I was afraid he'd bust me if I didn't stop him."—San Francisco Chronicle.

A True Gentleman.

"I beg your pardon!" and with a smile and a touch of his hat, Harry Edmond handed to an old man, against whom he had accidently stumbled, the cane which he had knocked from his hand. "I hope I did not hurt you? We were playing too roughly."

"Not a bit," said the old man. "Boys will be boys, and it's best they should be. You didn't hurt me."

"I'm glad to hear it," and lifting his hat again, Harry turned to join the playmates with whom he had been frolicking at the time of the accident.

"What do you raise your hat to that old fellow for?" asked his companion, Charlie Gray. "He is only old Giles, the huckster."

"That makes no difference," said Harry. "The question is not whether he is a gentleman, but whether I am one; and no true gentleman will be less polite to a man because he wears a shabby coat or hawks vegetables through the streets instead of sitting in a counting house."

He was born here, and considerin' that he was a native and favorite son and so on, we folks got together and presented him with a fine piece of park land on condition that he build his country residence out here, and he has accepted."

"But he will bring the workmen and materials from the city, and will doubtless buy all his provisions there, too. What good will that do you?"

"Good Jehosaphat! Stranger. We'll tax him enough to pay all the expenses of the towship."

THE TOWN ELECTION.

The result of the Woburn election of town officers last Monday was a complete triumph for the friends and advocates of good order and clean municipal government. The citizens' movement was a success, their entire School Board, seven out of the nine Selectmen, Treasurer and Collector, and other officers being elected by good majorities. The ring was badly shattered and will be heard of no more probably. Its king-pin was defeated by large figures, and those who stuck their faith to his sleeves were nearly all handsomely laid out. The combination is broken and good care will be taken in the future that another one shall not be formed.

To the hard work before election and solid vote of the ladies was due the choice of an excellent School Board. They cast about 275 ballots, and the citizens' candidates were elected by 200 majority, showing that without the vote of the women the ring ticket would have prevailed. They labored earnestly and with an eye single to the good of our public schools. Great credit is due the ladies for the splendid job they carried so successfully through last Monday. The Board which their votes contributed so materially to elect is an able one. In its hands the interests of our schools will be perfectly safe. By its election a great danger to them has been averted.

The new Board of Selectmen is a great improvement on its predecessor. It is a good Board. The clean men and largest taxpayers are perfectly satisfied with it. The affairs of the town will be well managed this year, and it is believed the Board will, under "no license" rule which was voted last Monday, see to it that the laws respecting rumselling are executed as far as they can be.

The result of the vote on license was a surprise to almost every body. The negative was carried by curious means. A large number of men who take their tod regularly peddled "No" all of Monday, and voted it. Scores of the same class voted who did not peddle it. It was rather an unusual spectacle, the reasons for which are easily understood. But by whomsoever accomplished it has brought the regular rumsellers down from their high horses, taken the starch out of them, and made them supple.

The whole election was queer. It was really nothing more or less than a Democratic family quarrel, of which the better element took advantage and was greatly benefitted. The trouble among them did not end with the close of the polls on Monday evening. It will grow more fierce with age and the town will reap benefits therefrom.

We feel very nicely over the election. The JOURNAL supported the citizens' movement, and it won: it urged the necessity of a change in the membership of the School Board, and it was made: it advocated "no license," and it prevailed: it told the voters of defeat Mr. Salmon, and he was defeated: and so on to the end of the chapter. Why shouldn't we feel pretty well?

☞ The Legislature ought to provide means for distributing the laws of each session among the people immediately after adjournment. Ignorance of the law is no excuse for its violation, so the courts hold, and yet how are the people to know what the law is unless they are furnished it? In Maine nearly every citizen has the public acts sent him by the public printer through the newspapers of the State within two weeks after the adjournment of the Legislature. They don't do it that way here.

☞ It must cost the engineers of the Storm King Bridge scheme for robbing the State a heap of money for the editorial space required to boom it. The editorials themselves, we take it, are all composed in a certain room in Boston, and the space they occupy paid for according to circulation. The project must be regarded as a "fat take" else so much money would not be put out for advertising it.

☞ The Palmer Journal, which always looks as though it had just been taken out of the bandbox, entered on its thirty-sixth year last week with a renewed vigor, increased subscription list, and a pocketful of "rocks." And long may it flourish.

— The minstrel show by Whitmore & Clark's company gave very good satisfaction last Saturday evening. It is a bang-up good combination, and popular everywhere.

— The Woburn Coal Company are prepared to fill all orders for the different kinds of coal used at bottom prices. Mr. E. D. Newton is agent for the company.

— The Mendelssohn Club will give their grand concert, for which they have been rehearsing for several weeks, on next Thursday evening. For particulars see card in this paper.

— Mr. E. D. Newton, agent for the Woburn Coal Company, would respectfully inform the public that he has constantly on hand all kinds of coal, which he is selling cheap.

— Rev. Fr. Murphy worked hard for his School Board ticket last Monday, but the women were too strong and he was defeated. He acepts the verdict manfully, and will "try, try again" next year.

— Messrs. Goodrich & Nichols, ice dealers, have a card in this paper, to which attention is called. They sell ice at fair prices, give good weight, deliver promptly, and are square men every way.

— Mr. George Cooke, Secretary of the Winchester Historical and Geneological Society, will please accept our thanks for a copy of the second issue of the Winchester Record. It is a very valuable number.

— Our Representative, Mr. Crane, voted in favor of the weekly payment bill last Tuesday, which was lost. Mr. Crane understands on which side his bread is buttered—he wants the votes of the workingmen.

— There was another very fine rainstorm on Tuesday night. Summer is almost here, although there are some snow drifts up north of us that it will have to wade through before the end of its journey is reached.

— Rev. Mr. Fisk, pastor of the M. E. Church, is attending the New England Conferance at Springfield this week. As his Church have unanimously asked for his retention here another year, and as he is not averse to remaining, it is probable that he will be reassigned to Woburn.

— To Dr. Bartlett, Lincoln Emerson, S. Franksford Trull and Dr. Lang, all Democrats, is due the major part of the glory for the defeat of the ring. Of course they were helped by a good deal of vigorous lifting at the wheels by Republicans.

— Last Fast Day morning the saw-mill of John R. Carter & Co. at Salem, N. H., was totally destroyed by fire. It was one of the best portable mills in the State and was doing a large business when it burned. The mill cost $3,500, and there was no insurance on it. It was quite a loss for neighbor Carter.

— Patrick O'Toole was at Lyceum Hall last Friday night, and Superintendent Cummings charged him with an assault. He was locked up by Waters and Lynch, and Saturday morning was in Court, where, after a long examination he was found guilty and fined $5.00 and costs.

— Three cheers and a tiger for the women folks of Woburn. Their first gun at the ballot-box was a settler on rings in school affairs. To them belongs the credit of electing a good and efficient School Board; they did it up in grand style; let us all throw our hats and hurrah for the women folks.

— A telegram from our friend Warren Teel, dated April, informs us that he is to hold his old post of deputy postmaster at Davenport, Iowa, under the new incumbent. At least that is the way we construe his message. We are real glad of it for Warren is a good one, or else everybody lies.

— We are informed that Miss Clara M. Fox has accepted a position as teacher in Auburndale, and is especially favored, the building being new and in a delightful locality. We wish her her usual success and congratulate the people of that village in being able to secure so earnest a teacher.

— It seems that the advice we gave to the labor party last week about defeating a certain prominent Democrat and ring-master "struck ile," for he was badly left at the polls, and the workingmen did it. Which reminds us to say that the workingmen will always find a good friend and safe counsellor in the JOURNAL.

— Miss Marion T. Hosmer, for several years an esteemed teacher in the Woburn schools, and now holding an honorable position in the Perkins Institution, Boston, cast the first woman's ballot for School Board here last Monday, and put it where it would do the most good. It seemed to be a case of "poetic justice."

— The funeral services of the late Nathan Wyman, Esq., were held in Unitarian church at 3 o'clock on Sunday afternoon the religious exercises being conducted by the late pastor of the church, Rev. George H. Young, and the presant pastor, Rev. H. A. Westall. There was a large attendance of those who were friends and neighbors of the diseased in his lifetime.

— Rev. Mr. Anderson and Rev. Mr. Fisk both preached Easter and temperance sermons last Sunday. Unknown to each other they selected the same text: Mark 16:3: "Who shall roll us away the stone?" How appropriate that text for an Easter temperance sermon. Then both at the Town meeting did the best they could to "Roll away the stone," and succeded pretty well too.

— Charles J. Taylor, an old soldier, very much addicted to the cup, was in town Tuesday evening with a chum, begging at the stores. The officers had their suspicion that all was not right, and took Taylor in for safe keeping, while his chum fled. Later the officers found that Taylor had obtained goods of Dr. W. W. Hill by false pretense, and was consequently fined $10 and costs. He went to Cambridge.

— The following officers of Perseverance Division, S. of T., were installed at their hall last Tuesday evening: W. P., George E. Flanders; W. A., Mrs. Abbie Chase; R. S., Mrs. E. Howard; A. R. S., Mrs. E. Redford; F. S., A. Crowell; Treasurer, Mr. Ellis; Chaplain, Mrs. O. E. Dorr; Conductor, Mrs. J. R. Flanders; A. C., Miss Annie Dinsmore; I. S., Miss Belle DeLoria; O. S., C. W. Dorr; P. W. P., D. F. Darrach.

— Last Tuesday evening the First Unitarian Society elected the following officers for the ensuing year:—Clerk, J. W. Johnson; Treasurer, A. S. Wood; Parish Committee, J. W. Hammond, John P. Crane, Lucy E. B. Converse and Martha W. Winn; Treasurer of Permanent Fund, J. W. Hammond; Auditor, R. J. W. Phinney; Collector, F. B. Leeds; Advisory Music Committee, Parker L. Converse, Lucy J. Converse, and Henry M. Aldrich.

— John Boyle O'Reily will give a lecture on the "Illustrous Irishmen of One Century," at Lyceum Hall, Winchester, at 7.45 o'clock, Tuesday evening, April 14, for the benefit of The Winchester Club. Tickets may be had at Moore & Morris's grocery store and Fred. Leed's drug store in Woburn, and at G. P. Brown's drug store in Winchester. Taylor's barge will leave foot of Broad street, Woburn, at 7.30 o'clock, and return at close of the lecture.

— Easter services last Sunday were not of a very pronounced character here. The pastors preached sermons appropriate to the day, and generally the music was selected with reference to it. At the Unitarian church there was a very fine Easter concert which filled the large house of worship with people. It gave great satisfaction. At St. Charles (Catholic) Church there were interesting religious meetings at different hours of the day and evening, and very fine music at each service.

— Dea. F. K. Cragin's 80th birthday fell on Easter Sunday, and was properly observed. A pleasant family party gathered at his residence, 27 Pleasant street, in the evening, for which Mr. and Mrs. Cole provided very nice refreshments. A great variety of beautiful flowers sat about the rooms, many of which were sent by Mr. and Mrs. Edward D. Hayden, and others by kind friends. Dea. Cragin enjoyed the modest celebration of his birthday anniversary by the family very much, and all spent a pleasant evening.

— A row on Flagg street, Wednesday afternoon, resulted in the wounding of one woman and the sudden death of an innocent looker-on. The facts are as follows: As Mrs. Flaherty was in search of her child she became involved in a dispute with a Mrs. Hearne. Becoming exasperated at the language used toward her, Mrs. Hearne picked up a stone and dealt Mrs. Flaherty a blow on the head, which knocked her senseless. She was taken into a neighboring house and cared for. In a house near by was a Miss Connolly, 25 years old, who had been sick for some time with consumption. Hearing the disturbance, she got out of her bed, and, looking out of the window, saw the Flaherty woman covered with blood. The sight gave her such a shock that she fell to the floor and expired.

— It is not an every year occurrence to see what was witnessed a few days ago at Woburn; robins in the trees and on the shore were singing merrily, while men were cutting ice on one of the ponds with all the aids used in a January harvest. A pretty good illustration of "Winter lingering in the lap of spring."—Boston Home Journal.—The robins and trees and shore and singing merrily are all right enough, but the cutting ice part of it is a sample of what a city paper is liable to perform when it goes to work with a will and gives imagination the bit.

— Politically Woburn redeemed herself last Monday, and now we don't want to be sneered at by outside parties any longer. When bad rum and poor Democracy were on top in town we hadn't the spirit to repel sneers but stood up and took them like a man: but now that the tables are turned and the former dominent elements are underneath, fellow-craftsmen beyond our boundaries and neighboring townspeople had better be very careful what they say about Woburn. We are as good as the best of them and something to spare.

— The Mendelssohn Club give their Annual Concert, April 16, and it is to be hoped they will have a full house. They will have the assistance of Miss Lillian Chandler, the violinist of Boston. It is hardly necessary to speak of Miss Chandler's reputation as a violinist, for it is well known through the musical world that she stands very high in her art. Miss Anna Coffin, the Reader, travels with the De Sera Concert Company, and this speaks more for her than personal critisims. The Club will perform a very interesting programme. By urgent request they will give a few War Songs for male voices.—X.

— Mr. Frank J. Culburt is canvassing Woburn for the sale of "The Gem Water Filter," and is meeting with good success. Although we have the best water in the world it is not entirely free from impurities, and to make it absolutely pure as it comes from the faucet the "Gem" is away ahead of any filter ever invented. It is a simple contrivance but does its work thoroughly. Its structure has a sound scientific basis and when the water has run through it no foreign substances are discoverable even by the strongest instruments. The "Gem" can be readily fitted to any faucet; it comes cheap; and water drinkers will find it a desideratum.

— The following officers of No Surrender Lodge, No. 116, Woburn, were duly installed on Thursday evening, March 12: W. M., Andrew W. Wray; W. D. M., Andrew Morrow; Treas., Alex Bustard; Sec'y, James Given; Chaplain, Fred Given; C., William Wray; A. C., Josiah Stevenson; I. T., W. J. Stevenson; Standing Committee, Edward Montgomery, Moses Given, James Love, John Graham George Morrow; Trustees, James Given, James Love, James Dobbins; Sick Committee, James Given, Andrew McElhany, Edward Montgomery; Auditing Committee, Moses Given, Josiah Stevenson, Andrew F. Ray.

—The final meeting of the 1884-5 Board of Selectmen was held on last Saturday afternoon. It was a pleasant reunion so far as heard from and there were good feelings on breaking up.—John G. Flagg, Jr. and F. M. Doherty, were drawn as jurors for the April term of the Superior Court at Lowell.—Notice for the R. R. Commissioners of meeting on petition of B. & L. R. R., was received refered to next Board.—Lease of Lyceum Hall for another term was approved.—George A. Holland was recomended to Secretery of State for a pedler's license.—Committee on claim of Mr. Hennessy reported the town not liable and recommended no action. Adopted—Monthly bills allowed.

E. E. THOMPSON, Treasurer.
Woburn, April 7, 1885.

— A part of the Democratic party were in the sulks all day Tuesday, and some of them haven't yet got over their defeat of Monday. But the rumsellers feel the worst. They are the sorriest looking lot that we have seen any time during this crop of potatoes. Othello's occupation's gone. With heads bowed down they go about the streets ready to drop a tear on the least occasion, and mourn as one without hope. It was a sockdollager on them. It will learn them not to put on so many airs next time. They shouldn't have wanted the whole earth. And being confident of success they did not manage their campaign well at all. They overdid the business sadly. The rumsellers should have kept shady personally on election day, and left the work to their blowers and strikers; but instead of that they put on high-heeled boots and made themselves obnoxiously conspicuous at the polls, and lost the day. Let them mourn.

— A large number of ladies assembled in the vestry of the Unitarian church on the afternoon of April 3 to listen to Miss Leonard's talk upon the subject of "cookery" and to witness her carefully planned and successfully executed demonstrations, illustrating some of the principles of her mysterious art. Selecting from her large repertory of elaborate and more common dishes a short menu that should be adapted to the opportunities of an isolated lecture, Miss Leonard discoursed upon and prepared in the presence of her audience, the following articles of a "lunch:" "Orange Charlotte," "Pea Soup" and "Chicken Blanquette in Potato Border," adding as an extra, some delicious "Tea Cakes." Methods and results received much approbation. Miss Leonard is a speaker of pleasing manner and clear, firm voice, and her refined and intelligent bearing as she proceeded with the object lesson of the afternoon, was a suggestive exemplification of the compatibility of mental culture and a practical acquaintance with the everyday knowledge necessary in the lives of most women. On the third Friday of the month Dr. Wilty, of Boston, will instruct the club as to wise and skillful action in "Medical and Surgical Emergencies." The Congregational parlors is the place of meeting.

RINK NOTES:—McCarty played with the Marlboros at New Bedford last Monday night, and with the New Bedfords at Taunton on Tuesday night. He has other engagements.——Tomorrow afternoon there is to be a children's matinee at the City Rink with a distribution of Easter Cards.——The great carnival, with costly prizes, takes place at Carter's Academy on the 15th. This will be a notable event in rink circles.——There is to be a Mass. League game between the Woburns and Bay States at Carter's Academy this evening. Go early if you would secure seats.——Several first-class games of polo are booked for Newton's City Rink this week.——The Woburns beat the Globes at Haverhill on Monday night.——The Woburn High Schools vanquished the Chelseas at Newton's last Tuesday evening.——Both rinks issue tip top cards for the coming week.

Town Meeting.

The annual Town Meeting last Monday was a surprise party. Very few thought it would turn out as it did, although a good many hoped it would. The vote on the license question for instance was an astonisher of the first magnitude to both sides. Regular drinking men peddled "No" all day and voted it. That part of it was a puzzle. It staggered the shrewdest old heads at the polls. Didn't the rumsellers swear some when they saw their customers voting right against them in that brazen-faced manner? Just common kind of profanity didn't meet the case at all—the atmosphere smelled like brimstone.

Then the result of the vote for School Board was a settler to the hopes and aspirations of some. The women did that very handsomely indeed. The ring ticket was a bad one: its election would have been a serious blow to our schools. Unfit men were nominated; but the good ladies—"God bless 'em"—fixed their flints so completely that they will probably stay fixed for some time to come. The new Board, which is an excellent one, means, we rather think, a new Superintendent.

Then again, the ringsters on the Selectmen's ticket were crushed—or, if not quite that, the ring was, which is better. There were thirteen tickets in the field, and they were all got out by Democrats. That speaks volumes. It was a Democratic internecine war, and a hot one. The Republicans burned their powder where it would do the most good. They went into ecstacies over the defeat of the ring. The citizens' ticket was a glorious success. It lost only two men in the fight, or three at the outside, which was glory enough for one day. Thomas H. Hill was chosen Moderator and presided well. The meeting was adjourned to next Monday evening to take up the remaining articles in the Warrant and finish the business. The following is the vote;

The following were appointed: William Babb, John Johnson, Benjamin Hinkley, Leonard Thompson, A. J. Ham, D. W. Bond, Charles Porter, G. F. Jones, Samuel Skelton.

THE ORGANIZATION.

At 4.30 on Tuesday afternoon the new Board of Selectmen met and gave another surprise party. The Democratic family conflict was on deck with a chip on its shoulder. War to the knife and knife to the hilt gleamed in every eye. Mr. James Maguire was elected permanent chairman. The keen blade of the political guillotine flashed a brief second in the sun and Clerk Hill's official head rolled into the basket and Mr. John Ferguson stepped into his shoes. This means more war with no boys' play in it. It is generally thought that Mr. Hill will be around here quite numerous next spring. The new Board stands thus:

Chairman—James Maguire.

Clerk—John Ferguson.

COMMITTEES.

Finance and Claims, Cummings, Reade, Beggs, Maguire, Cottle; Assessors and Fence Viewers, Hill, Ferguson, Beggs, Eaton, Reade; Overseers of the Poor, Ferguson, Kenney, Eaton, Maguire, Beggs; Highway Surveyors, Eaton, Cummings, Reade, Cottle, Hill; Military and Fire Department, Beggs, Hill, Maguire, Kenney, Eaton; Police and Street Lights, Cottle, Beggs, Maguire, Eaton, Kenney; Board of Health, Kenney, Reade, Ferguson, Hill, Eaton; Legislative, Reade, Cummings, Hill, Beggs; Permits for Moving Buildings, Ferguson.

Voted to hold regular meetings of the Board at 4 o'clock, P. M., on the first Tuesday of each month, and on the third Tuesday at 7.30 P. M.

Mr. Edward Simonds was appointed janitor of Selectmen's rooms at a salary of $100.

In the history of proprietary medicines has any article met success at home equal to that which has been poured upon HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA. Why, such has been the success of this article, that nearly every family in whole neighborhoods have been taking it at the same time. Every week brings new evidence of the wonderful curative properties of this medicine.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Combines the BEST Remedies of the vegetable kingdom, and in such proportion as to derive their greatest medicinal effects with the least disturbance to the whole system. In fact this preparation is so well balanced in its action upon the alimentary canal, the liver, the kidneys, the stomach, the bowels and the circulation of the blood, that it brings about a healthy action of the entire human organism, that can hardly be credited by those who have not seen the remarkable results that have followed its use. If the Sarsaparilla does not prove sufficiently laxative, take a few doses of HOOD'S VEGETABLE PILLS. It is well in all cases of biliousness to take these pills in connection with the Sarsaparilla for the first ten days. That dull, sleepy, sick feeling can be wholly overcome by the use of these remedies. Will you give them a trial and be yourself again?

An ex-alderman of this city says of Hood's Sarsaparilla, "It is the strongest Sarsaparilla I ever saw."

Each dollar bottle contains one hundred (averages) doses. Sold by all druggists.

Obituary.

NATHAN WYMAN.

Died April 2, 1885:—Aged 64 years.

The death of Mr. Nathan Wyman calls for more than a common notice. The recent decease of his wife and the still more recent death of his sister bring upon his relatives a heavier burden of affliction than is ordinarily borne in this community. If he was not "all things to all men," he was "something" to a great number of the citizens of this town. No one who has lived in Woburn during the past fifty years could have failed to have had a share more or less extensive of his intimate acquaintance. He knew every resident by name and was probably as well known to the generality of our people as any man in our midst. It becomes our duty to lay before the public a few facts concerning his life.

Nathan Wyman was born in Woburn, February 16, 1821. His father was Nathan (5) and his ancestors were Nathan (4), Nathan (3), Nathan (2), and John Wyman, the last named one of the early settlers of Woburn. He was therefore the fifth of an unbroken line of Nathan Wymans all of whom have lived and died in this town. The earlier volumes of the Woburn JOURNAL contain many articles written by him, and he was a frequent contributor of pieces on a variety of subjects. We do not know that he obtained more than an ordinary education, but in his younger days he was a person of great literary activity and of more than common penetration and acuteness of judgment of men and things. He was friendly to men of superior education to himself, and had the epistolary friendship of such men as the late Hon. Charles Sumner and John Langdon Sibley, the present librarian emeritus of Harvard University. In the years 1858 and 1859 he represented the town of Woburn in the legislature. He was chosen town clerk in the year 1844, and continued in that office with great acceptance till 1873, nearly thirty years. He was the postmaster of the town from 1861 to 1882, twenty-one years, when he voluntarily resigned the office. He had been during his lifetime a most indefatigable collector of every scrap of print or manuscript relating in any way to his native town of Woburn, including much relating to the vicinity round about, and this great collection of rare and curious books, of choice and valuable autographs, of papers invaluable to the history of the town, saved from the neglected depositories of families, from garrets, from auctions, from personal solicitations, without expectation of pecuniary reward, or particular appreciation, he generously gave to the public library of Woburn, to find a place where they might be of use to such as might have need to consult them. In the years from 1851 to 1856 he published a transcript of the Woburn town record of births, marriages, and deaths, in the successive numbers of one of the Woburn weekly newspapers, and is, as far as we can find, a pioneer editor of this class of publication, now more common than formerly. In 1865 and 1866, he prepared and published a list of the Woburn soldiers who died in the United States service during the war of the rebellion just closed; also lists of those wounded, prisoners, or missing, in the same service from Woburn. These lists contain every conceivable detail valuable to the historian or genealogist, and gained for him high praise from competent out of town parties. He inaugurated the system now used in presenting the data respecting the births, deaths, and marriages in the annual published town report, rendering an examination of the original record hardly necessary. He has written many obituary notices of prominent Woburn citizens, and was one of the first to publish the inscriptions in the old burying-grounds of this vicinity. Many years ago he was elected a member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society, then in its infancy, but now a highly flourishing institution, but from reasons of modesty, though frequently urged, he never accepted the membership thus earnestly tendered. To this society he gave generously of his books and pamphlets, and the society has preserved as one of its choice treasures a book made up of his printed transcript of the Woburn births, marriages, and deaths, clipped from the Woburn paper in which they were published. Formerly his work in this volume was held up as an example for others to follow, but in the present high state of genealogical science, this is hardly necessary. Little inducement is now needed to cause many towns and cities to publish every detail of this character in appropriate book form, not as a private enterprise, but as an official duty. His mind and tastes were largely in this direction, with a strong tendency to original historical investigation, and had his life been less laborious in his regular avocations, and less devoted to the necessities of his daily work, he would probably have attained to a much higher distinction as an antiquarian scholar than he was able to reach. There are letters in his letter-book preserved in the public library, which show how much service he was able to render some of our more eminent genealogists, (as such) Dr. Savage and others. The great feature of his historical work was his generosity to all comers. He freely gave anything he he had to aid the cause, no matter what their cost; his time, manuscripts, books, curiosities; all were free to use them. One book of the many he has given the Woburn Public Library is now valued at more than twelve hundred dollars. His letter-book shows he had refused large offers of money from wealthy libraries for it. He was generous to his family relatives; how much, they best know. He had no children of his own. He was one of the vice-presidents of the Rumford Historical Association of Woburn, and for a series of years one of the committee of the Woburn Public Library. He was an attendant upon the services of the Unitarian Church of which he was a member. His character was above reproach. He had a kindly word for the unfortunate, and a helpful hand for the needy in distress. He was faithful to the sick; and his end was undoubtedly hastened by his devotion to the sick bed of a beloved wife, and that of his sister and a brother. The writer of this notice, then a young man, cannot forget his devotion and disinterested efforts at the deathbed of his father! How kind, how helpful, how considerate he was. "Help, Lord, for the godly man ceaseth; for the faithful fail from the children of men!"—COM.

LITERARY NOTICES.

The April number of THE BAY STATE contains several interesting papers, among which we mention a sketch with fine portrait of Charles Carleton Coffin, the widely known "Carleton" of the Boston Journal, one of the foremost journalists in the country; Shem Drowne and his handiwork; Divorce in Massachusetts; Old Dorchester; Col. John B. Clark, with portrait, of the Manchester (N. H.) Mirror, and Denman Thompson—all very entertaining. To the local character of the contents of the BAYSTATE is due its rapidly growing popularity among intelligent people, and besides, everything found in it is fresh, racy and readable. THE BAY STATE is published by John N. McClintock & Co., Boston.

Rumford Historical Association.

The annual meeting of the Rumford Historical Association was held at the Rumford House in North Woburn on the evening of the 26 ult., that being the 132d anniversary of Benjamin Thompson's birth. The illness of a considerable number of members and some other unfavorable circumstances prevented as large attendance as was hoped. But the meeting was very spirited and harmonious. Votes were passed expressing thanks to Josiah Pierce, Esq., of London, England. Mr. Piece is a descendant of an old and honored Woburn family, and from the founding of the Rumford Historical Association has proved himself a most worthy member by his numerous gifts of money and scientific matter to the Association. He is eminent as a scientist, and consequently, a Member of the Royal Institution, London, which was so largely founded and sustained by Rumford's efforts in 1799. Associated with the name of Mr. Pierce in the vote of thanks is the name of a more recent member, Mr. Stephen Thompson of Winchester, who, when on his recent trip to London, was most kindly received by Mr. Pierce, who introduced him to the treasures of the Royal Institution from whence, by the aid of an artist, the two gentlemen secured for us fine photographic views of the Royal Institution's Exterior, as well as of its Library and one of its Laboratories, with an experiment still before the scenes. Thanks were also voted to Samuel A. Thompson, for an old cartridge box and bayonet with sheath—relics of the Revolutionary War; to Rev. L. Thompson for the old manuscript of an oration delivered by Sheriff Abijah Thompson, together with a recent copy of it to which Historical and explanatory notes are appended. Mr. Thompson was also requested by vote to prepare a biographical notice of the late Mr. Alfred G. Carter, a member of the Rumford Association. Various plans for the greater usefulness of the Association and arrangements for the future, were considered, as the presentation of papers of historical interest, in due time. The knowledge that their fellow member, Mr. N. Wyman, was dangerously ill cast a shadow over the meeting. He has been an officer and an active member from the beginning and had intended to propose certain important plans for historical investigation and reports as well as to contribute a valuable addition to the depository of relics, at this very meeting. He has since gone and will be sadly missed.

E. A. THOMPSON.

An Important Invention.

THE COST OF BUILDING REDUCED ONE HALF. SHEATHING, CLAPBOARDS AND SHINGLES NO LONGER NECESSARY.

Mr. A. S. Mayo of Everett, Mass., has perfected a plan whereby the use of sheathing and clapboards is obviated, or perhaps we might better say combined in one. Mr. Mayo is a contractor and builder well known in this vicinity, and has long been endeavoring to perfect some method by which the expense of constructing dwellings might be materially lessened without detracting from their value. He has perfected the idea in what he calls "Mayo's Coverings for Buildings," which, having been duly patented and protected, we are permitted to describe. The edges of each piece are grooved in such a manner that one laps over, and the grooving of one fits into the next, and thus on from ridge pole to gutter, giving when finished the appearance of a shingled roof, although one thickness of boards constitutes the whole. The clapboarding is in the same style, although apparently simple to describe, must be seen to be appreciated. Mr. Mayo's illustrated circular, with explanation, gives the best idea possible without seeing it on a house in actual use, as at Mr. Mayo's home, in West Everett, near the B. & M. depot. (The circular will be sent to any address on receipt of a postal requesting it.) The stock can be prepared at any mill, and applied by any carpenter, and the evidence of its utility is so marked that it must become immediately popular with those who desire to secure a warmer, tighter and better house than can possibly be built by the old method, and at the same time at a considerable saving in expense. Mr Mayo's business is too urgent to permit him devoting the time to his invention necessary to fully introduce it, and he therefore, we understand, proposes to sell county or State rights, and the individual right to use same on royaly, at reasonable terms to reliable parties. It will be of interest to those intending to build, either now or at future time, to inspect this invention, which is more fully described in the circular referred to. Mr. Mayo's P. O. address is Everett, Mass.

WILMINGTON.

At the special town meeting Monday evening to see what action the town would take in relation to a new town hall, a large number of voters were present. Othniel Eames was elected moderator. Mr. Chester W. Clark made a motion to the effect that a committee of five be appointed to dispose of the present town house and erect a new building for a town hall and High School room, at a cost not exceeding $7000. A yea and nay vote resulted in defeating the motion.

FARMERS DON'T BE HUMBUGGED

by high valuations which are Entirely Unofficial, or taken from old reports, published years ago, when the trade values given to fertilizing elements by State Chemists were much higher than they are at present.

One Fertilizer Company is advertising valuations of its phosphate, based on analyses of samples, taken from special lots by the direction of the Company itself, and sent to State Chemists for Private Analysis; the valuations, thus obtained, are advertised as the true value of this phosphate, when the latest Official Valuations of the same brand, determined by the same State Chemists, from samples, drawn by the Chemists themselves, or their authorized agents, from goods found on sale in the "open market," are from six to nine dollars per ton lower.

Others are advertising valuations purporting to represent the true value of their fertilizers, when the actual valuations, found in the Latest Official Reports of the State Chemists, are from from five to fifteen dollars per ton lower.

The Inspection of fertilizers is important and furnishes valuable information to the farmers, if the actual reports of the State Chemists are examined, and their analyses are made from samples taken in the open market, by the Chemists themselves, or their authorized agents, but until the present abuses are corrected by some better legislation, so that parties cannot advertise valuations of their fertilizers, which are higher by five to fifteen dollars per ton than those found in the latest Official Reports, the present system will continue to mislead rather than guide the public.

BRADLEY'S SUPERPHOSPHATE

has gained its reputation on its own intrinsic merits, and is to-day about the only fertilizer in the market sold on this basis. Every Package Guaranteed. For its Official Analyses and Valuations, we refer to the actual reports published by the State Chemists. For Phosphate or Pamphlets

"Take her home quick," said the justice, when the mother-in-law stopped for breath. "I can't stop her talking; a dozen Judges couldn't. Tell her she's under $500 bonds to keep her tongue still."

"Alas!" sighed Pare, "that is the only thing she don't keep," and he sorrowfully left the court in excited conversation with the uncrushed mother-in-law.

A Horse's Sight.

Most people, in examining the eyes of a horse, turn them to the light. Very little can be told by such a view unless the eye is very defective. First look at the eye in a stable not very light. Then bring the horse out of doors, and if the pupil of the eye is much contracted it indicates good eyesight. If the pupil is nearly the same size in dim or bright light, eye is poor and the horse is likely to go blind. The windows in a stable should be in the rear, never in the front. They should be so arranged as to throw a light on the eye obliquely.

In The Legislature.

"Mr. Speaker, I arise to place in nomination a man, sir, what we all know, sir, to be a man what ain't got no peer nowhar. We all know that he is more than qualified, sir, for the position, for I served with him durin' the wah, sir; he will not only represent the great democratic partiee, but, sir, the entire state. During the dark and bloody days when the pale face of hunger put its bloody hand on the heart of the nation he was found to be as true as steel, an' grabbed the gory wolf by the lappels of his shirt and shook him until he loudly begged for mercy.—Arkansaw Traveler.

Temperance.

Woman represents the home. The world is slowly making the immense discovery that not what woman does but what she is makes home a possible creation. It is the Lord's ark and does not need steadying; it will survive the wreck of systems and the crash of theories, for the home is but the efflorescence of woman's nature under the nurture of Christ's gospel. She came into the college and humanized it; into literature and hallowed it; into the business world and ennobled it. She will come into government and purify it; into politics and cleanse that Stygian pool as the waters of Marah were cleansed; for woman will make home-like every place she enters, and she will enter every place on this round earth. Any custom, traffic or party, on which a Christian woman cannot look with favor is irrevocably doomed. Its welcome of her presence and her power is to be the final test of its fitness to survive. All Gospel civilization is radiant with the demonstration of this truth: "It is not good for man to be alone." The most vivid object-lesson on history's page is the fact that his deterioration is in exact proportion to his isolation from the home of woman's companionship.—Francis E. Willard.

I am a prohibitionist. I am such because I see the homes and hearths of of our country menaced by the most tyrannical foe that ever threatened the liberty and perpetuity of a nation. As a minister of the gospel of peace, I am constrained to stand aloof from mere partisan politics; but when an impudent moral wrong, not content with slaying thousands of souls yearly, demands, and has largely obtained, the sanction of law to its iniquities, the testimony of Christian ministers is certainly called for both by speech and by ballot. I hold it to be the most awful thing conceivable for the government to countenance the drink traffic, by licensing it, and taking a revenue from it, thus becoming a partner in the business of "dealing wet damnation round the land." And if the state thus assumes the role of Tetzel, peddling out indulgences to the public poisoners, it is time for Luther to leave his cloister and nail his prohibition theses on the ward-room door.—Rev. Dr. Gordon, Boston.

That is the sort of chariots in which we are concerned. God's chariots will carry us to places of glorious victory. I speak about this because we temperance women are concerned in these chariots every minute of our lives, and they mean, as I believe, that God is on our side, and more than that, he has close to us the chariot that is going to carry us to heights of victory. But we cannot get there except in God's chariots. They are always invisible to the mortal eye, I believe. That is, they do not look to mortals like chariots; they look like defeats, enemies, sufferings, disappointments, misunderstandings; they really are chariots, and if we will get into them, and use them as chariots, we shall be carried to wonderful places.—Hannah Whitall Smith.

How the Richest Woman was Won.

Various stories are told of the way in which Edward H. Green, husband of the now celebrated "richest woman in America," won his wife when her fortune was well on its way to $20,000,000.

One of these yarns say that one St. Valentine's day Mr. Green bought a valentine with a dove, several hearts and a motto, and put it in an envelope to send to Miss Hettie, whom he was then courting. But, by mistake, he addressed and mailed the wrong envelope and instead of the dove and hearts, sent his lady love for a valentine a receipted tailor's bill for a very cheap suit of clothes. Charmed by this practical proof of good habits and economy, Miss Robinson showed Mr. Green every encouragement, and the marriage soon followed. It is estimated that Mrs. Green's wealth is now $35,000,000, or $40,000,000—but her husband still has to pay his tailor bills himself.

It Worked Like New Yeast.

Brown (who has just had telephonic connection established between his office and house and is very much pleased with it)—I tell you, Smith, this telephone business is a wonderful thing. I want you to dine with me this evening, and I will notify Mrs. Brown to expect you. (Speaking through the telephone)—My friend Smith will dine with us this evening. Now you listen and hear how distinctly her reply will come back.

Mrs. Brown's reply (coming back with startling distinctness)—Ask your friend Smith if he thinks we keep a hotel.

He Was Looking For a Circus.

"What time does the show begin?" was the query of a man accompanied by two ladies at the entrance to a Back Bay church on Saturday afternoon.

"The services will begin in a few minutes," was the response of an usher.

The party entered and were shown to seats, but in a short time after the Easter exercises of the Sunday school children were inaugurated, retired with a look of disgust on his countenance which said as plain as words, that wasn't the kind of a "show" he came to see.—Boston Post.

"Yes," sighed the shoemaker as he contemplated his awl, "trade is very dull; I think I'll move away from here."

"Where will you go?" asked his wife.

"I think I'll move up close to the corporation."

"How much better off will you be there?"

"I expect to do a good business. Corporations have no soles, you know."

The Flower Medicine Co., is conferring a great boon upon the public by introducing the remedies of that celebrated physician, Dr. R. C. Flower, whose practice has been so phenominally successful, that without doubt these remedies will be much sought after.

At the battle of Gettysburg, one of the Union burial parties buried eighty Federal soldiers in one trench. They were all from a New York regiment, and all had seemingly been killed by one volley. They were almost in line, taking up but little more room than live men. All of them were shot about the hips, and not one of them apparently lived ten minutes after being hit.

LITERARY NOTICES.

GOLDEN DAYS for April is an extraordinary attractive and interesting number. The contents, pictorial and literary, are of a high order of merit, and a notable feature of all the reading is its clenliness. It is free from the least thing objectionable to the most refined and fastideous taste. Parents and guardians need not fear to place GOLDEN DAYS into the hands of their children and wards, for its literature and lessons are pure and elevating from cover to cover. GOLDEN DAYS is published by James Elverson, Philadelphia.

The numbers of THE LIVING AGE for March 28 and April 4 contain The Poetry of Tennyson, and George Eliot, Hadrian's Address to his Soul, The Life of George Eliot, Finland: a Rising Nationality, by Prince Kropotkin, Clementina Sobieska, The Trade of Ancient Egypt, Nursing as a Fine Art, Prisoners of War in England, Spinning-Wheels in New England, and The Seventh Centenary of the Temple Church, Academic Bells-Lettres, Some Turkish Proverbs, and The Dean of Wells on the Future Life, with installments of A House Divided Against Itself, Plain Francis Mowbray, Mrs Dymond and the conclusion of A Millionaire's Cousin. A New Volume begins with the number for April. For fifty-two numbers of sixty-four large pages each (or more than 3,300 pages a year) the subscription price $8) is low; while for $10.50 the publishers offer to send any one of the American $4.00 monthlies or weeklies with THE LIVING for a year, both postpaid. Littell & Co., Boston, are the publishers.

Gen. Meigs,

Yonder is rather a venerable a man, with mind in his countenance and silence for his guardsman, who passes along in his carriage unnoticed. It is Quartermaster General Meigs, who hauled the Army of the Potomac, and, indeed, the armies of the whole Union, out of the mud and onward to the last ditch; and he has put up the patent office, the new pension building, and although a character of the past, his integrity has kept him alive and active to the present. He built the bail-room for Cleveland, as he built many a year ago the great arch on the Washington aqueduct, which contained the name of Jefferson Davis till Simon Cameron, or somebody had it cut out of the stone making it rather more prominent by absence than if it had remained.

Was Sorry He Spoke.

At Fort Bayard for a long time there lay an old spiked cannon, which had been rendered useless for some reason or another. The Apache chief of that district fell in love with that cannon. He used to come every day and beg the commandant to give it him. At length Gen. Sherman was announced as coming and the officer told the Apache that he must ask him for it. He did. The general looked at it, saw it was of no use and presented it to him.

"I am afraid," said the general, with mild jocosity, "you want the cannon so that you can turn it on my soldiers and kill them."

"Umph! No. Cannon kill cowboys. Kill soldiers—club."

The general was sorry he spoke.

Not a Lawyer's Corpse.

Smith—"Here is something peculiar. This paper says that a man who was buried in North Carolina a few months ago was disinterred last week and was found lying on his face."

Mrs. Smith—"How strange! I wonder who he was?"

Smith—"I don't know; the paper does not give his name. But I should judge he was a farmer or merchant—at any rate, he wasn't a lawyer."

Mrs. Smith—"How do you know it wasn't a lawyer, my dear?"

Smith—"Because if he had been a lawyer he would have been found lying on one side or the other.

A Upas Tree in Florida.

Upon the keys south of Datona there grows a veritable upas tree, called the menchineel. Any one taking shelter under it during a rain or sleeping under it when the dew falls is sure to be poisoned. One who experienced it says "it swells a fellow all up and makes him feel as if he had been skinned and peppered." Sawing some of the wood to make canes for the exposition a Mr. Hall, of Dayton, suffered from its poisonous effects so severely that he refuses to handle it again at any price.

The Spring Months.

Are undoubtedly the best in which to purify the blood and strengthen the system, because at this time the body is most susceptible to the beneficial effects of a reliable medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla. The feeling of debility, languor, and lassitude, caused by the changing season, is entirely overcome, and scrofula and all humors are expelled from the blood by the powerful reviving and purifying influences of Hood's Sarsaparilla. Do not delay—Take Hood's Sarsaparilla now. It is made by C. I. Hood & Co., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass. Sold by all druggists. 100 Doses One Dollar.

Another Chicago man, one William H. A. Brown, a wealthy member of the Board of Trade, has been arrested for bigamy. Now that Mr. Edmunds has partially hamstrung polygamy in Utah, how would it do for the Vermont senator to introduce another bill having especial reference to the bigamous tendencies of tha City by the Lake?—Boston Courier.

"Messrs. F. W. Kinsman & Co.: Gents,—I have sold your Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam over my counter for years; and I must say, that, during an experience of twenty-six years in the retail drug business, I have never sold any thing for coughs, colds, etc., that has given such universal satisfaction as your Adamson's Botanic Balsam. I recommend it above all others. Yours truly, "S. CHESTER,
"357 Myrtle Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y."

"Will you see that my grave's kept green, darling?"

"No, my dear, I will plant violets upon it."

"For what reason?"

"Because I do not wish any grave robbers to dig up your body."

"How will the planting of violets upon my grave prevent them from digging me up?"

"Why, your grave will be kept in violet, of course."

Nothing Like It.

"I went to see a French opera while I was in New Orleans," said an old fellow who had just returned from the exposition. "Very fine, very fine indeed. I tried to catch one of the tunes, but as I don't understand French, I couldn't get hold of it. Oh, yes, opera is very good but I can stagger along very well without it. If I ain't particular about seein' a show, I'd just as soon go to an opera as a funeral, but when I want to lay right down and enjoy myself, I go to a circus. Ah, there's nothing like a brass horn and a hoss."

Some of Them Do.

"Ma, aren't people who have crests and decorations of that kind supposed to be rich?"

"Yes, very often. They belong in old English families, who have coats of arms."

"Well, if they are rich, what do they want people to give them old clothing for?" "Why' they don't. What put that in your head?"

"Oh, because you said they have coats-of-alms."

A Luxury.

"Father, what is a luxury?" asked little Johnnie the other night as he wrapped himself round the parlor stove.

"A luxury? Why, it's something we don't really need, you know—a thing we can do without."

"Well, then," replied the logical youth, "what a luxury a mosquito-net must be in winter."

Billiousine

Is very prevalent at this season, the symptoms being bitter taste, breath offensive, tongue coated, sick headache, drowsiness, dizziness, loss of appetite. If this condition is allowed to continue, serious consequences may follow. By promptly taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, a fever may be avoided ar premature death prevented. It is a positive cure for biliousness. Sold by all druggists.

I recommend the following passage in "Carlyle's life" to those young pests who, without a real notion of music, make the air around them hideous by the everlasting strumming on a paino. "The miserable young woman in the next house to me spends all her bright days, not in learning to darn stockings, sew shirts, bake pastry, or any art, mystery or business that will profit herself or others, not even in amusing herself or skipping on the grass plots with laughter of her mates, but simply and solely in raging from dawn to dark, from night to midnight, on a hapless piano, which it is evident she will never in this world render more musical than a pair of barn clappers! The miserable young female!"—London Truth.

A Michigan man, Dr. Hirchman, of Norway, has devised a stovepipe with a patent jointing process, which will probably do away with the venerable stovepipe joke and a great deal of ill-temper.

EXZEMA OR SALT RHEUM.

Another Clear and Positive Recovery—An Elderly Lady's Letter.

Among the numerous letters received by Dr. Kennedy testifying to notable Salt Rheum cures, the following will be found of interest to our readers, who may accept our assurance of its perfect authenticity and truthfulness:

WORCESTER, Mass., March 23, 1884.

Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.

DEAR SIR: Until recently I have been for three years a sufferer from Salt Rheum. It followed upon an attack of Erysipelas, for which I was for a long time under medical treatment. I placed myself again in the hands of the physicians who did, I have no doubt, all that could be done. One thing is sure, however, I was none the better for all the medicine they gave me. The painful and unsightly disease made continual progress, until I began to fear I should never get rid of it.

By means of one of those accidents that often result in so much blessing I had my attention called to your FAVORITE REMEDY, which I was told would surely do me good. I used it, and within a much shorter time than I would have believed possible, I received a permanent cure. I am now perfectly free from Salt Rheum. What a comfort this is, and how it places your wonderful medicine in my opinion, you may guess at, but never know. I keep it now constantly in the house as a family medicine.

Yours truly, MRS. DINAH PHAIR.

Mrs. Phair sometime since, when on a visit to Kansas, found a case of Salt Rheum, could not get FAVORITE REMEDY, sent to New York City for it, and cured the case.

For all diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, Bladder and Digestive Organs, Dr. David Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY, Rondout, N. Y.

MALARIA.

It expels malarial poisons, and is the best preventative of chills and malarial fever in the world. It is especially offered as a trustworthy specific for the cure of Kidney and Liver complaints, Constipation and all disorders arising from an impure state of the blood. To women who suffer from any of the ills peculiar to their sex Favorite Remedy is constantly proving itself an unfailing friend—a real blessing. Address the proprietor, Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. $1 bottle, 6 for $5, by all druggists.

WILBOR'S COMPOUND OF PURE COD LIVER OIL AND LIME.

Wilbor's Compound of Pure Cod-Liver OIL AND LIME. The advantage of compound over the plain Oil is, that the nauseating taste of the Oil is entirely removed, and the whole rendered entirely palatable. The offensive taste of the Oil has long acted as a great objection to its use; but in this form the trouble is entirely obviated. A host of certificates might be given here to testify to the excellence and success of "Wilbor's Cod-Liver Oil and Lime;" but the fact that it is regularly prescribed by the medical faculty is sufficient. THE PASSING SHOW.

A cut of mutton, en famille,
Will bring us guests at pleasure,
Who'll dine and wine with cheerful zeal,
And "cut" us at their leisure.
And yet we live upon the "Ave,"
Made money by suspension,
And never hesitate to have
At any cost, attention.

Papa is up on etiquette
(He took it as directed)
And never speaks of "Pork" you bet,
As might have been expected.
They say his watchchain weighs a pound,
Patrician is his bearing,
And bigger checks there can't be found
For paying or for wearing.

We trained mamma with anxious care
To use a fork at dinner,
Though table manners are a snare
In coming out a winner.
And style must yield to canvas back
When ma is in a hurry,
For with a knife she has a knack
Unequalled in a hurry.

Then I myself am quite genteel,
And also worth a million—
A charming partner you may feel
For life or the cotillion.
My grammar may be off the lines,
But cash, mistakes will hallow,
And sure I'm polished to the nines,
Although it may be "callow."

Our coat of arms is up to par,
And made expressly for us,
And "my what howling swells they are"
Exclaim the ignorant chorus.
They do not know each entering wedge
Has fallen from chic to piety,
That still we're on the ragged edge
Of what they call Society.

DELIVERED FROM EVIL.

The twilight of mid June was full of tender opal brightness; the scent of new mown hay, coming down from far-off breezy slopes, floated in the air and just beyond the elms in the hollow, the full moon was rising up—a great globe of pearl, and from her low seat beneath the over-hanging honeysuckles Bertha Wyman saw and felt all this summer beauty with a faint blissful languor of a tropic dream.

"Bertha!"

Paul Fordham crossed the broad ribbon of moonlight that fluttered over the piazza, and came to sit down at his finanece's feet.

"You are like a picture to-night, Bertha; do you know it?"

"Am I?"

Miss Wyman was accustomed to adulation and took it very coolly, with only a royal smile flung down to her admirer.

She was like a picture—fair and gracious, with blue eyes, and great coils of golden hair bound about her head; while even in the uncertain twilight, you could see that the color on her cheeks was softer and more tenderly tinted than the blossoms of the great oleander at her side.

"Hush—who is that?" she said, with a little start, as a light footstep sounded on the matted hall beyond.

"Only your aunt's companion, Mrs. Raymond. By the way, Bertha, what a very interesting little thing she is—such a child widow with those big black eyes, and the heavy lashes that seem actually to weigh down her eyelid! She makes me think of one of those exquisite little South American birds, all grace and sparkle."

"I never could account for the taste of young men," said Bertha, half contemptuously.

"No, but she is a beauty, by Jove! I can tell you what, my fair Saxon empress, if I hadn't lost my heart irrevocably to you, long before I ever saw Mrs. Raymond, there's no telling what might have happened."

He spoke jestingly, but Bertha drew away the hand he had taken coolly.

"It is not yet too late, Paul, if you really admire Zaidee Raymond so enthusiastically."

"Bertha!"

Miss Wyman laughed a strange unnatural sort of laugh. Up to this moment her lips had never tasted the bitter cup of jealousy; now it seemed as if the draught was maddening. How dared Paul Fordham, her betrothed lover, to speak in terms of commendation of any woman save herself!"

Bertha was one of those unfortunate creatures who have what is termed a "high temper" and all her life it had been unbridled. She had never learned the lesson of self-control, and it was too late to begin now.

Miss Wyman went up to her own apartment earlier than asual that evening, not because she was particularly weary, but because she wanted to punish Paul Fordham, who was fond of moonlight, and sentiment, and delicious July evenings, for his unwarrantable notice of her aunt's dark-eyed companion.

As she sat at her window, brushing out the wavy, feathery gold of her magnificent hair, the sound of voices on the piazza below arrested her attention. She listened a moment, holding the golden masses away from her head, with her scarlet lips far apart. It was Paul Fordham and Zaidee Raymond.

"I thought so," she murmured under her breath. "It would be no bad speculation for the poverty-striken widow to wile Paul Fordham and his wealth into her net. I knew she was awful despite her innocent, childish ways; but if she dares to come in collision with me, she shall be crushed—crushed as I would strike a noisome insect to the ground."

She sat there, silent and motionless, for well nigh half an hour; then there came a soft tap at her chamber door.

"Come in," said Bertha Wyman.

And Mrs. Raymond entered.

"I beg your pardon for disturbing you, Miss Wyman, but were you aware that you left your bracelet on the parlor floor? Here it is."

"It takes you and Mr. Fordham some time to discover the loss of a bracelet," said Bertha, tauntingly. "I am really sorry to have given you the trouble of so lengthened a search."

Zaidee Raymond's cheek flashed painfully.

"If you would but allow me to confide in you, Miss Wyman," she faltered, drawing a step or two nearer to the haughty Saxon beauty. "Mr. Fordham has told me—

"I do not wish to become the repository of your confidence," said Bertha, with chilling abruptness, "nor do I care what Mr. Fordham chooses to tell you. Good night."

And she motioned Mrs. Raymond imperatively from her presence.

"I should have struck her in another second," she murmured to herself, tearing the tiny lace frill away from her throbbing throat, as if its slight presure impeded her free respiration. "I have seen the nurses shrink away from me, as a child, when my temper rose. There was murder in my eyes, they said. I think murder came into my heart, when I stood there facing that treacherous black-eyed woman. Let her beware how she comes between me and mine."

Unconscious Paul Fordham! If he he could only have known, as he paced up and down the dewy lawn, smoking his cigar, the thoughts that were passing through the mind of his lovely betrothed.

"Bertha," he said, the next afternoon, as they stood together by the great spicy sweetbrier bush, "do you know I had quite a chat with Mrs. Raymond last night?"

"I am aware of it," answered Bertha indifferently, stooping to gather a scented spray.

"And by Jove, Bertha, the little creature has had the most romantic life to—

"I daresay" said Bertha, turning abruptly away. "The breeze is too strong out here. I think I would rather go back to the library."

Paul stared at his companion in utter bewilderment

"I suppose that means she dosen't want to talk any more about Zaidee Raymond. Well, of all incomprehensible creatures, a woman is the most incomprehensible! They are leagues and leagues beyond my penetration, the whole race of them. I supposed she would be interested; and here she snaps my head off before I get out a dozen words."

And Paul followed Bertha to the library confused, and not altogether pleased at the arbitrary decisiveness of the beautiful blonde.

It was about a week afterwards that Bertha Wyman was coming home from a long walk to a distant farm-house, where an old schoolmate of hers had resided. She had refused Paul Fordham's escort, probably she had seen him walking up and down the long hall with Mrs. Raymond at his side, that very morning; and now she felt a little wearied, somewhat lonely, and very cross. The sun had been down about half an hour, but the west was illumined with a belt of orange brightness, and the winding river, tangled along the shore with starry water lillies, reflected the warm glow of the sky like a second firmament.

As Bertha descended into a little hollow, fragrant with wild roses—for she had avoided the thoroughfare, unfrequented though it was, and chosen instead a shaded by-path—she became conscious that two other persons were strolling along the road itself, from whom she was only divided by a tangled mass of wild grape-vines festooned from the slender branches of a few silver birches—two other persons—Paul Fordham and Zaidee Raymond.

The color died away on Bertha's somewhat flushed cheeks, as she paused to listen, for they, too, had paused where two roads separate.

"We mustn't walk any further together," said Paul Fordham's voice. "Nobody is to suspect anything yet, you know. We'll surprise them."

And then came Zaidie's soft hesitating laugh.

"It seems like a dream, Mr. Fordham."

"But you will find it, I hope, a happy reality," he said, looking tenderly down upon her bowed head. "You do not regret trusting in me?"

"Oh!" she murmured. "I never dreamed that earth had so much of happiness in store for me yet! And I owe it all to you!"

And then Bertha could hear his footsteps dying away in the distance; she could see Mrs. Raymond standing motionless for a moment, with her tiny hands clasped, and then gliding on, her scarlet scarf glimmering through the dusk like the wing of a ceylon bird.

"False! faithless," murmured Bertha under her breath, while her white teeth set closely together. "And she! how dare she?"

The storm of hot, unreasoning fury that raged in her breast seemed to shake her slight frame as a leaf shaken by the equinoctial gale; and her eyes literally blazed with blue, baleful fire. At that instant there was murder in Bertha Wyman's heart.

She hurried down the twilight glade, the thorns tearing her dress, the briers wounding her delicate flesh, but she felt them no more than if they had been rose petals blown towards her by the evening breeze. Some strong save purpose was maturing in her mind—some over-mastering passion held her whole being in its grasp.

She knew that, to strike into the road, Zaidee must ere long take the secluded path she herself was treading. Her sole aim was to reach the tiny foot bride which crossed the narrow river first.

And she succeeded. It was quite dark—the fragrant, starry darkness or a midsummer night—when she hurried down the steep, shelving bank.

"The planks are old and ruinous," she murmured. "They shook and rattled under my feet as I passed over today. Zaidee Raymond shall come between me and my plighted lover no more!"

As she crossed, she deliberately stooped, tearing up plank after plank behind her, and throwing them into the river with a dull splashing sound. They were not large, but had they been twice, nay, three times their size, Bertha Wyman would have torn them away from the mouldering beams, so supernatural seemed her strength in that instant.

"There," she said, half aloud, pausing to look down into the peaceful stream where the planks floated amid the faint reflection of innumerable stars. "Long ago, when I was a child, a man was drowned here. The water is deep and the spot is very lonely."

The next moment she was gone, hurrying madly away, as if some unseen presence were following close upon her footsteps.

"You're late to-night. Bertha?"

Paul was looking out for her from the piazza steps, and came pleasantly to meet her.

"I know it," she said, putting the hair away from her forehead, where the cold dew stood in beads. It's a long way from Redcote Farm, and I—I did not walk very fast."

"Come and sit by me, Bertha," said Paul; "I've a long story to tell you."

"What is it?" she asked mechanically.

"It's about Zaidee Raymond; she is not a widow after all."

"Not a widow?"

"No; and how do you suppose I found it out? Clifford, my cousin Clifford, wrote me from India, and he is her husband. You see there was some misunderstanding, some absurd quarrel between them, before the honeymoon was over. He was a jealous fool and she was passionate, and she ran away and left him. He somehow heard that she was in this part of the country, and wrote to me. Of course, the moment I got a chance to speak to her I knew it was Zaidee. And she is the happiest little creature in the world to think that he loves her, and next week she is going out to him. I have managed it all. Don't you think I am a pretty good diplomatist?"

His face was fairly raidiant with honest pleasure as he looked down into Bertha's face. She did not see the gaze; her eyes wide open and dilated, were fixed on vacancy and her face was deathly pale.

Merciful God of Heavens! What had she done, in the wild, unreasoning madness of her jealousy! Was the mark of Cain upon her brow?

Alas, for the wild remorse that gnawed at her heart all the slow creeping hours of that dreadful night! Had the wealth of a hundred worlds been hers, she would have cheerfully given it all to undo the work of those few maniac moments on the lonely bridge! Nay, she would have died herself in all the bloom of her youth, and hope and beauty, to wipe out that brief half hour of her life!

When she arose the next morning she looked as if an illness of months had passed over her head.

"How ill you look, dear," said her aunt. "I'm afraid that walk yesterday was too much for you. And it is so very strange that Zaidee did not come last night."

Strange! As Bertha closed her heavy eyes she almost seemed to see the dead face turned upwards among the water lillies, with its wealth of jetty hair tangled amid their wreathed stems. Oh, God! As long as she lived that white face would haunt her waking and sleeping hours.

Would it be long before they found the corpse? Would they bring it up the flowery lawn, with the long hair dripping, or would it float there for days, perhaps, in the lonely spot? And—

"Why, Zaidee! where have you been all this time?"

Bertha started with a wild hysteric scream. It was her aunt's voice, and Zaidee Raymond stood in the midst of them, with blooming cheeks and dimpling smiles.

"At Farmer Geary's to be sure. It was so dark when I passed there last night the kind souls insisted on my staying there with them until morning. And it was a very lucky thing that I did, for when we got to the bridge this morning, we found that the thunder shower in the night had raised the stream and washed away half those ruinous old planks.

Bertha Wyman arose and came toward Zaidee, taking her to her bosom with a strong, tender pressure that the young creature, scarcely understood.

"Oh, Zaidee, we were so frightened! Thank Heaven you are safe once more! Dearest Zaidee, Paul has told me all, and I am so glad."

If ever a woman spoke from the bottom of her heart Bertha Wyman did at that moment.

The wext week Mrs. Raymond went out to join her husband in India; and a month afterward Paul Fordham was married to Bertha, whose unwonted gentleness and sweetness of demeanor rather astonished the household.

"Something has changed her very much," said the good old aunt. But no one ever knew what the something was that had wrought such an alteration in Bertha's character.

Let the Baby Sleep.

Sleep is the natural condition of healthy babyhood. Wakefulness in the baby is a certain indication of nervous weakness, irritation and incipient disease, that sooner or later will seriously affect the health of the whole system, more especially the cerebral organs. Parents unacquainted with this important truth are delighted with an early manifestation of precocious intelligence in their little ones, and are never weary of rousing, stimulating their dawning mental faculties for their own gratification as well as for the wondering admiration of friends; whereas quite the opposite course should be pursued. Insomnia and precocity in childhood are generally premonitory systems of constitutional disease, early mental decay, insanity and death. Therefore the wise mother will carefully guard her child from all excitement, constantly wooing nature's most healthful sedative—sweet and peaceful slumber. A healthy baby if given the necessary quantity of non-stimulating, wholesome food at regular intervals of three hours, and laid away perfectly comfortable and undisturbed, with plenty of pure air to breathe, will develop naturally, and, therefore, healthfully.—Hints to Mothers.

A New Day of Issue for "The Century."

The editions of THE CENTURY MAGAZINE are now so large that it has become necessary either to go to press at at an earlier date or to postpone the day of issue. The latter alternative has been accepted. The April number, the edition of which was 225,000, was delayed until the 25 of March. The May number—edition, 250,000—will be issued on 1st day of May, thus inaugurating with the first number of the thirtieth volume a change which has long been considered desirable by the publishers, and which it is believed will be heartily commended by the public. Future numbers of THE CENTURY MAGAZINE will be issued on the 1st day of the month of which each bears date.

All this talk about the instability of the Washington monument won't frighten thinking people. Anybody who stops to consider will remember that Walt Whitman wrote a poem about the monument before the capstone had been on a week, and the structure that can pass through that trial unscathed is safe against the ravages of time for at least a thousand years.

Garrison Houses.

There are still living many persons who remember the old Garrison Houses of the early days of our New England towns. So far as the writer recalls them, there were several, in different neighborhoods, in nearly every town. This was certainly once true of Woburn. It is quite probable, that, in some parts of our Commonwealth, there may be still seen a venerable specimen. If the old traditions concerning them are true, many of them should have been preserved, if not as relics of a striking architecture, at least, as eloquent memorials of days and dangers long since gone by. Faintly do we realize now, through what privations and perils the fathers and mothers of the olden time, had, for many years, to press their way. In several localities, in our own State, individuals, parts of families, and sometimes whole families, were either murdered in or near their own homes, by ruthless Indians, or carried into a long and dreadful captivity, sometimes even worse than death.

In those times of peril, were erected, we are told, these old Garrison Houses. They were usually built very strongly. The upper story projected over or beyond the lower story from one to two feet on either side. Some have supposed the peculiar style of the building was copied by the Colonists from old remembered homes in Europe, where, as also in Western Asia, projecting upper stories were and are still common. The lower story had but few windows, and these were small, but very strong and furnished with strong shutters. The door, generally in two parts, was very heavy, as originally built, and was often made of timber or oak joist, hung on wooden hinges and very strongly braced and barred within. Through the floor of the projection of the upper rooms, were numerous loop-holes. One of the traditions of former days was that, when the house was assailed by the Indians, the family and, often, in times of general and special danger, the assembled families of the settlement, within, used to pour down the shot and balls from their guns upon the heads of the assaulting savages. This may have been and probably was one use of the loop-holes, but not the only one. We are told that often the women, who could not as readily manage a musket as the men, poured boiling water down upon the assailants, and when, as was generally the case, the Indians set fire to the house, streams of water, directed thus from above, put it out. In this way, many a family escaped the death to which the ferocious savages doomed them.

But what would be thought to-day of domestic life environed with such perils? It makes one shudder even to think of young families subjected to a home experience so full of danger. Yet this was a common experience once even in our own New England. Ah, little do the thoughtless, easy-going multitudes of the present generation realize how much they owe to the fewer and feebler generations who preceded the Revolutionary War, and then those who, with an endurance and patient courage, almost incredible now, bore up and struggled on, till they achieved the final victory, the fruits of which we all, I fear, too ungratefully, enjoy.

THE ADJOURNED TOWN MEETING.

The adjourned Town Meeting held on last Monday evening for the purpose of voting the appropriations and finishing up the remaining articles in the Warrant was such a marked improvement on its predecessors for the last ten or a dozen years that by good rights it should have editorial mention in these columns. It was a good, staid, properly conducted business meeting, almost entirely free from the irresponsible and annoying element that has generally controlled them in the past. There must have been close on to a thousand voters in the hall and it was remarked by all who took pains to look over the assembly, and particularly by those on the platform, that it was composed almost entirely of men who had interests at stake and had met to protect them by honest, intelligent voting. That there will necessarily be a few cranks in such a meeting is to be expected, and that of Monday evening was not an exception.

The improvement here spoken of was no doubt largely due to the fact that the solid citizens of the town had made up their minds to attend the meeting and insist on business methods in conducting it and the maintenance of their rights as property-holders and tax-payers, and to the additional fact that the irresponsible, non-tax-paying element had become fully advised of this determination. This suggests the thought that the solid citizens did precisely what they should do at every such meeting where large sums of money are to be voted and business of vital importance done. They performed a simple duty to themselves and the town and demonstrated their ability to compel the observance of business methods in the transaction of our town affairs, if so disposed. If things go awry hereafter the property-owners and tax-payers will have none to blame but themselves.

The outlook for improvement in our public affairs is promising. On the 6th a good Board of Selectmen was elected. It is composed of level-headed business men whose chief aim, we have no doubt, will be to take the very best care of the town's interests. They are interested in a clean, economical government, which means lower taxes, better results for the money spent, and the removal of the stigma that bad management of its affairs has compelled our town to bear for a few years past.

GEN. GRANT'S CONDITION.

The latest advices from New York state that Gen. Grant's condition has been more comfortable for several days past and gives grounds to hope that he may be spared to the country for some time to come. The bulletins now issued at short intervals by the attending physicians say their distinguished patient gets a good deal of natural sleep, is comparatively free from pain, and that his throat shows a more favorable state than it has for weeks past. There has been some conflict between the reports of the doctors and the attendants, but the fact doubtless is that the General is better, and we should not be very much surprised if it should turn out that he has been suffering from a bad case of common sore throat, with considerable ulceration, which is hardly ever dangerous, and from which he will eventually fully recover. Of course, if he gets well the doctors will claim they did it, but the public will have a mind about it all the same.

☞ The Woburn JOURNAL, in speaking of the reappointment of Postmaster Pearson, of New York, says: "It was a very bitter pill for the democracy, and will give New York to the republicans next fall." Wonder if the JOURNAL knows so early that Dana is going to run Butler again next fall. We don't see how else it can have such childlike confidence in the result—Marlboro Times.

We are not informed as to Mr. Dana's plans for the future, but believe, with other intelligent men irrespective of party, that Mr. Cleveland's very shabby treatment of his late political friends and supporters will throw the next New York State election into the hands of the Republicans.

☞ Hon. John Cummings, Wm. F. Bradbury, Esq. and Dr. Sanford Hanscom are a cammittee to examine and report upon a candidate to be appointed to the Naval Academy from the 5th Massachusetts District. The Examination is to be held at the High School House, corner of Broadway and Fayette streets, Cambridge, on Saturday 25th of April, at 9 o'clock A. M. Candidates to be residents of the District.

☞ The Sun Electric Light Company have concluded to go to Mattapoisett instead of here. The necessary amount of money was raised there at once, quarters furnished, and company will go there at once.

☞ The Waltham Record, an excellent journal by the way, has made a change in its form, and will hereafter be issued in instalments—on Tuesdays and Fridays.

— Those interested in the subject matter therein discussed will do well to read a communication in this paper by the County Commissioners of Middlesex county.

— There is to be a meeting of the School Board this evening at 7.30 o'clock, for the purpose, we take it, of organization. We don't know what else the meeting could be for.

— The Advertiser, generally radical and aggressive, is very conservative in its utterances this week. We attribute it to the fact that its editor failed to get an office at the late Town Meeting.

—Mr. Waldo Thompson planted peas on St. Patrick's Day last year which were two inches tall by this date. It don't look very much like green peas and roast lamb on June 20 this year.

— Smith & Son have a word for the public this week which will be found in their regular spot in the JOURNAL. If any one thinks Smith & Son are not selling goods cheap let him or her drop in and see.

— Dr. W. A. Reynolds has leased a whole suite of rooms in College Block which he is fitting up in fine shape for his dentistry office. The location is capital, and, and his headquarters will be unsurpassed by any in town.

— If there was ever a time of year when the work of the street sprinkler was an absolute necessity it is now. For two months the dust in our streets has been blinding nearly every day and all day long, and if there is a sprinkler in town and any water to go with it they should be brought into immediate requisition.

— The Woburn High School team beat the Chauncy Hall School, Boston, team at Newton's City Rink on Tuesday evening in three straight heats in 18 minutes. The Woburn lads are more than a match for the city chaps.

— If Mr. Eaton, Chairman of the Highway Committee, does not keep the roads in good condition this year he will disappoint his friends. Money enough has been appropriated to give us the best highways in the county.

— Mr. C. M. Strout and his men are tin-roofing the Fox building. A small house has been erected on the roof which elicits a good many guesses, the most of which is that it has been put up as a residence for Old Prob.

— I would call the particular attention of builders to my stock of all kinds of building material, and the prices at which everything is sold. I also keep hay, wood, lime, cement, and all other goods in my line,—J. B. McDonald.

— Committees are busy at work soliciting subscriptions to the $25,000 necessary to secure the location of the Sun Electric Light Company here. It is expected that a long pull a strong pull and a pull altogether will fetch it.

— Mr. Benjamin Woodside died at his residence on Mount Pleasant street on Sunday morning. He was a member of Crystal Fount Lodge, I. O. O. F., and an esteemed citizen. He was a moulder and worked at East Cambridge.

— The Committee or Education of the Massachusetts Legislature will give a hearing on the petition for incorporating the Woburn Public Library, at Room 12 in the State House, on Monday, April 20, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon

— Rev. N. B. Fisk was returned to his present pastorate in Woburn for a third year, the limit of his stay, by the New England M. E. Conference held at Springfield this and last week. This will be gratifying to his church, as well to our citizens generally.

— Messrs. Tripp, successors to Mr. L. Houghton Allen in the undertaking business, have a card in this paper to which attention is called. We understand they are very worthy men, and Mr. Allen says as much in his announcement in another column.

— The Woburn Coal Co. respectfully inform the public that, while refraining from all boasting, they sell the very best of coal of all kinds as cheap as any dealer in Woburn and give as good and general satisfaction. Mr. E. D. Newton is agent for the company.

— The following are the officers of the Baptist Sunday School for the current year:—Superintendent, G. F. Fosdick; Assistant Supt., J. P. Barrett; Supt. Primary Dept., Miss Lizzie Smith; Secretary and Treasurer, Miss Effie Flagg; Organist, Miss Platts.

— Burglars got in another whack on the Central House Wednesday night. They bored themselves through a back door with a gimlet, knocked a loose panel out of another leading into the barroom, which they entered, took about $30 in money, 3 boxes of cigars, and decamped.

— It is the general belief that our new Collector of taxes, John G. Maguire, Esq., will make a good one, and that the taxes will be promptly collected this year. He was elected on the reform ticket and was a leader in the revolt against the ring. Mr. Maguire is a square-edged man.

— Since another item in this paper on the same subject was written we have heard that Thomas H. Hill is to be appointed Clerk and Registrar of the Board by the Water Commissioners. We are just a little bit afraid that Mr. Cleveland's civil service rules won't work in this locality.

— The Woburn reporter of the Boston Globe says:—It is understood to be the purpose of the new government to push liquor prosecutions to the utmost. Last year, by the report of Chief of Police Conn, there were thirty-two liquor seizures made, and sixteen cases were carried into court.

— W. P. B. Brooks & Co., the enterprising dealers at 151 Hanover street, Boston, whose advertisement looms forth on the outside of this paper like banners waving in the breeze, have opened a new vein in the shape of silverware, which they propose to make a leading line in their business hereafter.

— It is not what you might call right-down good, solid spring weather yet. The wind continues to coquet with the Maine and New Hampshire snow drifts which does not improve it any according to our way of thinking. But the right thing is coming, and it won't be long before complaints of the heat will be heard.

— Last week the First Baptist church held their annual meeting and chose the following officers for the year:—Standing Committee, Dea. Samuel Cook, A. M. Faden, John Skinner, Cyrus Lamb, Geo. F. Russell, James Brown, Tho's Maddison, Luther Gould, F. S. Burgess; Treasurer, Charlie A. Jones; Collector, F. S. Burgess.

— The Scandinavian Quartette club Brage will give a musical entertainment in Fraternity Hall, on Monday evening, April 27, at 7 1-2 o'clock. The assistance of several persons of musical note has been secured, among others Mr. Fred Gowing, leader of Gowing's Orchestra, who will give a few violin solos accompanied by the harp. A well filled hall is expected.

— There was some more rain Sunday, which would have just suited the thrifty and considerate old lady who was glad to have it rain nights and Sundays so the hired men could rest; and a slight sprinkling on Monday, and a drop now and then along through the week, which will tickle the grass roots and set them to shooting up the green, tender blades by and by in good earnest.

— The Mendelssohn Club gave its annual concert last evening. If time would allow the public should have the privilege of reading a full account of it in this issue of the JOURNAL, but this it is perfectly safe to say: the concert was a fine one all through. The Club is composed of firstrate musical talent, besides which, artists of note from abroad took part in the entertainment who did not disappoint the high expectations of the audience.

— At the time and place appointed for a final hearing by the Railroad Commissioners on the petition of the Boston & Lowell R. R. Co., on the extension of the Woburn Branch it was discovered that a street on the route had been misnamed and the result is the county Commissioners will have to prick anew, or as the lawyers say, begin de novo. Practically it will not retard the work.

— A thief entered a room in the Central House through a window on Tuesday night and stole an overcoat, gloves, and other clothing belonging to a boarder who occupies the room, but was in Peabody at a polo game at the time. The thief lighted the gas which was burning when the occupant entered his room on returning from Peabody, and seemed to have taken things, besides the clothes, very leisurely.

— Woodmen, during the last week, have not spared the trees on Mr. Woodbury's premises and along the walk in front of them. The old spruce, whose arms spread all over the front yard, nearly, and fruit trees, and three great handsome ash, have been laid low to make room for the railroad and to enable Mr. Woodbury to move away his house. It looks very bare at that spot on Pleasant street just now, and will look more so shortly.

— Mr. Kelley, of the firm of Horton & Kelley, florists, ministered very largely to our happiness last Tuesday morning by the presentation of a box of elegant flowers, for which we thank him and them. There were splendid roses—"the queen of the garden the ruby-lipped rose"—old fashioned clove pinks, "sweet violets," and lots of other beautiful things, the sight and fragrance of which made the heart glad and caused it to rejoice.

— A considerable overturn was accomplished in Woburn, on Monday, the Citizens Ticket being succesful in the main as opposed to regular Democratic, and the town voted no license. The farther any town drifts from Democracy, the more hope there is for temperance interests.—Arlington Advocate.—True as preaching. We have got the rum element here pretty well on the run now, and next year we will finish them.

— Mr. William H. Matthews and Mr. James McMahon will begin taking the census of this town on Friday, May 1, under commission of Hon. Carroll D. Wright, Chief of the Massachusetts Bureau of Statistics and Labor, for the State census, in which they will probably be employed three months. Besides enumerating the population they will take all the facts respecting trade, business occupations, etc., included in their instructions, which will amount to a pretty large job.

—We can't say he wants it, nor know whether he would take it or not, but it would be a proper recognition of the valuable services rendered by Dr. Bartlett in the election of a clean board of town officers to choose him Town Physician for the current year. Nobody doubts his medical and surgical skill or his fitness for the position, nor would his appointment be a violation of civil service rules, for Dr. Conway has been an "offensive partisan" all the way through, in view of which he cannot expect to retain the office another year.

— The new soda fountain which Mr. Fred Leeds had put into his drugstore last week cost $700 clean money, and it is worth every cent of it. It is about the handsomest thing we ever saw in the shape of a soda fountain. It is the cynosure of all eyes. Mr. Leeds is a great one to keep "abreast of the times," and he has done it this hitch plum up to the highest notch. The soda glasses are a novelty in these parts, and as much ahead of the common sort in use as French china is ahead of old fashioned brown earthenware. The whole thing is neat.

— In just 55 seconds after the bell struck 23 for the fire at Central Square last Wednesday afternoon, the Hookies tackled up their horses, skipped, and were at the postoffice, which point is quite a good many rods from their house on Montvale Avenue. That was the quickest kind of work, but Tom Boyce with Hose 1, and McCarron with Steamer 1, were close behind and gave the H. & L. horses all they wanted to do to keep from being run over. The cause of the alarm was the burning of of grass around the house and barn of Mr. Daniel Kimball on Main street.

— The sword which Capt. Luke R. Tidd lost when he was taken prisoner in Virginia on the 19th of August, 1864, by the Confederates, can be seen at the Soldiers' Carnival now in successful progress in Boston, to the managers of which the Captain generously lent it. The sword was returned to him after nineteen years of absence by Major B. H. Whitcher, of the Sixth Georgia Regiment by whom Capt. Tidd and his men were captured. The pleasant correspondence which passed at the time of the return of the sword was published in the JOURNAL at that date.

— Mr. Kieran J. Kenney, who had both arms broken two weeks ago last Wednesday in a splitting machine in Kenney & Murphy's factory on Main street, died last Tuesday morning, at about 53 years of age. The funeral took place yesterday forenoon. The deceased was an old resident of this town and had many friends here. He was a quiet, sensible man—industrious, frugal, and generally esteemed. A wife and several children remain to mourn for a kind husband and father, with whom the community sympathize. He was a brother to Peter and Edward Kenney of this town.

— A high and well-deserved compliment was paid to the superiority of Mr. H. E. Strout's photographic work by the senior class of the Medford High School, a few days since, by ordering of him their class pictures for 1885. The class consists of twenty-five members who will have from two to five dozen photographs each. After comparing the work and prices of Mr. Strout with those of several establishments in Boston who were anxious to secure the job, the vote of the class was unanimous in favor of giving it to our Woburn artist, for which the sittings will take place in a few days. Coming from people living so near the city as Medford and of such correct taste in matters of art the selection of Mr. Strout to make the class pictures of this High School is an acknowledgment of his skill and high quality of productions of which he may be pardoned for feeling just a little proud.

— Great preparations are on foot by the elite of the town for the May Party to be given by the ladies of the Unitarian church in Lyceum Hall, on Thursday evening, April 30. A Dickins Carnival will be held, to consist of a grand procession of characters found in the works of the great novelist, Pickwick's trial, Mrs. Jarley's Wax Works, and many other interesting features. At 10 o'clock there will be dancing to music by Baldwin's Cadet Band. The committee have quite a long notice of the party in this paper which contains all the information necessary to a right understanding of it. There can be no doubt at all but that the May Party will be a very fine affair.

— Mr. H. W. Johnson, a Woburn boy, Principal of Gould Academy, at Bethel, Maine, has just been unanimously re-elected member of the School Committee of that town. We understand this is in recognition of his services to the town in grading its schools the past year—a work that has been many times attempted before, but never accomplished. After his election to the Board he was chosen its Chairman. Mr. Johnson is also President of the County Teachers' Association, at its last meeting read a paper on "Science Instruction in Public Schools" which attracted favorable notice in the Boston Journal of Education. Recently he appeared in the Bethel Lecture Course and gave an illustrated lecture on the Eye, which he has received offers to repeat in other places. We venture to assert that these results had their causes in a large part, at least, in the Woburn public schools.

— The funeral of Mr. James Rice on Sunday afternoon last was solemn and imposing. A week previously the deceased was terribly injured by a 5-ton stone road-roller which was drawn by five or six heavy horses, but just how the accident happened no one knows as none saw it and Mr. Rice was unconscious from its occurrence to the hour of his death, which took place on Friday morning, April 10th. In the long funeral procession were the Woburn National Band which played appropriate music for the occasion, the entire Fire Department in charge of Chief Engineer Clarence Littlefield, Ex-engineers, the Catholic Order of Forresters, members of the Police Department, officers of the town, and a large number of citizens. During the progress of the procession the Fire Alarm struck the number of the years of the age of the deceased, and flags floated at half mast. Mr. Rice was for many years driver of Fire Steamer No. 1, and was a careful and prompt public servant. He left a family and many friends to mourn his untimely death.

— Next Sunday will be the 110th anniversary of the Battle of Lexington, in which glorious conflict several Woburn men took part and some were killed. The graves of two of them are to be seen in the ancient graveyard on Park street. It was a sorry day for the British nation but a splendid one for the American colonies who fired their first gun for political liberty near where the monument now stands on Lexington Common early on that 19th of April, 1775. A tough fight followed that first gun, but the brave and patriotic yeomanry of Middlesex drove the dashing redcoats from Concord to Lexington, from Lexington to Menotomy (Arlington), and from Monotomy along down through the country to Charlestown Neck where under cover of the British men-of-war they were safe from further pursuit and danger from the enraged and daring Americans. Many a redcoat bit the dust that day. The custom of our town authorities of throwing out the star-spangled banner on the 19th of April each year and otherwise taking note of the anniversary is a proper one and never should be abandoned so long as the memory of Lexington lasts, or America remains free.

— We have on hand for the next issue of the JOURNAL a very interesting and timely paper entitled "Some Recollections of Appomattox" by Major H. C. Hall of this town, who, as a member of the first Maine Cavalry, was an actor in the great drama that nearly cost this country its life and took a hand in its closing scenes on the final great battle-field at Appomattox, made historic by the surrender of Lee. A marked revival of interest in the history of the American Civil War has been developed since the appearance of a continuous series of papers in the Century descriptive of many of the principal battles and naval engagements from the pens of distinguished generals and navy officers, which feeling has been intensified by the sufferings of Gen. Grant to whose military skill and prowess, rare judgment, and indomitable energy and perseverance our glorious Union is indebted for its existance to-day. The paper by Major Hall will be found very interesting, especially to the brave soldiers who, like him, participated in the thrilling scenes that transpired at Appomattox when the Rebellion, torn, tattered and disheartened, yielded to the inevitable and the great Confederate Chieftain tendered his sword and surrendered his army to the Hero who now holds a place second only to Washington in the hearts of his countrymen.

— A regular mid-monthly meeting of the Board of Selectmen will be held on next Tuesday evening at which time it is expected Chief of Police and other officers will be appointed. We have had no intimation as to what the Committees who have the appointments under consideration will do in the premises, but have confidence in their integrity and good judgment and therefore look for the right things to be done. It is reported that the Water Board will go according to the civil service rules which have been incorporated into the Democratic creed as a cardinal tenet by President Cleveland, and reappoint Mr. Bean Water Registrar, to which there will be urged no objection by the public. It is likely too that the Police Committee and Selectmen, in the appointment of a Chief and members of the Police force, will be governed by the same very commendable Democratic doctrine and retain the old force as at present organized. This, we say, is the general impresion, and yet there is a possibility of course that both Boards will do radical things about the appointments and surprise the people. But this is hardly to be looked for. Besides belonging to the Democratic civil service school in politics the members are mainly conservative gentlemen and will proceed cautiously with the important business in hand. The rumor is also rife that Dr. Bartlett will be appointed Town Physician because Dr. Conway led the opposition to the new town government and worked for the defeat of the successful candidates, which brings him within the catagory of "offensive partisan," which is obnoxious to the spirit and letter of the civil service rules. He will have to go. The above is what people are saying: the JOURNAL has no opinion to express.

— The Perry Bros. Combination is composed of six members. They gave a seven days exhibition to our entire satisfaction. The Company is A 1, and is surpassed by nothing on the road in this line.—Institute Rink, Boston. W. H. Crosby, Supt.

RINK NOTES: The Sports editor of the Boston Globe says: Woburn has now as fine a team as there is in New England. The regular members are Seelye, Kirk, Bolan, Kenney, Pierce, and Hargrave.——At the great match between the Woburns and Baystates at Carter's Academy last week the home team won in three straight beats, which was a signal victory, for the Bay states are the crack team and stand at the head of the League. Over 2,000 people witnessed the contest, and the excitement over the was game intense.——The Woburns were vanquished by the Peabodys at Peabody last Tuesday night. A large number went from here in Jones's barge to witness the game.——Newton's City Rink has furnished some fine sport in the last week. Several very nice entertainments have been given to well pleased parties.——On April 9th there was a fine game of polo between the Websters of Boston and Wakefields at Newton's City Rink, which was won by the Wakefields in three straight runs.——The Grand Costume Carnival came off very successfully at Carter's Academy last Wednesday evening. Great preparations had been made for it by people at home and abroad, and the attendance was very large. There was a great variety of costumes—some very unique ones; the music was fine; good order was preserved, and everything passed off in good shape.——For full particulars concerning the weeks amusements at both rinks the reader is referred to the cards of the proprietors of them.

A Cheap Fertilizer is Poor Economy.

CUMMINGTON, MASS., Dec. 16, 1884.

Last Spring I ploughed a piece of land which did not yield half a ton of hay per acre. On the fifteenth of May I planted it to potatoes, using no manure but Bradley's and another well-known Phosphate, side by side, the same quantity of each, and the yield was in favor of Bradley's. Where I used the two fertilizers on corn, there was a marked difference in favor of Bradley's, and I shall hse it exclusively hereafter. I bought the other brand because it was a little cheaper. Bradley's proved cheapest in the end.

What a Man Did with Kidney Complaint

DRACUT, MASS.
MESSRS. C.I. HOOD & CO.,
Lowell, Mass.:

Dear Sirs—I have suffered from kidney complaint and biliousness for fifteen years. Have tried everything and never got any good. Last January, before I commenced taking HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, everything I ate bloated me all up, pain in my chest and arms, headache and dizzy. I could not get up without feeling weary and all fagged out. Many mornings I was obliged to lie down on the lounge. To do any work seemed almost impossible. Have taken two bottles. The backache, dizziness, pain in my chest and arms, and that feeling of intense weariness are all gone. I can eat anything and it does not press me at all. Feel just like work; in fact, like a new man. Can heartily recommend HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, and hope all who desire to know anything about it will come to me and ask what I think of it. Very truly yours,

JONATHAN J. COBURN.

To the Public.

On account of ill health, I have been contemplating for nearly two years the sale of my funeral undertaking business, and when I fully decided to do so, from the very nature of the business, and the very pleasant fact that during upwards of twenty years that I have been treated with such uniform kindness and consideration by the people of Woburn and neighboring towns whom I have served, I have felt exceedingly desirous to sell to a man that I should not be ashamed of, and who would not disgrace the profession, or abuse the confidence of those who would patronize and employ him.

And now that I made this change it gives me unspeakable satisfaction to be able to say that I have sold to just the right kind of men; and it gives me great pleasure to introduce to the public Messrs. Benjamin A. Tripp and Charles E. Tripp as my successors; and I heartily recommend them to your confidence and patronage as men of staunch and reliable character, whose word is as good as their bond.

Respectfully,
L. HOUGHTON ALLEN.

Stanger than Fiction.

THE SAILOR'S BRIDE—THE BEGINNING OF A POWERFUL FAMILY.

Many decades ago a vessel from Boston arrived at a dock in London. Among the hands on board was one named Tudor, a steady well looking young man, who acted as a sailor. Very early one morning, a young, beautiful and decently dressed woman came tripping down to the vessel and enquired of Tudor for the captain. She was told he was not risen, but she insisted on seeing him without delay. Tudor called him up, she addressed him with:

"Good morning, captain! I have called to see if you will marry me."

"Marry you?"—believing her to be a suspicious character—"leave my vessel instantly, if you know what is for your good!" She next went to the mate and received a similar answer; she then went to where Tudor was, being engaged in handling ship-tacks, and put the same question to him. "With all my heart," answered Tudor, in a jocular manner. "Then said she, "come along with me." Tudor left his work and followed her. By the time the principal shops were opened the lady entered a barber's shop followed by Tudor. She ordered a knight of the razor to clip his beard and hair, both of which he stood in need. She paid the bills and entered a hat store. She requested the best of beavers in the store, and told Tudor to select one, and he did so, the price being paid by the lady. Tudor threw his old tarpaulin aside. They next visited a shoe store, and selected a pair of boots, the lady also paying for them. Tudor, by this time, was puzzled to derise the object the lady had in view. He solicited an explanation but she told him to be silent. She led the way into a clothing store. Here Tudor was told to select the best suit of clothes in the store. The man of the tar bedaubed pants and checkered shirt was in a few minutes metamorphosed into as fine a gentleman as walks the street, the bill, as before, being paid by the lady. Tudor's amazement was now complete. He again and again earnestly insisted on an explanation; the only answer he received was: "Follow me and be not alarmed; all will be explained to your satisfaction." He therefore resolved to ask no more questions. Next she conducted him into a magistrate's office and politely requested the minister of the law to unite her and her companion in matrimony. This was rather a damper to Tudor, but he yielded. The ceremony over, the ,couple were pronounced man and wife. Without uttering a word or exchanging a kiss, Tudor and his wife left the office, not, however, until she paid the magistrate his fee. The couple walked in silence. Tudor hardly knowing what he was doing or what he had done. Turning the corner, he saw a splendid house, toward which the wife directed her steps and into which they entered, passing into a room that was furnished in a magnificent style. She told him to sit down and make himself contented while she went into another room. The first one who addressed her was her uncle, who asked how she escaped from her room and where she had been. Her only answer was: "Thou fiend in human shape; I allow you just one hour to remove your effects from this house. You have long deprived me of my property, and meant to through life; but you are frustrated. I am mistress of my own house. I am married, and my husband is here!"

We must leave the newly-married couple for the purpose of giving the history of Mrs. Tudor. She was the only child of a wealthy gentleman, Mr. A.——his daughter's name being Eliza. He had been at great expense in her education, she being the only object of his care, his wife dying when she was quite young. A short time before his death he made a will by which his brother was to have possession of all his property until his daughter was married, when it was to be given up to her husband; but if she died without marrying, the property was to go to her uncle and his family. After the death of Mr. A. his brother removed into his house and Eliza boarded in his family. She soon discovered that her uncle did not intend she should ever marry. He shut her up in one of the centre rooms in the third story and refused her associates by telling them when they called that she was gone on a journey. The unfortunate girl was thus shut out from the world for three years. Her scanty breakfast happened one morning to be carried to her by her old servant Juan. Seeing the face of her old friend and servant. Eliza burst into tears. Juan well understood the meaning.

"Hush, Eliza! Some of your old servants have long been planning means for your escape."

"What?" exclaimed Eliza, "is it possible that I am to be delivered from this vile place?"

It is unnecessary to detail all the minutia of the escape. Suffice it to say that on the morning of the fourth day after the interview she made her escape. This was about daylight. She immediately bent her steps to the wharf where the Boston vessel lay.

The amazement of Tudor and transport of his wife at the sudden change of fortune may possibly be conceived but cannot be expressed.

One pleasant morning some days after the marriage the crew of Boston vessel's attention was drawn to a splendid carriage approaching the wharf. The driver let down the steps and a gentleman and lady elegantly dressed alighted. The gentleman asked the captain what port he was from, and many other questions—all the time avoiding his scrutiny; at last, turning to the captain and calling him by name, he said: "Captain, before leaving your vessel, permit me to make you acquainted with Mrs. Tudor." The captain and those about him had not recognized him to be their old friend and shipmate Tudor, whom they supposed some fatal accident had befallen. You may judge of the congratulations that followed.

The captain regretted the harsh judgment he had at first passed upon the young lady, but unlike the mate, being a married man, he was spared the added mortification of the latter that he had spurned even to consider so fortunate an offer of marriage.

This remarkable marriage, the bride being snatched from prison walls, as it were, and the groom called from the hard and humble lot of a common sailor both brought suddenly and unexpectedly to positions of freedom and affluence—has hardly a parallel in all history. The union thus formed proved to be a very happy one. The large fortune that then fell under the active management of Frederick Tudor was wisely handled and largely increased. In due time Mr. and Mrs. Tudor transferred their residence to Boston.

With shrewd foresight, Mr. Tudor entered largely into the ice business being the first person to make shipments of ice by sea. His venture was made in 1805, when he sailed himself with a cargo of one hundred and thirty tons, in his own brig, to Martinique, West Indies. In 1815 Mr. Tudor obtained the monopoly of the Havana ice business, and important privileges from the Cuban government. In 1817 he introduced the business into Charlestown, S. C., the next year in Savanah and in 1820 into New Orleans. In May, 1833 he sent the first cargo of ice to the East Indies, which was delivered at Calcutta in the autumn of that year. Of the one hundred and eighty tons, nearly one half was wasted on the voyage and in going up the Ganges. The ice was sold immediately at no more than half the cost of that prepared by the natives. In 1834 the first cargo of ice was shipped to Brazil by Mr. Tudor, and until 1836 he had a monopoly of the shipment of ice, but it finally became so large and profitable that others entered into the business from various ports.

Mr. Tudor's foresight secured to Boston the chief position of the Calcutta trade, and gave her ships cargoes for Southern ports, thus reducing the costs of freighting southern products to the North. The extensive and valuable Tudor estates in Boston and vicinity, where representatives of the family still reside, are well known. The Tudors have always been noted for public spirit, intelligence and refinement, and it was a streak of good luck for more than two that brought about the establishment of the family in America.—Boston Commonwealth.

Funk's starving babies, who wandered away in the hills of Mehama on Sunday morning, were not found till Monday noon. A shepherd dog, which was a houshold favorite, followed and guarded them during the long dark hours when the rain came unceasingly down. No doubt the faithful creature protected them from the many wild animals in the deep woods. But the heroic act of the older child remains to be added. He took his own little coat from his shivering body and put it on his weaker brother, saving him from freezing, while he endured, in a cotton shirt, hour after hour, the keen blasts of that mountain storm. Think of this from a child but six years old, and let any who can say he is not as much of a hero as any of the full grown Spartans of old of whom the classics so eloquently tell.—Portland, Oregon, News.

Generally speaking, the value of a thing is enhanced by its rarity; but gentlemen who have made themselves scarce contemporaneously with a defalcation are not therefore held in higher esteem by the victims who mourn their loss.

Fashion Notes.

Linen collars with turn-over fronts in English style are seen again.

Wide white embroidered muslin scarfs will still be used as neckties by little girls during the coming summer.

Fichus, scarfs, plastroms and all sorts of accessories of lace are used to transform plain costumes into dressy toilets.

Colored collars and cuffs are coming in again for morning wear. They are to be principally worn with flannel gowns.

Embroidered silk scarfs and handsome plaid handkerchiefs are the simple trimmings to be seen on many of the round straw hats.

For travelling, high-standing collars, with a well-starched chemisette, are made of barred, striped or embroidered ginghams, or percales.

A turn-down collar of black velvet, with white lace arranged like a cascade, on a foundation of stiff net, is very dressy. A knot of colored ribbon may fasten it at the top.

Mull or silk muslin scarfs and square neckerchiefs have bands and stripes in many dull mozenage colors. There are also printed designs of birds and flowers of natural colors in the borders of square mull kerchiefs for the neck.

Spanish jackets are trimmed with a coin fringe. The coins may be either gold or silver strung on a fine chain. Black jacket of velvet are decorated by a fringe of flat jets.

Colored velvet basques, profusely trimmed with white lace, are to be worn with lace or silk skirts the coming season for house wear. The basques are very dressy and becoming.

A little jacket which is very becoming to youthful figures is made of black net, embroidered all over with gold, with a deep flounce of gathered lace, and a moire sash is fastened about the hips.

Jerseys decorated by a fine braid in coral designs covering the whole garments, are very stylish. Sometimes gilt or silver braid is used, and the effect is very rich if a trifle bizarre. Black silk jerseys are covered with braiding dotted with jets with a heavily-jetted fringe around the edge.

On the fine black jerseys inch wide strips of colored jersey cloth are stitched in fine chain stitch in fancy scroll patterns with gold thread so closely set that the strips is really appliqued on the back. These strips may be in cream, drab, blue, brown, beige, cardinal, or any of the popular colors.

New Books.

THE MYSTERY OF THE LOCKS, by E. W. Howe. Boston: James R. Osgood & Co.

The originality and strength which gave "The Story of a Country Town" an intense fascination and interest make "The Mystery of the Locks" one of the most remarkable novels of the season. In dealing with dark scenes and in weaving a soul mystery, Mr. E. W. Howe possesses a power that resembles the keen insight of Hawthorne: in portraying character he is most artistic, and in contracting a plot he is thoroughly dramatic. The clearness and unaffected earnestness of his style contribute in great measure to the full appreciation of the story which he proposes to tell. The scene is laid at Davy's Bend, a river town in the West, which affords an opportunity for fine and original descriptive writing. But Mr. Howe does not belong to the school of realistic writers, and the town and characters are interesting only for their artistic qualities. Upon a rainy night, a mysterious stranger takes up his abode in a forsaken house, called "The Locks" on account of the variety and number of the locks to the doors. The romance and mysterious life of the new inmate are graphically and impressively told. Several incidents of the book give thrilling impression—the rise of the river, the episode of the baritone, the footstep of the strange visitor. Tug Whittle and his meek friend are novel characters, and little Ben is pathetic and natural.

As the Art Age says: "In fiction, the first place may be accorded to 'The Mystery of the Locks,' by E. W. Howe. This author, by the unusual and peculiar success of his first book, 'The Story of a County Town,' has taken a foremost rank among those Ameican writers whose works savor of the soil. It is probable that this new book, which is in many respects an improvement on its predecessor, especially as regards artistic form, will add much to his reputation. The portrayal of local American characteristics is carried by Mr. Howe to a science."

"Mothers Should Note This."

Under this caption an old physician writes to a Cincinnati Medical Journal, that in view of the fact that people living at a distance from cities are frequently obliged to resort to cough mixtures already put up for use, they should provide themselves with only such remedies as are known to be free from opiates, poisons and narcotics; thus avoiding not only danger, but even fatal results. He recommends the recently discovered Red Star Cough Cure which analyses and tests by various Boards of Health proved to be purely vegetable as well as prompt, effective and entirely harmless.

Bishop Clark, writing in the Independent, says: "A student in the Andover Seminary, whom I well knew and who afterward became a very useful minister, was suspended for a while, because of the offence that he gave when it came his turn to 'return thanks' at the close of a common dinner, by venturing to suggest that, if it were consistent with the devine purpose, it would be gratifying to have some improvement in the fare."

Maiden ladies who have passed the age of spring chickenhood will do well to try the custom in vogue in Kentucky, where they believe that she who puts on a knit silk garter the first day of the year, and wears it continuously, will certainly marry during the year. Cut this out and paste it on the corner of your looking-glass.

"What is Life?" was the subject discussed at a meeting in Lowell, not long ago. Life in Lowell must be a very serious thing, and we have no doubt that the discussion threw a gloom over the whole community.

Since it is estimated that 2,000,000,000 letters are written by women every year, the Chicago Rambler thinks that "the annual number of postscripts written is 1,999,999,999." This is sufficient evidence that the Rambler never was blessed with a large feminine correspondence. Otherwise it would know that the proportion of postscripts to female letters is on an average something like three and one half to one.

Woman is herself a creature of intuition, as everybody will admit, but that's no reason why she should sally out on the street with a thick drab veil drawn over her face away down to her chin and then expect every male being of her acquaintance she meets to recognize her half a block away.

Acrostic—a rafter. Don't give it away.

Mrs. David Davis had been out to the hen-house to empty a pan of swill, and with three new-laid eggs in the pan was wandering about the front garden looking to see whether the peach-buds had started yet or not, when a stranger drove up to the gate. "Good morning, madam," said he, bowing politely as he spoke. "Mrs. Davis. I presume? Is Mr. Davis 'round?" Mrs. Davis thought deeply for a moment before replying. Then with some hesitancy she said; "No, sir, I think not. That is, not exactly. But I must say he's pretty near it."

Schoeppenstedt says of course Mr. Proctor wouldn't tell a lie just 398 ways, but he knows himself from personal experience that a hand at whist can be made up in 635,013,559,998 ways, with only two measly spot trumps in it out of a possible thirteen.

Blitz Quiets the Baby.

It was in a neighborhood of frame houses in Brooklyn. Mrs. Blitz had been on a shopping tour, and on her homeward way had gone within one door of her house when a neighbor saluted her:

"Mrs. Blitz, please come in and hear the noise that is going on in your house. Believe me, that is what we are subjected to every time you leave home. What on earth do you imagine it can be!"

The racket was certainly alarming. The house of Mrs. Blitz seemed to be in the possession of a mob. The noise of falling bodies, the rumbling of weighty objects, and screams like the shrieks of a maniac sounded through the intervening walls. Mrs. Blitz listened calmly, and then spoke with reassuring serenity;

"Oh, that is all right. Do not be at all disturbed when you hear that. It is only Mr. Blitz. He is keeping the dear baby quiet."—Harper's Bazar.

Three Reasons.

Why every one needs, and should take Hood's Sarsaparilla in the spring:—

1st: Because the system is now in its greatest need. Hood's Sarsaparilla gives strength.

2nd: Because the blood is sluggish and impure. Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies.

3rd: Because, from the above facts, Hood's Sarsaparilla will do a greater amount of good now than at any other time. Take it now.

The ruling passion of editors in these times is condensation, which even the episode of lovemaking is unable to conquer. In proof of this it is said that one of the fraternity addressed the following laconic communication to his sweetheart: "Dearest, I have carefully analyzed the feeling I entertain for you and the result is substantially as follows: I adore you! Will you be mine? Answer." Then, after a moment of thought, he added in a dreamy, professional way: "Write only on one side of the paper. Write plainly and give real name, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith."—Providence Telegram.

Virtue Is Its Own Reward.

"I haven't felt the times as hard for many a year as I have during the past winter," said a decent-looking laboring man who was surrounded by several others of his class on an East Boston ferry boat the other night.

"But they are improving," said another man.

"Yes, I guess they are," said the first speaker, "but I tell you it was a mighty tight pull with me during the winter; my wife got so run out of clothes that she had scarcely a rag to her back, I was out of shoes myself, and many a day I hadn't a meal except what kind neighbors brought in. But we suffered most from cold. We had no coal."

"H'm," grunted another man who looked as if he could achieve a success in the prize ring; "I don't think the times are so hard. I have spent a pleasant winter, have always been warmly clad, had a warm place to work in, and not too much to do, besides having plenty of good, plain food, and at night a good clean bed to sleep in."

"I guess your an employee of the custom house or the navy yard," said the first speaker.

"What have you been doing during the winter then?"

"I've been in the house of correction."

"What for? As an attendant?"

"No; for larceny."—Boston Courier.

It Rained in London.

"I heard a story in New York," said Emery Storrs, "the other day that rather amused me. You know the Knickerbocker club there is the nursery of the Anglo-mania. You don't find anything at the Knickerbocker club but b. and s., as they call it, and English literature. English newspapers are daily filed; footmen and tigers abound, and the whole atmosphere of the place is the one eyeglass order. A friend of mine, Captain Bacon, was coming up the street in front of the club, when a young man whom he knew came out.

"'Why, Jack,' he said, 'what's the matter? Got your trousers rolled up and an umbrella spread. Why, it is a bright day—what does it mean?'

"'Yes, my dear boy. Sun here, you know, but they've just got a cable in the club house that it's rainin' in Lunnon. You see!'"—Chicago Herald.

"Can, eh? And I can make the tenant pay?"

"I'll guarantee you can."

A new telephone instrument has been invented by which the crying of a baby may be heard at the distance of a hundred miles. Of the fifty millions of people in this country there may be a dozen or two who yearn to hear the yells of a baby a hundred miles distant, but we doubt it. A contrivance that would prevent the crying of a baby being heard at a distance of ten feet is what the sleepless parents of this country demand.

Nobody Who Uses

Who uses Sulphur Bitters can remain long unwell. The foreman of the Shapleigh Machine and Screw Works, Boston, Mass., L. B. SMITH, says: Ever since birth I have been troubled with Salt Rheum; my body was covered with scales and patches, and when I bent my fingers the flesh would crack open and bleed. The itching and burning feeling almost drove me crazy. Your Sulphur Bitters has done me more good than anything I have ever used, and I think it is a great blood purifier, and I advise all so troubled to use

The wife of DEACON CARLETON, First Baptist Church, Winchester, Mass., says: My eldest son was troubled with Rheumatism so bad that for over three months he was unable to leave his bed; his knees and joints swelled so that he could not feed himself. The best physicians here failed to help him, and I tried Sarsaparillas and all manner of liniments without benefit. A gentleman told my husband to use Sulphur Bitters, as he thought it was an honest medicine. In three days from the first dose of Sulphur

And I do not think too much can be said in its praise.

EXZEMA OR SALT RHEUM.

Another Clear and Positive Recovery—An Elderly Lady's Letter.

Among the numerous letters received by Dr. Kennedy testifying to notable Salt Rheum cures, the following will be found of interest to our readers, who may accept our assurance of its perfect authenticity and truthfulness:

WORCESTER, Mass., March 23, 1884.

Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.

DEAR SIR: Until recently I have been for three years a sufferer from Salt Rheum. It followed upon an attack of Erysipelas, for which I was for a long time under medical treatment. I placed myself again in the hands of the physicians who did, I have no doubt, all that could be done. One thing is sure, however, I was none the better for all the medicine they gave me. The painful and unsightly disease made continual progress, until I began to fear I should never get rid of it.

By means of one of those accidents that often result in so much blessing I had my attention called to your FAVORITE REMEDY, which I was told would surely do me good. I used it, and within a much shorter time than I would have believed possible, I received a permanent cure. I am now perfectly free from Salt Rheum. What a comfort this is, and how it places your wonderful medicine in my opinion, you may guess at, but never know. I keep it now constantly in the house as a family medicine.

Yours truly, MRS. DINAH PHAIR.

Mrs. Phair sometime since, when on a visit to Kansas, found a case of Salt Rheum, could not get FAVORITE REMEDY, sent to New York City for it, and cured the case.

HOW THEY MAKE LOVE IN TEXAS.

I am waiting in the meadow
While the evening shadows fall;
While the sunset's golden splendors
Fade away beyond recall.
O'er the earth a dewy fragrance
Flings a mantle sparkling bright,
Quivering with an untold beauty,
Flashing back the waning light.

Meet me darling, I am waiting
'Neath the sighing aspen tree;
Round me winds of eve are sweeping,
Whispering to my heart of thee.
Hasten! On my lips are burning
Words to thee I would impart;
Truest love and hope are beating
In my restless, throbbing heart.

Now the dark'ning world is sleeping,
Resting from all grief and care;
Now the silent stars are gleaming
On her tranquil bosom fair;
But my heart is growing weary,
And a pang akin to woe
Steals upon me in the gloaming,
While the shadows come and go.

But I know you will be faithful,
Well I know you will be true;
In your heart a kindred feeling,
Like the love I bear to you.
So I'll cease from all repining,
Banish every doubt and fear,
For, though the fragrant gloaming,
I can feel your presence near.

SOME RECOLECTIONS OF APPOMATTOX.

BY MAJOR H. C. HALL,

LATE OF FIRST MAINE CAVALRY.

On the 8th of April Custer with his Third Division of Cavalry Corps had had the advance and at Appomattox station, early in the evening, intercepted and after a short but sharp fight, captured four rebel railroad trains loaded with supplies that had been sent up from Lynchburg for Lee's suffering army. It was dark when our Division, the Second, commanded by Gen. Crook, arrived. The fighting was all over and some of the cars had been broken open and the men seemed to be helping themselves to whatever they could find of value or service to them. They had been obliged to subsist for several days upon what could be picked up in a poor and impoverished country; their stomachs were sadly in need of support and the search for food was therefore earnest and thorough.

Our halt here was short and when we started out again our Division took the advance. We marched until between nine and ten o'clock when we went into camp with a happy prospect of a much needed night's rest. After the horses were picketed and were enjoying the fruits of the Virginia farmers' cornfields I looked for my darky to take my horse and prepare my supper, but no darkey could I find, nor could I hear that he had been seen since we left the field of Custer's capture. I thought he had probably got left somewhere by accident, not an uncommon thing on the march in the night time, and he would eventually come in. In about an hour he did come, but minus his mule. He rode one horse and led the mule on which was packed my blankets and spare clothing, provisions and cooking utensils and the forage for the three animals. The darkey was a big, black, faithful fellow and was feeling very badly. He said that while we were halted near the captured trains he left the mule in charge of another man and went up to the broken cars to see what he could find in the line of food or forage and that when he returned the column had moved on and he had been unable to find the man or the mule. I saw that it would be useless to tax the strength of wearied horses to make further search that night, and as he appeared to be feeling worse than myself I tried to console him with the thought that he would probably recover his loss as soon as it was daylight in the morning.

Well, the prospects for the comforts of life, even camp and field life, for the present and the immediate future, were not flattering nor pleasant to contemplate; but a good fire of hickory rails and a saddle for a pillow made a very acceptable substitute for a bed, and soon I was forgetting my discomforts and the displeasing suggestions of my loss. So much sleepless and exciting labor, with the cares and anxieties incident to such service, seemed to have distended every nerve and fibre of my body, and when I got into a restful position and the internal pressure began to subside, a most pleasing and delightful sensation came over me and took away all desire or thought of sleep. While lying in this happy condition an order come "Saddle up and be ready to move out immediately."

The tired men were quickly aroused, the wearied horses once more under the saddle, and we were soon in column moving away again to the left. Only our Brigade, the 3d of the 2d Division, commanded by Brev. Brig. Gen. C. H. Smith, Colonel of the First Maine, and one section of artillery, had been ordered out. Gen. Smith's instructions were to seize the Lynchburg road, the only remaining avenue of escape for Lee's army, and to hold it at all hazards even to his last man. Soon after midnight we reached the road, turned to the right and moved forward to a little eminence a short distance south of Appomattox C. H., called Clover Hill, where we encountered the outposts of the enemy whom we quickly drove in. After a few moments surveying in the darkness Gen. Smith wisely determined to form his line and make his stand here. Accordingly the First Maine was dismounted and ordered into position across the road on the summit of the hill and the two pieces of artillery on the same line in the road, while the other regiments, the 6th and 13th Ohio and the 2d N. Y., were held in reserve a short distance in the rear.

The night was dark, damp and cold, and as we could have no fires our only source of warmth and comfort was in vigorous exercise, and that our exercise might profit as well as to warm and comfort us, we set about to construct some works that would be at least a little protection to us when the attack should be made, which was momentarily expected. Some time before daylight we had on my part of the line at least, on the left of the road, quite a formidable bullet-proof breast-work made of fence rails and such dirt as could be dug up with pointed sticks and sharpened rails, and was impatiently waiting for darkness to disappear and speculating upon the probable events of the coming day.

Just as the glimmer of the new day appeared in the eastern sky the enemy was announced by the sharp crack of the carbines of our videttes in front. It proved to be a strong reconnoitering party that had been sent out to ascertain what rude force had insulted their outposts in the darkness and had thus boldly planted itself squarely across their only line of retreat. A few rounds from our cabines, and a few quick successive shots from the artillery, gave them the information they had sought and sent them flying back to their lines. The firing of the artillery was continued some minutes—firing into the darkness—into we know not what! Perhaps thirty shots were sent and the sound of those guns echoing over the hills on that early morning air, was grand and inspiring, and it effected a two fold advantage to our forces which I think has never been publicly reported nor fully appreciated.

At that hour, although unknown to us, Lee's whole army was in our front, a large part of it only a mile away resting on the hill slopes and in the valley before us, and the little town of Appomattox, or perhaps more properly, Appomattox C. H., lay between us and his main force. The shells from our guns must have passed over the town and into his camps beyond. The sharp rattle of our carbines, and the quick successive shots from the artillery magnified our small force in his eyes and caused a more perfect and extended preparation for his contemplated advance, while it quickened the wearied pace of our brave boys of the 5th and 24 Corps, who had marched all the long night that they might be with us in the contest that was inevitable in the morning. Indeed, Gen. Chamberlain broke off his Brigade from its Division of the 5th Corps and came three miles on the double-quick to the field, and the colored troops, too, of the 24th corps took the lively step of our artillery music and came grandly into position where they could be effectively used under the eye of Gen. Sheridan. All this, too, at the time, was unknown to us; we only knew that Sheridan was in command and that he never failed to afford us needed help.

Full daylight appears and our line is intact and undisturbed. The sun comes up over the wooded hills and soon begins to drink up the cold dew that sparkles in its warming rays and yet quiet reigns along our line! Seven o'clock comes and all is still! Seven thirty, silence! Seven forty, ditto! Seven fifty! They come! See! On our left front! The whole fighting force of Lee's army! And such a force! As we look down upon them from our position, moving slowly but firmly toward us, they appear an unorganized mass—no military formation of any character. More than an army they resemble an armed mob of mad men; determined: desperate. When they come within range we open on them with cannon and carbine, but our fire produces no perceptible effect on them. Still on they come and hotter grows the fire from our carbines but it does not impede their progress, nor turn them from their purpose. When they come so near as to threaten our capture we are ordered to fall back to our right and rear. They see us in retreat and still come howling after us. They have shot so many of our artillery horses we have to abandon one gun to them. To us, weak and wearied as we were, the retreat was most sad and painful. Ordinarily cavalrymen on foot are but little better than loons on the land, but I think here, after the first quarter of a mile, we would willingly have exchanged our powers of locomotions for the comparative strength and facilities of the loon.

To this time we had passed over open or cleared land, but a short distance to the rear was a dense wood to which we were directed and when we got there a gladder sight never greeted sad eyes than met ours. Concealed a few yards back from the front of the woods was a long line of troops, of colored troops only, waiting for us to retire behind their line that they might advance without bringing us between two fires. The sight was most cheering and was revolutionizing to our feelings and to our hopes! We had no idea that there were infantry within twenty miles of us, and we wondered why Sheridan didn't attack them with his whole cavalry force and not let us be driven from the field. The mystery was now solved. Sheridan proposed to end the war right there and then, and that with as little loss of life as possible.

The colored troops of the 24th corps were up and in position. Gen. Chamberlain's Brigade was in position. The cavalry was massed on the left for a final charge. Just as we got in the rear of the 24th corps a sergeant, who had charge of the lead horses of our company, came to inform us where the horses were, and to report for orders. I gave him the necessary instructions and took his horse. I was so fascinated with that splendid line of troops extending in the woods to the right and left farther than I could see that I could not leave them, and besides I had never seen colored troops under fire, and had a great desire to witness their bearing in action. Here was my opportunity.

The great strain our cavalry brigade had sustained, especially in the last twelve hours, I knew had totally unfitted with men and horses for further service until they could be rested and refreshed, so that I should run little risk of censure for a short absence from my command. The line officers of the colored troops were all worthy young white men who, as non-commissioned officers, or privates, had been tested in active service in other regiments, and had been recommended for promotion, and who, after having passed a rigid examination by a board of army officers, had been commissioned and assigned to duty where their services were required. I stood and watched them with increasing interest. They seemed to be vying with each other to see who of them could infuse the most enthusiasm into their men; the men were as eagerly imbibing the arder and spirit of their brave young officers, and each seemed to feel that he was able to whip twice his weight in angry Rebs. The men had not yet seen the enemy, who was diagonally approaching their line, but they had not long to wait, for in a very few moments the welcome command was given and they sprung forward in the most perfect order I had ever seen troops move into action, so that long line of shining faces and bristling bayonets emerged from the thick woods into the open field it presented a most gorgeous and thrilling spectacle:—a memorable sight,—the last line of troops I ever saw engage an enemy. The exultant Rebs were still coming on, and had already presented a flank to this line, but when their eyes met this most unexpected sight they seemed for an instant paralyzed, and then as quickly recovering their senses turned on the run to the rear.

I have thought a thousand times how I would value a photograph of that scene as I saw it then and as I remember it still; a long line of armed men for whose enslavement the war had been begun and had been continued to that moment, with a back-ground of deep, dark woods a few paces in the rear out of which they had just come, and bravely marching into the open fields towards the east in the early morning sunlight, while the great army of their proud masters, reduced to a sad remnant, was fleeing helpless before them.

Just then a little white flag appeared before Custer's line: A halt was ordered: Hostilities ceased; THE WAR WAS OVER!

I returned to my regiment and found the men quietly resting. I looked for my darkey and he was missing again; presumably looking for the mule; presumably he is looking for the mule yet; presumably he will return when he finds the mule. I have waited patiently twenty years for his return.

During the day some of our men had permission to go over the ground of our moving conflict to gratify their curiosity and see what they could pick up that would be of value or interest as trophies from that memorable field. Private I. C. Mosher of the First Maine, while prosecuting his search, discovered by the side of a dead Confederate a living memento, a little pup no more than four or five weeks old crying and moaning piteously. It was a custom quite common among the Confederate soldiers, much more so than among the Union, to keep pets—dogs, cats and smaller animals, and sometimes birds in rude cages, and to take them along on the march and even into action. This little dog had undoubtedly been brought all the long way from Richmond or Petersburg and had endured the hardships of that sad march, and shared the scanty rations of his kind master, whose life had gone out on the field in that last battle. Mosher took the wee little rebel along to camp, fed him and in a little time he was thoroughly reconstructed, except in name,—Rebel—and as happy and playful as his little doggish nature could be. The little dog continued with his new master, growing finely until sometime in the summer when we were on duty at Chesterfield C. H. when he was sold and taken to New York.

We remained here in camp until the next morning, the 10th, when our Brigade had the great pleasure, and the greater honor, of being designated to escort our great Chieftain, General Grant, back to Petersburg; but before we set out, at the suggestion of Grant, Smith, or Sheridan, I know not which, were permitted a farewell look upon the brave men and the representatives of other brave men who had fought us so hard and so long. As we approached their shelterless camps, their little fires still smoking, and thirty thousand unarmed men lying idly about them, our regimental band struck up the liveliest Yankee Doodle that has ever been invented. Our men were cautioned as we rode among them to make no remarks that would irritate or in any way injure the feelings of those erring men, whose cause had expired there, and whose political hopes were being buried in that field; but there was no necessity for such an order, for whatever of bitterness, or of enmity we may heretofore have entertained towards them was now banished and forgotten and only worthier and kindlier feelings actuated us.

Close down by their camps stood galliant "Little Phil," our cavalry idol, who had contributed so much genius, wisdom and skill to the success that had at last crowned our united efforts, and as our regiments came up to him they seemed to vie with each other in giving the heartiest welcome. He acknowledged the generous greetings with a genial smile and no sign of show or selfish pride, but with a look and expression more forcible than words that spoke, "God bless you boys! You have nobly performed your part in accomplishing the grand result before us; I have done no more."

As we looked about on that great body of men whom we hoped, and ex-expected to meet in arms no more forever, in all our joy and gladness we could not prevent a feeling of sadness as we realized their humiliating situation and thought of the sorrowful homes that would welcome them, of the desolation and distruction they had invited to that portion of common country, and of the army of the dead that would return not with them. We passed on our way to Gen. Grant's headquarters, where his carriage joined us and then proceeded on our way by the best roads towards Petersburg.

How Gen. Grant Swore.

I noticed a short paragraph a few days since referring to Gen. Grant's profanity. I happen to know the general pretty well, having been with him as one of his staff at different times during the war, and I never but once heard him make use of any word that could be called profane and that was "dog on it." The article reminded me of a little incident that came to my notice at Memphis just previous to the general's going to Young's Point, above Vicksburg. I was smoking a cigar with the general in his room, when a dispatch arrived which provoked Gen. Rawlins, the chief of staff, and which Rawlins read to the general, and with some pretty rough oaths urged him to take summary measures with a prominent general who had, I believe, disobeyed or transcended orders.

The general, in his good-humored way, turned to me and asked: "Do you know what I keep Rawlins for?" I replied no, unless it was on account of his valuable services. "I'll tell you what for. I never swear myself, so I keep him to do it for me when occasion needs." The time I refer to when he said "dog on it" was at Lexington, Ky., on our ride from Knoxville, when a certain mule contractor wanted to escort the general through the town with a band of music, to avoid which we got out of the hotel by a back way and drove incognito to the Louisville train. After being seated in the car the man came and undertook to remonstrate with Gen. Grant for giving him the slip. The general was angry and annoyed and said: "Dog on it, sir, do you want to show me around like a circus?"—Dr. E. D. Kiltoe in Inter-Ocean."

A Japanese Postman.

As in America, so in Japan, the postman wears his uniform. It consists of a suit of green cloth, a wide butter-bowl hat and straw shoes. The mail bag swings under his arm, or is bushed along in a little two wheeled cart. He is always running or trotting along. You know that in Japan men do nearly all the work that we make horses do here, so you see the Japanese postman carry, hasten along from station, to station travelling on a quick run mile after mile, up hill, down dale never stopping until he reaches the place where another postman is waiting to receive the mail and run on with it in his turn. So the mail is carried in the greater part of of the Empire. To a few places reached by steamers it travels as in the United States..

Scott's Emulsion of Pure

Cod Liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, In Acute Pulmonary Troubles. Dr. F. B. Strickland, New York, says: "I find your Emulsion very beneficial after all acute pulmonary attacks in adults, and in children during and after such diseases."

After her grandmother had given her a good scolding, a little mischief was overheard to himself; "Somebody is cross in this room; 'tain't me and 'tain't dolly and 'tain't kitty. I wonder who it is!"

Bardette in Kansas.

Extracts from the captain's log book and the diary of a reformed lecturer: This is the Kansas City, Fort Scott & Gulf railroad. There is only one road out here that can call the turn on it for the initials. That is the Kansas City, Saint Joseph & Council Bluffs. When you see those initials on a freight car, you feel as though you were in the presence of The Chief Tough Cuss and High Muckey Muck of the Sword Swallowers of Jericho and Daughters of Jezebel.

We cross the state line near Arcadia, Mo. "I think," remarked the precise lady with her own hair and teeth of art, "that we are now in "Missourah." And you would have been happy for a week to see how satisfied she was with the general average she made.

Ever the prairies. Billowy, unrippled, sweeping away in graceful undulations, stretching to the horizon in sweep as level as a lake, far reaching, vast, limitless, free as the winds that sweep over them—no mountain can be grander than the prairies.

The forests of Kansas do not impress the beholder as do these magnificent plains. There is nothing vast, nothing awe inspiring about a Kansas tree. It does its best, but it runs so much to wraps and knots and corns and cramps and bunions and warts and excrescences and crooks and twists and hunches that it can't get very high. It wastes its energies in crookedness. But maybe catches that from the Indian agents.

Anyhow, a danger board ought to be put up near a Kansas forest, lest some careless man might step on it in the dark.

Comes down the long sweep of the prairie the sturdy settler. There is no snow, but he drives a sleigh. The sleigh weighs somewhat less than a ton, and is drawn by an only ox, and he an orphan. I judge that he is an orphan from the tender, reproachful expression that films in his dim and glazing eye every time the sturdy settler fetches him a whack with the piece of a rail he uses for a "gad." If the rail doesn't break, and the ox doesn't die, the sturdy settler will get there. In fact, I think he is nearly there now.

This is a great big country. It makes you tired to try to see the nearest edge of it. The longer you look the further away it seems, and the further into this country you go the wider it grows.

Bless your soul there's room out here for the man who wants the earth. He could come out here and have it, and then there would be plenty left for the rest of us.—R. J. Burdette in Brooklyn Eagle.

California Redwood in England.

California redwood was introduced in England last year, the imports being 81,000 cubic feet which has all gone into consumption. The last cargo lot in July was sold at auction, bringing on an average 62 cents per cubic foot. The plank lot is described in "Farnsworth & Jardine's Annual Timber circular" as "being in many respects the finest and most remarkable cargo of wood ever landed in the country, consisting of the most extraordinary sizes, ranging up to fifty-two inches in width, every piece being almost practically perfect and cut on the quarters, without heart, knots, sap, shakes, or defects of any description. * * * It is suitable for furniture, inside house finishing and the best joiners' work, besides many other purposes.

"So far two cargoes of this remarkable wood have been landed in Scotland, where it has met with ready sale and has been highly appreciated by contractors, builders, cabinet-makers and other consumers. We are confident this wood only requires to be better known in this country to insure for it a constant and increasing sale and a prominent position amongst our wood imports from America." The price which the redwood brought in England was $51.66 per 1,000 feet, board measure, and the cargo was carried a distance of about 15,000 miles.—San Francisco Chronicle.

THE STORM KING BRIDGE SWINDLE.

Last Monday the House Committee on Railroads sat down on the Storm King Bridge scheme for swindling the State with great vigor. Leave to withdraw was granted and the project met an inglorious fate. There were not more than about a baker's dozen of us honest newspapers that opposed the fraud but virtue triumphed, and a subsidized press for once came to grief. Virtue and honesty have resisting and staying qualities perfectly wonderful to contemplate. That is why a handful of us met and vanquished the host who favored, for a consideration, the Storm King Bridge swindle.

CLEVELAND GOING SLOW, BUT SURE.

Democratic papers and office-seekers are taking courage and holding their heads higher than they did because it has been made clear to them, or at least they say so, that President Cleveland is really and truly going to "turn the rascals out." He has been quite active of late on this line, and Democratic hopes, which have been at a very low ebb ever since the new administration took the chair of state, are reviving. The hungry ones, and their name is Legion, already begin to drool in anticipation of the feast of fat things in store for them.

GENERAL GRANT.

The old soldier continues to improve. He is gaining strength as rapidly as could be expected although the swelling of his tongue has not altogether subsided. Everything looks as though he is on the road to near and complete recovery. Everyone hopes and prays that such may be the case.

☞ The Washington correspondent of the Boston Post said last Tuesday that Worthington, Collector of the Port of Boston, and Tobey, Postmaster, must go, both on the grounds of "offensive partisanship." Tobey might easily be removed for incompetency and ought to be.

☞ Hon. Eben F. Pillsbury of Boston, quite recently of Maine, has been appointed Collector of Internal Revenue for the Eastern Massachusetts District. He was for many years a gallant leader of the Maine Democracy, a zealous partisan, a bitter hater of Blaine, and has at last received his reward.

☞ War between England and Russia reports say is inevitable. Diplomacy has failed to patch up a peace, and it is thought a declaration of war will not be long delayed. Let it come; it will be a good thing for this country.

☞ The Soldiers' Home Carnival in Boston, which closed with a grand ball on Tuesday evening, cleared $60,000. The gross receipts were $76,000; total expenses $15,850.

— Dr. Harlow, everybody says, will have the handsomest residence and grounds in town when all finished. He is expending a good deal of money on the grounds, which are very pleasantly located, and the house will soon occupy them.

— In speaking of Mr. Fred Leed's soda fountain it should have been said that the cans containing the syrup are made of glass, which is greatly superior to block tin that has always been used to make them of. And the syrups are delicious.

— The Garland Oil Stove, which gave universal satisfaction last year, will sell on its own merits this. It is acknowledged to be the best stove in the market. Sold at Jenkins's Hardware store. His advertisement on this page tells the story.

— Very wisely the First Baptist church of Woburn has extended a call to Rev. Mr. Winn of Winchester, who has supplied their pulpit for nearly a year past, to become their pastor, and we are very glad to hear that he has accepted the invitation. He is an able minister of the gospel and one of the best men that ever lived. The Baptist church, which never was more alive and prosperous than now, have been very fortunate in securing Rev. Mr. Winn for their pastor.

— Daniel S. Jones returned this week from Iowa with eighteen very fine carriage and work horses for his father's stables in this place, where the animals may be seen. They were bought with particular reference to the wants of this market, and will suit those who wish first class horses.

— We are told that subscriptions to the Sun Electric Light came down in a very encouraging manner. Men of means ought to take hold of it earnestly and vigorously. It will make a good starter for the introduction of other important manufactories. There ought to be no difficulty at all in raising the requisite amount.

— Mr. Charles W. Nute has fixed up his shoe shop in first rate style. Handsome paper, a liberal use of paint and whitewash, and operations of the scrubbrush has transformed the room into one of the pleasantest in town. Mr. Buckman is a generous landlord. Mr. Nute is doing a thriving business every day in the week.

— Mr. Frank Green, the new Station agent at Woburn Centre, will occupy the Dow house belonging to the Railroad Company. It is a nice place. He is growing popular with our people, and Mr. Crockett did well to select him for Mr. Wood's successor. Frank is a son of one of the old Nashua conductors on the B. & L. R. R.

— We are sorry to see Waters and Murphy go off from the Police force, and it goes without saying that the failure to reappoint Chief Conn is a disappointment to us. But Tidd and Stowers are good men, we make no doubt, and will fill the bill perfectly. It is a mystery to us why Waters and Murphy were left off.

— Crystal Fount Lodge No. 9, I. O. O. F., will celebrate the 63d anniversary of the Order, on Tuesday evening, April 28, at their Lodge. After work there will be an entertainment and a good banquet will be served. Members of the order, residing in Woburn, but belonging to other Lodges are cordially invited to attend.

— Mr. Amos Cummings makes the sale of dry goods a leading feature of his business. The public should understand this for it will be to their advantage. Though dressmaking and millinery are carried on very largely and successfully by him much attention is also given to the dry goods trade and many goods sold at cheap prices.

— Last Saturday we received a pleasant call from Mr. Fred F. Green, editor and proprietor of the Quincy Advertiser. He brought his wife up to see us too, which was kind of him. Fred took his degree in the "Art preservative," etc. at the JOURNAL office some five years ago, and is a good fellow, besides being a credit to the craft.

— There will be a meeting of the full Board of Trade at their headquarters in the rooms lately occupied by the Mishawum Club in the Bank Building Tuesday evening, April 28. A full attendance of members is earnestly desired, and all others who wish to join this wideawake business organization are respectfully invited to attend the meeting Saturday evening.

— There has been real summer weather this week—hot. The grass has started nicely; the leaves are begining to put forth; every night we are treated to concerts of glees, songs and sweet flutings by the gay and happy frogs in the dales, and "The thrush whistles sweet on the spray; The turtle breathes forth her soft moan; The lark mounts and warbles away." Is'nt it nice?

— Last Monday Deputy Chief Walsh and Officers McSweeney, Waters, and Mulkeen went for rum and captured a lot of it. They raided the places of John McDevet and Michael Feeney on Rag Rock Avenue and J. E. Madden on Union street, at all three of which places they hauled in quantities of the ardent. Give the officers a chance, or let them to go ahead, and they will close up the rumshops in short metre.

— An important fact to be taken into consideration is, that the money subscribed for the Sun Electric Company by our citizens is to be paid into the hands of and managed by Woburn parties. This is a sufficient guarantee that every cent of it will be properly and judiciously used. We are permitted to say that the look for securing the location of the Company's factory in Woburn is first rate. Within six months of its establishment here every one will realize its importance, and be very glad that we have got it.

— Last week we mentioned the fact that Class '85 of the Medford High School had made arrangements with Mr. H. E. Strout of this place to make their class pictures after examination of the work and prices of several Boston photograph artists. This week we have the pleasure of adding that the '85 class of the Woburn High School have followed the very good example set by the Medford pupils, and decided to employ Mr. Strout to make their pictures also. This is a very fine compliment to Mr. Strout and his excellent work.

— Mr. Mark Allen, printer and publisher, has commenced a canvass for subscribers to a new Woburn Directory to be issued by him this summer. He is meeting with excellent success. It has been two years since his last Directory was issued, and there is a feeling extant that it is time for another. Especially is this forcible just now when a boom for the town is confidently expected, and everything is lively. A good many strangers will visit Woburn in the next few months with business designs, and a new Directory would come in play and be found very handy.

— There is no disputing the fact that public sentiment is strongly in favor of the appointment of Mr. Frank B. Richardson Superintendent of our town schools and the public has struck the right chord. We do not believe a man better fitted for the position could be found anywhere. As Principal of the Cummings school he has done the very best kind of work: he is perfectly familiar with all the machinery of our schools: no one can run that machinery more skillfully than he can: and besides, he is one of our boys. Without wishing or expecting to influence the Board in making the appointment, we hope to be pardoned for expressing a desire to see Mr. Richardson promoted to the office of Superintendent, for which he is so well qualified.

— Dr. Reynolds's new dental rooms are in College Block opposite Lyceum Hall. He is now fairly settled in them. There is probably not a finer or more inviting suite of professional rooms in the county than these new ones of Dr. Reynolds's. The reception room is handsomely carpeted, curtained, and furnished; the operating room is splendidly lighted and contains all the modern appliances for the best dental work; while his factory and other apartments are neat, nice and handsome. The location is unsurpassed: the quarters are elegant: and the Doctor is quite happy in them.

— There was a pleasant gathering of the Mendelsshon Club at the residence of D. H. Richards Jr. on Salem street, Monday evening, April 20th. Nearly all of the members were present The meeting was called to order by the President, and the Secretary's report for the year was read and accepted. It was unanimously voted to continue the organization. The following officers were elected. President, B. F. Whittemore; Secretary and Treasurer, Abijah Thompson; Conductor, P. E. Bancroft; Pianist, Miss M. L. Bancroft; Directors, F. D. Merrill, Geo. W. Kimball, James A. Brown, H. M. Eames; Music Committee, P. E. Bancroft, Geo. W. Taylor, F. D. Merrill, Miss M. L. Bancroft. Social conversation together with cake, ice cream, &c., made a very agreeable ending to the meetings of the Club for the year.

— Edward McEllhany, an intemperate man about 50 years of age, was found on Sunday last, on land owned by B. F. Flagg at the West Side, very severely burned. It is supposed that he became intoxicated, went to the place where he was found, lit his pipe to have a smoke and went to sleep. His pipe falling from his mouth set fire to his clothing and the leaves and grass around him. He was carried to the Almshouse by officer McSweeney where he died on Monday morning. This is the third terrible accident resulting from the use of rum that has occurred here with a few months, two of which have ended in death, and the third might have almost as well proved fatal. These three cases, with minor ones, will be taken as a text on which to found a sermon on rum-selling for these columns at an early day. Rum is slaying the people right and left.

— The informal talk of Dr. Welty upon "Surgical and Medical Emergencies," given before the Woman's Club last Friday afternoon, proved a very pleasant and instructive lesson in an exceedingly valuable branch of familiar science. Desiring to touch upon the largest possible number of important suggestions, the speaker passed rapidly from hour to hour, (deftly illustrating many of her directions with the aid of a lad who kindly extended his services as a model for bandaging) and more than filled the allotted time of speaking with statements and hints applicable to instant and self-reliant treatment of ordinary accidents, classed under the heads of fractures, hemorrhages, cuts, bruises, scalds and burns. Dr. Welty's treatment of her subject was intelligent and enthusiastic and commanded the continuous interest of an attentive audience. May 1, Baptist vestry, Mrs. Adelaide Claflin, of Quincy, will deliver a paper upon "The Duty that Women as a class owe to each other." Those who have already heard Mrs. Chaflin are anticipating a very thoughtful and logical address.

— After a residence of several years here Col. Harry Leach and his wife left late last fall for their future home in Pennsylvania. They were very highly respected and had many friends in Woburn who will read the following notice, taken from the Republican of Montrose, Pa., with sorrowful regret:—"Col. Harry Leach, whose decease was mentioned last week, was a native of New Milford, where he always resided, instead of at Montrose, till he removed to Boston, some 40 years ago. He was a son of Capt. Hezekiah Leach who came to New Milford about the beginning of the present century, and was for many years known as a popular and successful inn-keeper and farmer on the old Newburg Turnpike, a mile or more southeast of New Milford village. The wife of Col. Leach, who survives him, was a daughter of the elder William Ward, Esq., and sister of the late C. L. Ward, Esq., and also of the late Wm. C. Ward, Esq., of New Milford. Col. Leach and his wife returned from Boston to this place a few months ago, both in declining health, and his decease has been for some time expected. He was a very amiable and pleasant man, when in health, and had many friends."

— The concert given by the Mendelssohn Club last week Thursday evening was a complete success. The chorus rendered their selections in a very pleasing manner, excelling all past endeavors. Great credit should be given the conductor for his judicious training and untiring efforts. The Club had the assistance of Miss Chandler, violinist, and Miss Coffin, reader. Miss Chandler is a young artist of rare abilities. Her rendering of the Theme and Variations by Wieniawski displayed great skill and deep musical feeling. In response to an encore she gave that exquisite little Polish Dance by the same composer. In the Andante movement of the Gypsy Dance, the muted violin and the pianissimo piano parts produced a pleasing and artistic effect. Miss Coffin gave great satisfaction, and was very charming and graceful in her gestures. Mention should be made of the talented young pianist, Miss Bancroft, who filled in an acceptable manner, a very difficult position. Besides playing the chorus accompaniments with great promptness and firmness, she had the arduous task of accompanying the violin which she did in a very artistic manner. It is reported that she has been studying the past winter with Mr. Ernst Perabo of Boston. The club should be proud of the successful ending of their winter's work, and it is hoped that they will continue as an organization, thereby raising the musical standard which is so much needed in Woburn.—H.

The Board of Trade.

The character of the leading members and active workers of the lately organized Woburn Board of trade insures the best results to the town. An earnest, rightly-directed interest and activity on the part of prominent and well-to-do business men augurs speedy success of the aims for which the Board was formed, namely; important growth of population, diversity of mechanical industries, increase of taxable property, and general prosperity. Character, as well as money and energy, tells in every enterprise in which the public have an interest and are expected to take a part as well as in private ones. Of this, of the best quality, the Woburn Board of Trade does not lack.

The organization is meant to be a permanent one. With this idea the Executive Committee have secured the pleasant and commodious rooms on the third floor of the Bank Building lately occupied by the Mishawum Club and fitted them up very neatly for headquarters of the Board. The room for officers and committees has been nicely carpeted, furnished with cherry chairs, tables and desks; and the common one has been provided with furniture in black walnut. Handsome gas fixtures, curtains, etc. have been procured and put up, the whole being pleasant and comfortable. The furnishings are about completed and the Board was to have christened their rooms last evening.

The Executive Committee have several schemes for public improvement on the string from which beneficial results are expected. This week a subcommittee have been working up the Sun Electric Light Company, and at last accounts the prospect for securing its location here was flattering. Those of the Committee who have looked into the affairs of the Company thoroughly say it is a good thing—a very good thing indeed—and worthy of the encouragement of our citizens. Liberal subscriptions are being received.

There is no doubt about the permanency of the Woburn Board of Trade, nor of the benefit it will be to the material interests of our thrifty, enterprising and growing town.

Organization of the School Board.

A special meeting of the School Committee was held at their rooms on Friday evening, April 17, for the purpose of organizing the same for the year. All the members were present.

The meeting was called to order at 7.30 o'clock by Dr. George P. Bartlett, and, on motion, John Warren Johnson, Esq., was chosen temporary Chairman, and Dr. Bartlett temporary Secretary.

On motion of Dr. Bartlett the Board proceeded to ballot for a permanent Chairman. On the second ballot Mr. Thomas Emerson was elected. Respectfully declining the office on the score of business engagements, two more ballots were taken, on the last of which Dr. George P. Bartlett was chosen. On motion, the Board then proceeded to the election of a permanent Secretary, which resulted in the choice of John Warren Johnson, Esq. on the first ballot. Mr. Henry M. Aldrich was elected Auditor. Mr. D. B. Bond acted as teller in the elections.

On motion of Mr. S. Franksford Trull, the following Order of Business was adopted, the same to remain in force until otherwise ordered by the Board:—(1) Call to order. (2) Reading of the minutes. (3) Unfinished business (4) Reports of committees. (5) Communications. (6) Report of Superintendent. (7) Call for executive session. (8) New business. (9) Bills.

Under this order the minutes of the last meeting were read by Dr. Bartlett, former Secretary, and approved.

A communication was received from Superintendent Woodbridge, which the Chairman declared was of no importance, and it was not read. The Board then went into executive session, and the reporters were politely requested to retire, which they did in good order. It is understood that at that session the election of a Superintendent was postponed to the regular meeting of the Board, to be held on Tuesday evening, April 28.

REMARKS.

The Board is a good one. The timber in it is sound. It is composed of men well fitted by education and business habits for efficient and valuable work. Under its management our schools will regain the steps lost last year and soon take their old places in the front rank which they so long held against sharp competition under a better supervision.

Dr. George P. Bartlett, Chairman, was Secretary of the Board last year, the duties of which he acceptably performed. He has been honored by the town with important trusts; is well educated, has good sense, and takes a lively interest in our schools.

John Warren Johnson, Secretary, has served on the Board before. He is a leading lawyer in town; a graduate of Harvard; a practical business man; and also a warm friend of the schools.

Mr. Henry M. Aldrich, Auditor, has been Secretary of the Board, and was its Auditor last year, in the discharge of the duties of positions he was prompt, careful and obliging. His re-election to the office of Auditor was a judicious one.

Mr. Thomas Emerson, who was Chairman of the Board last year, was formerly for many years Superintendent of our schools and has a reputation as an educator which is not confined to this part of the State. After resigning the office of Superintendent here he was for a long time employed by the Harpers of New York as editor of their series of school books, which position he threw up last year to accept that of Superintendent of the schools at Newton, which important position he now acceptably fills, although still a resident of Woburn.

Dr. John M. Harlow is one of the strongest and best men on the Committee. The finances and general welfare of the schools will be closely watched by him. He ably represents the Sixth Senatorial District in the present Legislature; is a member of the Woburn Sinking Fund Commission; and enjoys the confidence of the people.

Mr. S. Franksford Trull has served with credit on the Board of Selectmen, also as a member of the Library Committee, and filled other public positions to the advantage of the town. Interested in everything that makes for the good of Woburn he will look carefully after the interests of the schools.

Rev. M. D. Murphy has had some five years experience as one of the School Committee which will entitle him to a prominent voice in the deliberations, and give weight to his ideas. He is well fitted by education for the position.

Dr. C. T. Lang is entirely at home in the Committee, having in quite recent years served honorably in the same capacity. He made a valuable member then, and will, we have no doubt, be equally efficient now.

Mr. Daniel W. Bond is the North Woburn Committeeman. For some years he has been an influential member of the Board of Selectmen in which he was last year Chairman of the Committee on Health, and a member of other important committees. He declined a re-election this year. Mr. Bond is a successful business man, and a friend of the common school system.

Thus have we briefly sketched the members of our School Board, which all must submit is a strong one.

"First-Class Goods."

In which merit is at once recognized, are now, and always have been, imitated, especially the manufactured article. After years of labor, and the expenditure of a fortune, in perfecting and placing before the public that which people appreciate and demand, some one who never had an original idea offers a counterfeit or substitute to compete with the genuine. Curtis Davis & Co., makers of the "Welcome Soap," find the above true in their case at least, the excellence of whose productions are everywhere acknowledged as the "standard" of quality, being imitated in every way that competition can suggest. But in the use of their goods, the consumer realizes the full benefit of value received. Welcome Soap confirms and sustains their great reputation.

An End to Bone Scraping.

Edward Shepherd, of Harrisburg, Ill., says: "Having received so much benefit from Electric Bitters, I feel it my duty to let suffering humanity know it. Have had a running sore on my leg for eight years; my doctors told me I would have to have the bone scraped or leg amputated. I used instead, three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and my leg is now sound and well." Electric Bitters are sold at fifty cents a bottle, and Bucklen's Arnica Salve at 25c. per box by Wm. W. Hill.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA

Has "decided" claims upon the public. This is positively proven by the immense good it has done to those who have been cured of diseases from which they have suffered intensely for years, as verified by the published testimonials, every one of which is a positive fact.

CHELSEA, VT., Feb. 24, 1879.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.: The 6th day of last June I was taken sick with a swelling on my right foot, and with an awful pain. The swelling went all over me. My face was swelled so that I could with difficulty see out of my eyes, and I broke out over the whole surface of my body; my right foot up to my knee was one raw, itching mass, and my ankle and foot so lame and sore I could not step on it, and it would run so as to wet a bandage through in an hour. In this condition Mr. W. F. Hood (of the firm of A. R. Hood & Son, druggists, of this town), handed me a bottle of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, and told me to take it. I did so, and by the time I had taken one bottle I found that it was doing me good. I have since taken five bottles more. After I had taken three bottles my soreness began to leave me, and I have been growing better every day, so that to-day I can walk without going lame. I have no soreness in my ankle and it has healed all up, and does not run at all. I owe my recovery to your Sarsaparilla. I write this to let you know that I think it deserves the confidence of the public, especially those who are troubled with humors.

Yours most truly,
JOSIAH PITKIN.

P. S. Every person that saw me said that I never would get over my lameness without having a running sore on my ankle; but thank God I have. J. P.

No other Sarsaparilla has such a sharpening effect upon the appetite. No other preparation tones and strengthens the digestive organs like HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.

Garland Oil Stove
1885.
THE WORLD'S BEST.

This popular Oil Stove is used and recommended by Mrs. Lincoln at the Boston Cooking School. Among its superior features is its new and novel burner, superior to any applied to other stoves and used only on the Garland. It does away with the ratchet wheels for moving the wicks which has been such a nuisance in oil stoves, and affords an even, steady flame. It has two or four-hole boiler tops. Baking, boiling and frying can be done at once.

The Garland is the most popular, convenient and powerful baker in the market to-day. We have sold a great number the last two seasons and they have given decided satisfaction, selling themselves on their own merits. The best is the cheapest.

Messrs. Twombly and Sons achieved a floral triumph in the decoration of Trinity Church, City, on the grand event in high social circles of the wedding of Miss Burnham and Mr. Frye, last week. It was a magnificent display. The chancel was spanned with a beautiful arch, twenty-five feet high and two feet wide, made of white lillies and scarlet geraniums. High palm trees and foliage plants filled the chancel, with huge pots of scarlet azaleas in front. A large basket of roses covered the communion table. The whole design, which was most artistic and original was arranged by the Twomblys. A reception followed the wedding ceremonies at the home of the bride on Commonwealth Avenue where the same noted florists had arranged a tastiful display. Garlands of Jacqueminot roses and lillies encircled the mirrors and brackets and at either end of the mantles stood enormous bouquets of Jacqueminots on the one hand and Cornelia Cooks on the other, and there were rich and elegant flowers everywhere. As floral artists the Twomblys lead.

"Outside Relief."

In comparing the town Report for the present year with those of past years, any man with two eyes may easily detect sundry strange omissions and commissions. It is no part of my object to point these out at this time,—with a single exception. In the report for 1884, we find that $2,708.61 was expended for outside relief to "people having a legal settlement in Woburn and residing in Woburn." This statement is followed, very properly, with a list of the names of 100 or more persons on whom such aid had been bestowed. This list is wonderfully suggustive to one who is interested in the origin of names. Let any one read it carefully, and see if he is not instructed.

But, under the same general heading in the Report of this year we find that $3,047.99, or 339.38 more than last year, was bestowed in outside relief, and yet there are no specifications and no names at all. Can any one tell us what this means? Who are the favored ones that have received this relief? For all the wealth of Woburn and of the Commonwealth, I would not utter nor write a single word of reproach for any honest and unfortunate man or woman's need of relief. I may yet need it myself. But if I ever do, let my name be given for what it is worth. But here we, the tax-payers, are told that more than $3,000 have been given for the "outside relief" of——blank! The only words of explanation given are "persons having a settlement and residing in Woburn." This surely is broad enough. It doubtless embraces the entire Board of Selectmen, including both Clerk and "Boss." But they can hardly have needed "relief" in the sense indicated. Then again the phrase would apply well enough to the School Board, including with one exception, the so called majority. That one, though for aught that appears, he may need "relief" in some sense, has not, it seems, of late had his residence in Woburn, and was not here, we are told, to sign, except by proxy, his illustrious name to certain important recent papers, great as was the importance of his exceptional learning and "illigant" culture. The single name signed to the Reply to the Minority Report in behalf of the majority, though itself infallible, still leaves us in doubt concerning the whereabouts of the missing member, and though the member is now "outside," we are not informed that he was one who received "outside relief."

So here we are again. Who are they? A native of the "swate isle," near by me, affirms that a certain other native of that isle and a great man, has often kindly invited his "friends" to "take something" from his stock in trade, taking care never to send them away empty; and then, as these friends failed to "pay up," and he, by virtue of his high office, "sat over against the treasury," he might have embraced the opportunity of securing for them "outside," and for himself inside, relief by one and the same official act, and no trouble to either party. But to this insinuation, it should be added, in all honesty, that the speaker, though far enough from being a Yankee, is no friend to the Boss, and so may be uncharitable.

So here we are again. Who are they who have received this outside relief to the tune of more than $3,000? If they were yankees, yankees should insist on having the names. The town ought to know, tax-payers ought to know, and may lawfully demand, these mysterious names. If the whole story were told, who knows but the kindhearted citizens of the town, instead of cloaking cases of real want under smooth-sounding generalities and voting their money away in the dark, may think it duty to appropriate a much larger amount of relief?

Dear Editor, perhaps you or the late Clerk can give us, in the form of needed information, a little

LITERARY NOTICES.

The numbers of THE LIVING AGE for April 11th and 18th contain, Organic Nature's Riddle, and Tasso, Native Faiths in the Himalayeh, The Lennox, The Hero of Lepanto and his Tunes, Some Gossip about Dante, and Land Moles and Water Moles, The Diamond Duke, In Lithuania, and R. L. Stevenson's Verse for Children, Chantries, and A Female La Trappe, Herrings and their Haunts, Ice Palaces, at Montreal, A Professional Visit in Persia, Hertfordshire, with the conclusions of "Plain Frances Mowbray" and "The New Manager," and instalments of "A House Divided Against Itself" and poetry.

It is a curious fact that one of the most famous poems in our language appeared originally in a magazine that seldom touches poetry at all, and the same periodical, after an interval of sixty-six years, now brings out another poem very similar in theme. Bryant's "Thanatopsis" was first printed in the NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW for September, 1817. The May number of the Review, just out, has a poem by Robert Buchanan on "The New Buddha." The critics found fault with Mr. Bryant's poem on the ground that it was un-Christian; it remains to be seen what they will say of Mr. Buchanan's. The question, Has Christianity Benefitted Woman? is ably discussed in this number by Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Bishop J. L. Spaulding. President J. L. Pickard writes on Why Crime is Increasing, and David Dudley Field on Industrial Co-operation, while Prof. Andrew F. West, of Princeton, contributes an article of great clearness and strength on What is Academic Freedom? James Payn, the English novelist, discusses Success in Fiction, and T. F. Thiselton Dyer Superstition in English Life. The new department of Comments keeps well up to the standard with which it started.

The May Number of HARPER'S MAGAZINE opens with a beautiful suggestion of Spring in its frontispiece, entitled Spring Blossoms. There is a fuller intimation of this bright season in the fine full-page illustration of Wordsworth's sonnet, Admonition. Prompted by the same impulse is A Witchhazel Copse, beautifully illustrated by the author. Birge Harrison, contributes Espanola and its Environs, with several striking illustrations. Through London by Canal is richly illustrated. Hark Comstock contributes Jersey Cattle in America, illustrated by excellent portraits. Anneke Jans Bogardus and her farm, illustrated, is full of pictures of old Dutch life in New York. A Wild-goose Chase takes the reader from Copenhagen to Skagen, and is richly illustrated. At the Red Glove and East Angles, are continued; and there are Passages from the Diary of a Hong-Kong Merchant, Constance Royal, and Lady Archer. The last is illustrated by a full-page engraving from a drawing by C. D. Weldon. Mr. George William Curtis, in the Easy Chair, and Mr. Charles Dudley Warner, in the Drawer, contribute to the reader's entertainment and amusement, and the other Editorial Departments are well sustained.

OUTING for May is a suberb number. There is an atmosphere of summer, of green fields, leafy woods, country roads, and buttercups—which makes it a welcome visitor, and the perusal of its fresh pages a delight. The table of contents comprises: a beautiful frontispiece—Race of the yachts America and Resolute in 1875; Song of the Princes May, A Plea for Picturesque Gardening, Love, At the Brook, The Hetch-Hetchy, Valley, The America's Cup, At the Bars, Across America on a Bicycle, Boating for Girls, The Flag of the Seven upright ones, Whist, One Girl Island, Camp Cooks, A Modern Tramp, Will Jackson's Ride, The Duplex or Dramatic Element of Life, A Marriage Festival in Hungary, Private Green's Lonely Reminiscence, In Italy, Arcadia, The Outing Club, Editor's Open Window, Among the Books, Monthly Record, etc., etc., Published by The Wheelman Co., Boston, at $3 a year.

PETERSONS MAGAZINE is a standard monthly with the best class of readers, while as a fashion magazine it is regarded as authority by all ladies of correct taste and judgment. The romance of each number is of the best, while its poetic productions are by writers of eminence. It is a clean publication, the taste for which grows with an acquaintance of its merits.

Readers of THE POPULAR SCIENCE MONTHLY can be quite sure of their money's worth in the May number, which is full of articles rich in thought, and information on living question of the day. Our Recent Debts to Vivisection is a graphic account of the benefits that have been conferred upon humanity by means of experiments on animals. The second article, by Professor W. K. Brooks, is a significant answer to the interesting question "Can Man be modified by Selections?" Dr. Max von Pettenkofer's papers on "Cholera" end in this number. Methods of teaching Political Economy, A Scientific View of the Coal Question, and Training in Ethical Science, are able articles. The Chemistry is devoted to vegetarianism. The Nervous System and Consciousness, illustrated, and Arctic Exploration and its Object, are both strong papers and there is also an article describing the patient labor, the ingenious methods, and the grand results of Pasteur's Researches in Germ-Life. An article, treating of the antiquity of man, under the title of A Very Old Master, followed by a sketch of M. Pierre Berthelot, close the body of the number. Illiteracy as a Source of National Danger and A Test of Philosophy are discussed in the Editor's Table, while twenty pages of Literary Notices and Popular Miscellany give room for a large variety in these departments. New York: D. Appleton & Company. Fifty cents a number, $5 a year.

Educated and Experienced.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is prepared by C. I. Hood & Co., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass., who have a thorough knowledge of pharmacy, and many years practical experience in the business. It is prepared with the greatest skill and care, under the direction of the men who originated it. Hence Hood's Sarsaparilla may be depended upon as a thoroughly pure, honest, and reliable medicine.

Health Hints.

To cure and heel a running sore, apply alum water twice a day.

A liniment of equal parts of oil of watergreen and olive oil, or soap liniment, is said to afford almost instant relief from pain in acute rheumatism.

Put five drops of chloroform on a little cotton or wool in the bowl of a clay pipe, then blow the vapor through the stem into an aching ear and instant relief will be afforded.

A simple remedy for neuralgia is to apply grated horseradish, prepared the same as for table use, to the temple when the face or head is affected, or to the wrist when the pain is in the arm or shoulder.

There is nothing better for a cut than powdered resin. Pound it until fine, and put it in an empty, clean pepper-box with perforated top, then you can easily sift it out on the cut; put a soft cloth around the injured member, and wet it with cold water once in a while. It will prevent inflamation and soreness.

An excellent glycerine ointment for chapped hands is made by melting, with a gentle heat, two ounces of sweet oil of almonds, half an ounce of spermaceti and one dram of white wax. When melted, remove from the stove and add one ounce of glycerine, and stir until the mixture is cold. The ointment can be scented with any perfume to suit the fancy. Keep it in wide-necked bottles.

Pneumonia is inflamation of the lungs. When the inflamation is on the lining of the chest it is pleurisy. The two may be combined. Pneumonia is a dangerous disease and requires prompt action. It is preceded by a chill, from which it sometimes is difficult to restore the natural heat. This chill is followed by a high fever, in which the heat beats rapidly. Chills may come from other causes than pneumonia, but unless sure of the cause and sure that it is not dangerous it is safe to suspect a coming pneumonia and to send at once for a physician.

Will You Pay Up Now?

The editor of a country paper says with much reason: "It is an experience of publishers that too many people are apt to think it matters but little whether the newspaper bill is paid promptly or not, that it is a small sum, and of but little consequence. This is not because subscribers are unwilling to pay, but because they are negligent. Each one imagines, because his year's indebtedness amounts to so small a sum, the publisher cannot be much in want of it, without for a moment thinking that the income of a newspaper is made of just such small amounts, and that the aggregate of all the subscriptions is by no means an inconsiderable sum of money."

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle.

Mrs. General Tom Thumb, was married on Monday to the Italian Count Primo Magri, known as "Count Rosebud." Thousands of people went to the church of the Holy Trinity, New York, where the ceremony was performed, but only about two thousand were admitted. Rev. Dr. Watkins, rector of the Church, performed the marriage ceremony.

A celebrated wit was asked why he did not marry a young lady to whom he was much attached. "I know not," he replied, "except the great regard we have for each other."

A naturalist has discovered that one of the curiosities of natural history is that a woman says "shoo" frighten chickens and "boo" to a goose.

Pray tell us, ladies, if you can, who is that highly favored man who, though he's married many a wife, may be a bachelor all his life. A clergyman.

Because a man happens to be possessed of a "a constitution of a horse," it by no means follows that his physician is justified in treating him like an ass.

It is thought that at their general conference next month the Mormons will renounce polygamy. But if they do, what will become of the "surplus?"

"Yes," said Jones, "when my wife gets mad she reminds me of a vessel under weigh." How so?" inquired Smith. "Because she's got her rancor up."

A receipt for lemon pie vaguely adds: "Then sit on a hot stove and stir constantly." Just as if anybody could sit on a hot stove without stirring constantly.

The Englishman who said that American girls did not know what to do with their arms certainly never had much experience in American parlors with the gas turned low.

A little girl whose geneaal idea of Scripture was better than her knowledge of detail, in quoting a well-known passage rendered it as follows: "Man is born, and woman is full of trouble."

Nora's Balance.

Last summer, during the excitement owing to bank failures in Indianapolis, I was watching the anxious crowd besieging the doors of a bank that was supposed to be in danger, when I overheard the following dialogue between an Irish woman and her husband:

"Nora, dhraw yer money out."

"An, shure, Patrick, I won't."

"But, Nora, you musht dhraw it out."

"Faith an, I won't dhraw me money out at all."

"Nora, an' don't yees know they'll lose yer money for yees ef yees don't dhraw it out?"

"An' sure, Patrick, ain't they better able to lose it than we are?"

Patrick was evidently overpowered with this last astonishing and unanswerable argument, and they both left the scene apparently satisfied. Fortunately the bank survived the pressure, and its ability to lose Nora's balance was not practically tested.—From the May Harper's.

In "A Naturalist's Rambles About Home," the author, Charles C. Abbott, speaks of the power of "charming" a bird or small mammal attributed to the black snake, but finds it impossible to verify. He has, indeed, on several occasions witnessed cases of supposed "charming," where small and exceptionally timid birds, like the chipping sparrow and summer warbler, were literally frightened to death by black snakes. Even in these instances, however he found on careful examination that the snake was suspiciously near the nest of its victim. "Evidently the bird experienced a struggle between the impulse to defend its nest and the desire to escape a dreaded foe, and this is, I think the explanation of its short fights and quick returns, as though held by a short string. A victim to these opposing emotions, the bird finally became exhausted, and fell to the ground within reach of the snake. Once I caught such an exhausted bird, and found that it was simply worn out. After a half hour's rest it flew away."

He Dropped.

He was a dude. He was fairly captured. She had roused him to that point of adoration that he absolutely knelt on the carpet, oblivious of his dress. The parting was all out of his hair from impetuous rubbing of it. He was funny, very, very funny to her, as in excited but mincing tones, he swore he loved her. "Those violet eyes—they are so bewitching—and I see a tear—is it a tear? Dearest, let me wipe the dewdrop from the violet." "Dude-drop," she murmured, and he dropped.—San Francisco Chronicle.

The Arabians have a funeral custom of placing ten cents in the mouth of a corpse to pay its passage over the river of death. If that is the price, it is an outrage. The fare ought to be reduced to five cents.

An English traveler, in looking over some American town names, came across the well-known ones of Pautucket, Shetucket and Nantucket. "Haw, haw!" he exclaimen. "I'm blessed if the whole family didn't took it!"

Times are said to be so hard in Galveston that when a clerk goes out on the first of the month to collect bills for a leading firm and comes home at night with a dollar and a quarter and the ceiling of his pants worn out by the boots of the customers from whom he collected it, the boss regards it as a good day for collections.

A couple of tons of powder exploded in Salt Lake City the other day, wrecking everything in the neighborhood and shaking the whole town. A deaf old woman who lived a couple of blocks away pricked up her ears and said, "Come in!" Then she said to her daughter: "Law me, I do believe I'm getting back my hearing."

The Vice-Presidents Gavel.

A Washington correspondent of the New York Independent writes: Some of Mr. Hendricks's friends presented him with a handsome gavel a few days before he came to Washington, but he could only take it to the Senate and lay it on the desk beside him; for it is well understood that both the constitution and declaration of independence would go to the dogs if he did not rule with the same little old "nubbin" of ivory—a little cube, not three inches long—which has done duty in the Senate for so many years that the memory of man showeth not when it was first adopted. And speaking of this little tool reminds me of what I have heard of Mr. Wheeler while he was speaker of the house (before he became Vice-President.) He was an admirable presiding officer, cool, quick, even-tempered, and always held the House well in hand. When there was too much noise he would bring down his hammer with great force two or three times, so that it called the attention of every one, and announce his determination to preserve order. Then he would strike again, again, again, at regular intervals, like the "knolling of a bell." The noise would begin to die down at the second blow, and as it lessened the taps became less heavy, though still recurring at measured intervals. It always had the desired effect. In five minutes the House would be quiet as a district school after the teacher had rung the 9 o'clock bell.

Land In Great Britain.

The total area of Great Britain slightly exceeds 56,750,000 acres; but the total cultivated area, is a little under 32,500,000 acres. The cultivated area, therefore, is roughly four-sevenths of or a little more than one-half, the total area. In England the proportion of cultivated area to the total is about three to four; in Wales it is somewhat over one to two; but in Scotland it is one to four. While the total area of Scotland is almost 19,500,000 acres, the cultivated area is just 4,812,000 acres. Three-quarters of all Scotland therefore are unreclaimed mountain and heath.

A village improvement society ought to be organized in every community, whose sole duty shall consist in seizing removing, burying, or otherwise disposing of unsightly and disease-inducing cans. A New Orleans paper refers editorially to the wonderful restoration to health of Mr. T. Posey, druggist, 225 Canal street, that city, who some time ago was prostrated by an excruciating attack of sciatica. After much suffering his wife applied St. Jacobs Oil, which cured him promptly and entirely.

Temperance.

If our homes have trap doors going down to dangerous depths, we do not content ourselves with warning the little feet that make the music of home. We fasten the doors with bolts and bars. And yet we sanction by license the open doors of ruin just beyond our thresholds.

Mrs. Mary F. Shields, of Colorado Springs, visited Wyoming, New Mexico and Arizona Territories, under a commission from Miss Willard, and in four weeks held conventions in all three, so that at the Decennial celebration "not one faileth" was the fact as to every state and territory of the nation, the W. C. T. U. being organized in them all.

The liquor men are not slow to see and use all national means for building up their business. It is said that at this very time, they are laying plans to secure an act of Congress to be capped by a supreme court decision, which will sweep away all state and local constitutional and statutory prohibition against the liquor traffic, and will give to the liquor crime the full license of the national constitution.

Burlesque Not So Spontaneous.

The funniest insight of the drama that has lately been vouchsafed to me was that of an actress who has been off the stage for a year or two previous to the present week, but who may be recalled as a little woman with a quizzical ugly face and wonderful ability in mimicry. Have you ever seen a workman adjusting the rusty and long-unused machinery of one of those old-fashioned hurdy-gurdy's in which a set of figures were moved by clockwork in harmony with the music? I did a long time ago, and the sight was vividly recalled to me on seeing the lady referred to rehearsing for a reappearance in the burlesque "Ixion." The memorized words of the role had been newly put into her noddle, the winks and ogles usual to burlesque had not been displaced since last in use, and a cylinder of fresh music was adjusted to her repolished voice. The essential things were in her, but they lacked perfect adjustment and regulation. The pretty gestures were out of cog with the puns, and kicks were illtimes to the verses of the songs, and as an alluring puppet she was not in true automatic accord with the rest of the toggery. After witnessing the slow process of harmonizing a couplet of doggerel, a skip of the feet, a waving of the arms, a pout of the lips, and the right accent of a joke, so that they all worked simultaneously, I concluded that burlesque isn't as spontaneous as might be supposed on seeing it performed.—New York Letter.

The Human Manufactory.

A man may eat and drink heartily all day, and sit and lounge about doing nothing, in one sense of the word; but his body must keep hard at work all the time or he will die. Suppose the stomach refused to work within ten minutes after a hearty dinner, the man would die of convulsions in a few hours; or cholera or cramp colic would rack and wreck him. Supposing the pores of the skin—meaning thereby the glandular apparatus with which they are connected—should go on a "strike," he would in an hour be burning up with fever; oppression would weigh upon the system, and soon become insupportable. Suppose the liver became mulish, the appetite would be annihilated, food would be loathed, torturing pains would invade the small of the back, and the head would ache to bursting.

Suppose the kidneys shut up shop, danger most emminent, sufferings unbearable, and death most certain, would be speedy and unenviable result. If the little workshops of the eye should close, in an hour he could not shut nor open them without physical force, and in another hour he would be blind; or if those of the tongue should close, it would become dry as a bone and stiff as steel. To keep such a complication machinery in working order for a lifetime is a miracle of wisdom; but to work them by the pleasures of eating and drinking is a miracle of beneficence.—Medical Journal.

"F. W. Kinsman, Esq.: Dear Sir:—With pleasure we order ten gross Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam, showing conclusively that merit has won the day, and that your Balsam is taking the lead over the many bottles of trash that now flood the market." —From Smith, Doolittle & Smith, Druggists, Boston.

It was a great mistake to suppose that men can be made rich only by making others correspondingly poor. If one manages to make himself rich by taking advantage of his neighbors' necessities, by giving scant wages, and demanding excessive returns, or by hoarding up his gains, and expending nothing, he is an incumbrance to the earth. But a man may keep his wealth in such living contact with society as to make it quicken the public pulse and increase the flow of general prosperity.

EXZEMA OR SALT RHEUM.

Another Clear and Positive Recovery—An Elderly Lady's Letter.

Among the numerous letters received by Dr. Kennedy testifying to notable Salt Rheum cures, the following will be found of interest to our readers, who may accept our assurance of its perfect authenticity and truthfulness:

WORCESTER, Mass., March 23, 1884.

Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.

DEAR SIR: Until recently I have been for three years a sufferer from Salt Rheum. It followed upon an attack of Erysipelas, for which I was for a long time under medical treatment. I placed myself again in the hands of the physicians who did, I have no doubt, all that could be done. One thing is sure, however, I was none the better for all the medicine they gave me. The painful and unsightly disease made continual progress, until I began to fear I should never get rid of it.

By means of one of those accidents that often result in so much blessing I had my attention called to your FAVORITE REMEDY, which I was told would surely do me good. I used it, and within a much shorter time than I would have believed possible, I received a permanent cure. I am now perfectly free from Salt Rheum. What a comfort this is, and how it places your wonderful medicine in my opinion, you may guess at, but never know. I keep it now constantly in the house as a family medicine. Yours truly, MRS. DINAH FRATE.

Mrs. Phair sometime since, when on a visit to Kansas, found a case of Salt Rheum, could not get FAVORITE REMEDY, sent to New York City for it, and cured the case.

LOVE CAME AGAIN.

Love was playing hide and seek,
And we deemed that he was gone;
Tears were on my withered cheek
For the setting of the sun;
Dark it was around, above,
But he came again, my love!

Chill and drear in wan November,
We recall the happy spring,
While bewildered we remember
When the woods began to sing,
All alive with leaf and wing;
Leafless lay the silent grove,
But he came again, my love!

And our melancholy frost
Woke to radience in his rays,
Who wore the look of one we lost
In the far away dim days;
No prayer we sighed, the dead may move
Yet he came again, my love.

Love went to sleep, but not forever,
And we deemed that he was dead;
Nay, shall aught avail to sever
Hearts who once, indeed, were wed?
Garlands for his grave we wove,
Yet he came again, my love!

A MULE'S OBSTINACY

AND HOW IT LED TO A MARRIAGE.

About two miles from my house, on my Dakota wheat farm, stands one tall, lonely tree. It is the only object in sight that breaks the low horizon, and for many a long mile, north, south, east or west, no other tree can be found. It stands just on the high bank of Smoky river, which goes curling and winding across the country westward, and close beside it stands Chris Tronsen's log house, built of logs brought down the river in the spring time from the North.

One day, early last spring, I had been to the next town to get an iron bolt made at the blacksmith's, to replace one that had been broken the day before and was riding home. My mule was loping at a good rate along the road which follows the river. And as we reached Chris's log house, which had just been newly whitewashed outside, I saw Chris sitting calmly on the door step, while Lotta, his wife, was lifting the heavy harness, and throwing it on to "Yack," their old white mule.

"Chris must be either sick or very lazy," I said to myself, "to sit and let his wife harness the mules." I did not know much about Chris then, but giving him the benefit of the doubt, I shouted, in passing:

"Sick, Chris?"

Chris shook his head in what I thought was a rather sheepish way, and Lotta looked over her shoulder and laughed.

In the hurry of the day's work, this occurrence slipped from my mind. But some time afterward, when I happened to pass their place again, I saw Lotta out in the fields driving the mules, which were fastened to the seeder. This in itself would not have been surprising, for the Norwegian women in the Territory, with their vigorous frames and robust health, often work with their husbands at the out-door labor. But I saw great, robust Chris himself paring potatoes outside the door. And just as I rose into view from below the river-bank, he caught up his pan and slipped into the house.

"No doubt he is a lazy, good-for-nothing fellow," I said to myself, "who has a thrifty, energetic wife. And so he sits down and does her light work, while she is out sowing the wheat. It might not have a bad result if he could be harnessed up with one of the mules for a day, and made to work under the whip."

After that I saw Chris himself at work in the field several times. But one evening, a week or two later, I passed there again. The mules were fastened outside the straw barn. The ground had been very wet for two or three days past, and of course the mules' legs were fairly coated with sticky mud which had partially dried on. Lotta was hard at work over the old white mule, scrubbing and rubbing, scraping and brushing and currying, as if her life depended on her success. And there on an overturned barrel, sat Chris much at his ease, calmly smoking his pipe and looking complacently on. I remembered what I had said to myself before about his laziness, and now I added:

"I will just stop for a few minutes, and see if the presence of a stranger won't shame the fellow into taking off his coat and going to work in his wife's place."

So I tied my mule to a ring at the corner of the house, and walked over to where Chris was sitting. He looked up and smiled, and said "Good-evening" with the same sheepish expression I had noticed before. And Lotta paused for a moment and stood up, her face glowing with the exertion, and laughed—I thought she would have done better to give her husband a good shaking—and said it was very warm. Then she went to work again, to get through, so she said before dark. But do my best, I could not lead the conversation to any explanation of the strange state of affairs, and Chris showed no disposition to take hold of the work himself.

When it was dark, Lotta led the two mules to their stalls, and then at last Chris condescended to rise and fasten the barn door. I was sure by their manner, and by Chris' expression when the subject was broached, that either he was outrageously lazy, or there was some odd explanation of his wife's doing so much of his hard work, while he sat idle. So I took pains, as I met one neighbor and another here and there about town, to make inquiries about Chris. And with one accord they all gave the same answers.

"Had Chris Tronsen a good reputation?"

"Yes very good."

"Was he industrious and steady?"

"As hard-working and steady as any man in town."

"Did he treat his wife kindly?"

"There cauld be no doubt of it. He was as kind-hearted as he was hard-working."

"Then why," I would ask myself, "was his wife always plowing, or rubbing down mules, while he looked on and did nothing?"

This all happened in the spring and early summer. But it is only about a week ago now that I drove over to Chris's one mild evening, to get some bags that I had lent him to use in carrying his grain to the elevator.

The year's work was over. The wheat was cut, threshed and sold. Then bar had been buried anew in a mountain of fresh wheat straw, which filled the door-yard with its pleasant, fragrant smell. The mules were tethered and browsing near by.

Lotta and Chris were sitting together on the doorstep, talking over the year's work, no doubt, while the sun was setting in a great bank of clouds, from behind which streamed out a fire of crimson and gold.

After Chris had got the bags and thrown them into my light wagon, he and Lotta asked me into their little parlor, the walls of which were simply the inner side of the logs, fitted, closed and hewed smooth. There was a gay-colored carpet on the floor, and on the whole the room was quite cheery and comfortable, and we sat down in the twilight without a lamp. After we had talked for some time about the crops and prices and the best way for banking up houses in winter, in which Chris was greatly interested, I said to Lotta:

"But you have worked almost as hard as Chris this year. You must be glad the summer is over."

Chris shifted uneasily in his seat. Lotta laughed.

"So now I shall tell why it was so, Chris," she said, looking at Chris.

He apparently did not anticipate much pleasure from the recital.

"But no," said Lotta, "you shall tell those first part, and I shall tell those last part, that is how we shall do."

Chris appeared still more uneasy, and laughed nervously, but after a moments hesitation, he plunged into his explanation of what I had so often wondered at.

"You haf onerly been lif here two year?" he asked.

"That is all," I said.

"Well, so this is all happen one year longer ago as that," he said. "Those time I lif alone in sod shanty, and Ruya and Oscar—those was the two mule, the last one he named for king of Sweden and Norway, because he is so good—they lif in other sod shanty. I haf onerly twenty acres broke then, and ready for sow seed. Very few neighbor then. Onerly Mr. Knudt Qualley and Mr. Peterson near. So then Mr. Jannsen, father of Lotta, he come to lif very near—onerly four mile away. And sometime I see Lotta on Sunday at meeting to Mr. Qualley's house, and sometimes I go to Mr Jannsen's house to borrow somethings. Then I go there almost efery day to borrow somethings, and Mr. Jannsen say:

"'Mr. Tronsen, you lose great time to borrow somethings,' but I say I like to ride so far to borrow somethings.

"And almost efery time it was Lotta what brought me those things what I came to borrow, and she tells me to come often. She say they always very glad to borrow me anythings."

"Now I can see," I said, smiling, "why Lotta did not tell this part of the story."

"Oh, no," said Lotta, "it is not any reasons at all. Chris he knows why he did come so often to see my father, better as I do."

"Well," said Chris, continuing, "so these days were very bashful, and I nefer dare to stay for talk with Lotta. I always talk onerly with Mr. Jannsen. Mr. Jannsen very good man," he added, in explanation, "but I rather talk to Lotta. But I always afraid, so I make believe I go efery day to visit Mr. Jannsen, and borrow somethings. And Mr. Jannsen he think I was his very good friend. So he say one day, 'Chris, I nefer had any ones care so much for me before, like you does, and come so efery day to talk with me.' So when I sees Lotta I nefer knows what to say, and so I borrow knife, or nails, or shovel, and go right away. So one day, after I go away, I say to myself, 'Next time I shall go and I shall say, "I hat not come to see Mr. Jannsen, I haf come to borrows somethings. I haf come to see Lotta, and I shall talk with Lotta.'" But when next time comes, I cannot dare to say so. And I talks with Mr. Jannsen all times. So by-and-by I wants to ask Lotta to be married with me, and come and lif here after new house is built. But I could not dare to talk to her about that. Well, then, so I had saved up my money for long time, for build house. But Oscar—those mule named for King of Sweden and Norway—he die; those good old mule! Poor Oscar! And so I must go and take those money, and buy new mule, so I buy white Yack."

An expression of actual misery settled on his face at this mention of white Jack, and it took him a moment to recover equanimity.

"Those dreadful mules!" he exclaimed, in continuation. "He eat and eat and eat. He eat oates, he eat his hay, he eat his straw bed all night. But he would not lof to work. He lof to put his ears up straight, and stand on his front legs, or lie down and roll after those harness is on. Sometimes he lie right down in furrow and roll, and break harness. And fire pour out of his eyes. He are a dreadful mule. So I whip him some—not too much, I very kind," he added at a reproachful look from Lotta—"and starve him little bit, to make him feel sorry for been cross. But all no good. He jump and bite and kick, and sometimes he will not do some works at all. So I could not tell what I shall do. One day I is working in field near house, with both mules, and he stops and put up his old white ears. Then he threw his back heels clear up in the air. Then he just going to lie down, but I whip him—onerly a little, very easy. So he did not lie down. He onerly stand still. He stand still half an hour. First I try to pull him, but he stuck his hoofs in dirt and pull back. Then I try to coax him, but those fire comes out of his eyes, and he snort and stand still. When I been got all discouraged I saw Lotta going down those road on ox-team with little brother. Those oxes stop, and I go to road to see Lotta. "So Lotta laugh and say—

"'Good morning, Mr. Tronson. Why do you and mule stand still all times in field?'

"Then I say, 'I do not know; you must ask Yack.' Then Lotta say, 'Does those mule willing to work?' So I say, 'Those white mule, he will not work, he will onerly stand still. I haf pull him, and I haf push him, and he will not go.' So then Lotta say, 'Well, I think if I shall ask him to go, he will go. Mules and dogs and cats love me all times.'

"And I say, 'Well, I think he will too.'

"So she get off ox-team, and we go out to where Yack stand. Then she put her face on Yack's old white face, and she rub his nose and talks to him little whiles, and make him believe he are very handsome and very kind. So then she say—

"'Now Yack, let me see you plow some furrow so nice.'

"So I takes reins, and Yack start work better as he nefer work before, and she walk along and talk to him. So by-and-by she haf to go away. And after she go away we feels very lonesome, but Yack he keep on and work hard all day. And that night I gif him more oats and big, soft bed. But he eat it all up, efery scrap. Well, he work very well for few days, and then he got bad some more. So efery time he got bad I drive him over to see Lotta. He always willing to go. And he be so ugly, and bite and groan, and stamp his feet, and wrinkle his nose. But after Lotta talk with him little whiles, and tell him he very handsome and how he must be good and work hard, he get so gentle, and run home very fast and be so good. But he likes to go and see Lotta too often. Sometimes he will go efery day. If he cannot go to haf Lotta pat him and talk to him, he will not work. So when harvest time been come, I are very busy, I cannot go to see Lotta efery day. It were impossible. I tell Yack so, but it didn't do some good at all. He should not work. He onlerly bite, and wrinkle his nose and look ugly, and some fire come out of his eyes. And while he are ugly, those wheat must be cut, or it get spoiled. It are those whole year's work. It must not been lost. It ruin me to sit still in harvest, and not cut my wheat. But Yack would not work. He hate me, and almost eferybody. So one evening we went over to see Lotta about it. She come out to road to see Yack, and rub his nose, and pat him and tell him to work. And so I jes' tole her how it all was. I tole her how Yack he ugly all times and would not work, because he hate me. But if she talk to him and pat him, then he work. I tell her all about wheat, how it must been cut, I tell her I don't know what to do about it—and then I stop.

"So then she say she don't know what to do about it.

"So then I get very bold and say:

"'Lotta, I long time want to ask you to get married with me, but I too afraid you would laugh at me. But will you not come?'

"So she look down on ground, and poke little stone with her shoe, for long time, and by-and-by she say:

"'Perhaps, Chris, by-and-by.'

"'I hat want you to come for efer so long,' I said. 'But how can I wait now? Yack hate me. He will not work for me. I shall lose my wheat, for I can get on one to help me; they are all busy. So then I shall haf no money to build house, and we cannot get married atall.'

"Lotta poke the little stone with her foot some more, for long time, and look at ground. It been got very dark, and eferything so still and quiet.

"After awhile she say in very low voice:

"'My father been say that Pastor Hofsen shall be at our house to see him, tomorrow.'

"That was all she say. Then after a minute she turn and run into house. So I talk some more with Mr. Jannsen, and tell him that I want to borrow one think more to keep always. He very much surprised. He say he always thought I come to see him, all those times.

"And next day,——"

"'So if I do not tell the rest,' said Lotta from her corner, 'I shall tell nothings. So we been got married those next day, when Pastor Hofsen come, and I came to here and feed Yack, and rub him down and lead him when he are cross, and he did work hard and saved all those wheat. He lof me very much, but when he are very cross, he will not work if Chris stay near him at all. Those times I drive him. I likes to drive Yack and plow. I plenty strong. Chris, he don't like it, but he can't help hisself. Nobody will buy Yack, and we cannot buy some other mule yet. But Yack, are getting old. He haf lost two teeth this summer. So I hope when he is old he will not be so ugly, but will get kinder like some old peoples, and then he will love me and love Chris too."

I confes I do not share Lotta's faith in Yack's reformation. But I thought the explanation of her working in the field now and then, while Chris sat idle, was a very good one.—Youth's Companion.

MR. EDITOR:—The Sketch which follows was prepared at the request of the Rumford Historical Association expressed by vote at their recent Annual Meeting, the special intention being that it might be entered upon their Biographical Record. Thinking it may have interest for many outside that Association, I send a copy for insertion in the JOURNAL.

Yours truly,
THE WRITER.

ALFRED GOWING CARTER.

The late death of Alfred G. Carter has left a vacancy in the ranks of those who best knew him, which will not soon be filled. Outside his own domestic circle, where, especially, hearts "know their own bitterness" and "strangers do not intermeddle," he is sadly missed. Not with any expectation of giving an exhaustive account of his life, the writer of this Notice is happy to pay a simple tribute of personal esteem and leave on record an expression of the esteem of the Rumford Historical Association of which, from an early date to his death, the deceased has been an honored member.

Alfred Gowing Carter, whose parents were Alfred and Betsey (Gowing) Carter, was born in Wilmington, Sept. 17, 1815. In his boyhood he acquired a knowledge of the shoe maker's trade, and became a rapid and expert workman at a business then common in his native town. By diligence and prudence, he ere long accumulated the means which, added to a small inheritance from the estate of his grandfather Gowing, enabled him to join the ranks of students in the far-famed Phillips Academy at Andover, the months he spent there being his only season of absence from his native town until his removal to Woburn.

In 1840, he was employed as a teacher of the school in east Wilmington. But in the spring of 1842, he removed to Woburn and here entered upon his life-work as a business-man. In the autumn of that year,—Nov. 22,—he was married to Caroline, second daughter of Asa G. Sheldon of Wilmington, and resided in the south side of the old historic "Clapp House" at Central Square. Previous to this consummation of his domestic and business arrangements in Woburn, he had, for some time, been engaged in bringing meat from Wilmington to Woburn, and accepting an urgent solicitation from Dennis Munroe who at that time kept a Provision store at Woburn Centre, entered into a co-partnership with him. This union being of short duration, he soon entered into a co-partnership with James Gowing of Wilmington in the business of butchering, Charles H. Carter being the representative of Mr. Gowing in Woburn, and together with Alfred G., doing business at the old Clapp stables and boarding at "Hinckley's Tavern." After his marriage and removal to the Clapp House, he seemed, for the first time, to be fairly settled. There he lived for eleven years. But he at length "sold out" and removed to the spot on Main street where he ever after resided; first, in the "Caldwell House" which, in 1861, he removed into Bedford street, now Kilby, and then in the larger and more convenient house which he built specially for himself and which is the home of his family still.

During the last years of Mr. Carter's connection with the meat trade, his business was entirely that of a wholesale dealer. With health never robust and the conviction that his business was seriously wearing upon him, he was induced, in Nov. 1875, to sell out all his interest in it. But he was by no means an idler. The spirit of enterprise still animated him. A member of a firm of carriage dealers has remarked, since Mr. Carter's death, that during the last twenty-five years his firm had sold to him more than three hundred carriages, many of them in recent years. He also carried on quite a trade in wood, lumber, live stock and land, all which gave him constant and full employment.

But Mr. Carter will be most tenderly remembered for his social and generous qualities. He seemed always ready to extend the most cordial hospitality to his wide circle of friends and had always an open and willing hand in the bestowal of aid to the needy. In all public improvements, he was generally sure to have a liberal share. In the erection of the present First Church edifice in Woburn; in the recent building of a new Church at North Woburn; in the Church at Wilmington; in our Lyceum Hall, and other enterprises of public interest, he bestowed a prompt and efficient aid. And only a few days before his death, he signed a bond for a free right of way to the extension of the Boston & Lowell Railroad through his land. Besides this disposition to devise liberal things in all great enterprises which commanded his confidence and interest, he was pre-eminently a peace-maker in the various organizations with which he had any connection. In his early life, he kept a Diary, still in existence, in which is found recorded, as his life motto, "Live and Let Live." It is believed that this sentiment never ceased to influence his life. The same is true of his recorded resolutions to observe certain rules concerning economy and vigorous attention to his business.

The limits of this article do not admit of the details of Mr. Carter's long continued and persistent and finally successful labor to secure and make a success the Carter Union which took place in June, 1884. It seemed to be the universal testimony that he was the prime mover and the tireless agent to the last in the whole enterprise. The account given in the Woburn JOURNAL of that grand assembly and occasion, and of his relation to it from the first, was but the simple truth, though too long to be here quoted. The present writer, after several interviews with him, both before and after that very successful gathering, has the testimony of his own lips that the occasion was to him a source of great satisfaction and pleasure. It proved to be the closing public act of his life, which had all along been filled with loving interest for his kindred. And, so far as we can see, the present generation, without him, would have died without the sight of that wondrous scene.

Mr. Carter's death took place at his late residence, Jan. 29, 1885. There his wife, two daughters and a son still remain in a home deeply overshadowed, but dearer to them than ever, because he built it, and lived in it, and was so long the earthly light of it, and, more than all, there closed his eyes on them for the last time, as he said his last "good night." God bless the widow and the fatherless in that now desolated home.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

All Advertisements, to insure insertion in this paper, must be handed in as early as 10 o'clock on Thursday forenoon.

☞ The mugwumps set up a terrible howl over the appointment of Eben F. Pillsbury Collector of Internal Revenue, but there was no reason why they should have done so. Pillsbury is just about an average Democrat, with some more brains than the average of them have; and then again they had no right to expect anything else of the President they helped to elect. Cleveland has done nothing to warrant the belief that he is partial to mugwumpism. To be sure he has not "turned the rascals out" quite as fast as some of the Bourbons thought he ought to, but, except in one or two cases, his appointments have been taken from the Bourbon element, and all that can be said against Pillsbury is that he is a leader of that element. But if the mugwumps are sick over that little matter, they'll wish they were dead when the President gets right down to solid work in filling the offices.

☞ Last accounts say that Gen. Grant continues to improve in health and grow stronger. He bore the excitement of his birthday congratulations and visits last Monday with but little fatigue and and at night was apparently none the worse for them. The doctors have not abandoned their cancer theory, but say the General's present improved condition is entirely consistant with the existance of cancer on the tongue, of which he must surely die within a few months. Many non-professionals are as certain in their own minds that the trouble is an an aggravated case of ulcerated sore throat from which no danger is to be apprehended, and no cancer at all. Time will decide which side has the rights of it.

☞ The month of April has been a notable one for Grant anniversaries. Several of his greatest military victories were achieved in April: April 1, 1865 Grant turned Lee's right at Five Forks; April 2, he assaulted and carried the lines at Petersburg; April 3 he entered Petersburg and Richmond, April 6, 1862, the battle of Shiloh opened; April 7 Grant drove the rebels from the field; April 8, 1865, he had thrown his cavalry across Lee's line of retreat, and April 9 Lee's army surrendered.

☞ There is a fair prospect that the Legislature may adjourn finally by the first or second week in June. That will make a session of five or six months, which will answer very well for length.

— The late rain gave grass and leaves a wonderful push forward. It has been very dry this spring, and still more rain could be stood very comfortably. However, small favors should be thankfully received, and large ones in proportion.

— Rev. Mr. Winn, recently called to the pastorate of the Baptist church, will take up his residence in the midst of his flock, which Winchester will not like very well probably. We have not heard whether he will occupy the parsonage or not.

— Last Tuesday the Committee on Education of the Senate reported a bill to incorporate the Woburn Public Library. We understand that the bill has been approved by prominent gentlemen of this place of all parties, and it ought to pass.

— On Wednesday afternoon Mr. Cyrus Munroe fell through a scuttle at Duncan's currying shop a distance of twelve feet and was seriously injured. His left wrist was broken, his head badly cut, and internal injuries were feared. Dr. Kelley was called.

— A very fine likeness in India ink of the late John F. McGovern is on exhibition in the window of Smith's jewelry store on Main street. It was made by Mr. Charles R. Rosenquist for Mrs. McGovern from a picture taken 20 years ago and is a fine piece of work.

— Mr. W. E. Carter, proprietor, has been notified by the District Police that he must furnish more means of egress from his rink, and he will at once comply with the demand, although the huge building has now three exits and can be emptied when full in less than five minutes.

— Ronco and Ward have a business card in this paper, to which attention is directed. They have very nice rooms and are excellent workmen. Their arrangements for hot and cold water baths is a very convenient feature with the public and will make the establishment popular.

— The Police ought to look after the hoodlums who break into empty buildings and raise Ned. The other day they smashed windows and doors and took possession of the Dow house and barn on Main street, belonging to the R. R. Co. They should be followed up with picked sticks.

— The 4th of July permanent committee will hold a meeting at the residence of C. W. Bryant, corner of East and South streets, at 8.15 o'clock, on Wednesday evening, May 6, to consider the matter of celebrating the coming Independence Day. A full attendance of the members is desired.

— Copeland, Bowser & Co. have made some improvements in their store this week, which will give them a better chance to show their goods. A very large window has been made which will take in a pretty fair sized stock and enable people passing to see considerable of what may be found inside.

— Mr. Edward C. Bryant, Teller of the First National Bank, who was substituted for Mr. Joseph R. Green to examine the books of the Town Treasurer and Auditors, as an expert, has finished the examination, found the cause of the discrepancies, and will make his report in a few days.

— Mr. Thomas H. Hill feels very happy over his Tuesday's election, we suspect. Well, there is one thing about it, it isn't the JOURNAL's funeral by several sled-lengths, and so long as the fight is kept strictly within the Democratic party, as at present, we've no tears to shed or hurrahing to indulge in.

— There was some thunder on last Friday night which cleared the atmosphere making Saturday one of the most delicious days that anybody ever went anywhere. A powerful rain storm prevailed on Sunday afternoon which cleared off some time in the night, and a very windy and disagreeable day followed.

— The Board of Water Commissioners held a meeting on Monday evening, at which Thomas H. Hill was appointed Clerk and Registrar; Amos Pettengill, Superintendent; O. M. Wade, Engineer. Thus is it found that the world is full of changes, and that there are many and painful uncertainties in politics.

— Last Tuesday evening the St. Charles T. A. S., elected the following officers: President, Dennis Kelley; Vice President, Thomas J. Carroll; Recording Secretary, Philip Haggerty; Financial Secretary, John Donahue; Treasurer, Thomas Dolan; Trustees, Cornelius Kelleher, Bernard McFeeley, Dennis Doherty.

— There is one good sign of prosperity which we have here, and that is a scarcity of tenements for people to live in. Many houses and and some stores could be rented to advantage, so real estate dealers tell us, and the wonder is that the want is not supplied by men who have a plenty of money and would like to get good interest for it. These, however, will come in time.

— The Sunday School of Trinity Church (Episcopal) will meet at the Church at 11 o'clock, a. m. every Sunday until further notice. The school will be in charge of the new Superintendent. All the members are earnestly requested to be present. It is hoped and expected to have Church services resumed at an early day, or as soon as a new Rector can be procured.

— Frequent and tremendously copious falls of rain followed closely on the heels of intermittent gleams of tolerably vivid lightning on Tuesday night, which finally settled into a northeast rain storm of extraordinary violence, frigidity and moisture. This continued through the greater part of Wednesday, watering the thirsty earth abundantly, and rendering fires in sitting-rooms a luxury.

— Mr. N. J. Simonds has bought a 400-light Edison plant and already engaged to furnish several of the business houses on Main street at a price not to be exceed that of gas. His large heel-stiffening factory will be lighted with electricity, and within a short time that method of illumination will become general in the town, especially as after the Sun Company gets settled here lamps can be bought very cheap.

— Real estate here is destined to move. There are a good many inquiries respecting sites for buildings and dealers think they see an approaching boom. Take all parts of the town and one will find that there is a big lot of building going on. North Woburn is showing unmistakable signs of a good deal of life in this direction, and in the Centre the sound of the saw and the hammer and trowel are heard all around. We are going to have a busy season.

— The Woburn reporter of the Boston Globe had the following delicious bit of news in Tuesday morning's issue of that excellent paper. The bland and childlike spirit of the reporter is something wonderful: The liquor dealers of Woburn, those who were last year licensed, propose to have no trouble with the new police administration, but will go out of the business. Some of them may handle the 3 per cent beer, the sale of which cannot be prosecuted. There is already a marked difference in the quantity of beer usually brought out by the expresses.

— Several people who sell rum in this town at the present time propose to keep right on doing so after the 1st of May just as though the sale will not then be prohibited. If the new Chief of Police is the kind of a man they all say he is, he will have a big batch of them in the House of Correction inside of three months after donning his breastplate here, which becomes all the more certain because of the active aid of three red-hot temperance men on the force which he will have. The best, easiest and cheapest way for everybody is to obey the laws of the land.

— In order to retain the quarter past 8, a. m. to, and 5.35, p. m. from, Boston train, which makes no stops between Woburn and Boston, and was put on this morning, it will be necessary to give it a liberal patronage. Superintendent Mellen says it will be kept on just as long as it pays, and no longer, to which our people are agreed. It leaves both ends at an hour which convenes Woburn travel the best, and although there is an express at 9 o'clock, in order to save the 8.15, no-stop-anywhere train, Woburn passengers will give it the preference and make it pay.

— Danvers Mirror: "The ladies of Woburn set an example for those of other places to follow, when it is necessary, by registering and voting to the number of nearly 300 at the recent election and thereby breaking up a political partisan ring in the school board of that town. This shows that women will vote, and vote right, when given anything to vote for." True: to the intelligent vote of the women this spring Woburn is indebted for one of the best and ablest School Boards it has ever had. They can always be implicitly relied on to support a high standard of morals and education, and vote for good, clean local governments.

— At half past 11 o'clock last Sunday night an alarm was rung in box 56 which was promptly responded to by the fire companies. The occasion of the alarm was the burning of Capt. John P. Crane & Co's large tannery on Main near Cross street and contents which had made considerable progress before the firemen could get there. The fire originated near the boiler, so the watchman reported, and soon enveloped the building in flames, which was entirely consumed with the large amount of stock on hand. The loss was about $70,000, on which there was insurance on building, machinery, stock, etc., in various American and English companies, of $43,850. Several carloads of bark stood near the buildings some of which caught fire but was saved. It is said that Capt. Crane & Co. will rebuild at once. They usually employ about 75 men who will be thrown out of employment and on that account feel the loss of the tannery severely.

— James Tracey, a laboror of intemperate habits, left his home in this town on the 14 of last March, and though diligent search has been made for him by the Police and his friends since no trace of his whereabouts could be found. Last Sunday the body of a man answering Tracey's discription was found in Shawsheen river in Tewksbury, and Medical Examiner of Ayer was notified. In the pockets of the person were found a prescription given by Dr. J. H. Conway of Woburn, which was filled by Mr. W. W. Hill, and on this evidence the Selectmen of this town were notified. Mr. Martin, a relative, went to Lowell and identified the remains as those of James Tracey. They were brought here for interment.

— In common with the rest of this community we are highly pleased at the appointment of Mr. Frank B. Richardson Supervisor of the Woburn schools. As a teacher in them he has been thoroughly tried and in no particular found wanting. His promotion to the full charge of the schools has for some time been the wish of those most interested in the education of the children of the town, and their wishes have at last been gratified. Nobody doubts that Mr. Richardson will entirely fill the bill as Supervisor, for he is amply fitted by education for the position, possesses a good share of common sense, and is a practical man every way. We congratulate him on his advancement to a higher place.

— On Monday night the residence, printing office, etc. of Mr. Perrigo, editor and proprietor of the Union Weekly, situated on New Boston street, was partially consumed by fire. Mr. Perrigo and two sons were away at Newton, and only the wife and two little ones were at home. The fire originated among some papers in the basement, and spread so rapidly that it was with considerable difficulty that Mrs. Perrigo and the children were rescued. The building was owned by Mrs. William H. Cummings, and was only partially destroyed. There was insurance on the house of $500; on printing material and presses, $700; and $300 on furniture, which will fully cover the loss. Mr. Thomas H. Hill had the insurance.

— In all fairness Officers Waters and Murphy and Chief Conn should have been accorded a hearing before being dismissed from the force. Such is the custom everywhere, and it is very seldom indeed that a case of dropping an officer without allowing him to be heard in his defense is reported. From facts which have come to our knowledge quite recently we think that the three officers named could have satisfied the committee that they were deserving of different treatment from that which they received. We can't say on what evidence the committee dismissed these officers, and it would not be right to adversely criticise their decision without all the facts; but it certainly looks as though an injustice had been done to three faithful public servants. At any rate, whether it was for the public weal or not that they should be dropped from the force, no one will say that a hearing should not have been granted them. We pen these lines in no spirit of fault-finding, for we are satisfied if others are; but only insist that these three men had rights which the Police Committee should have respected. However, good men have been appointed in their places, and that is what the public want.

— It is probable that a large cooperative shoe factory will be established here inside of many months. It will be an excellent thing for the town. The completion of the Branch extension will give us railroad facilities, both passenger and frieght, unsurpassed, which will draw manufacturing establishments as never before, and place our feet squarely on the high road to great prosperity. Besides these superior facilities, Woburn can offer stronger inducements than almost any other town to business men and settlers. In addition to a plenty of fast trains and cheap fares our location is unequailed in any view that may be taken of it: no better building sites, or more of them, can be found in any other suburban town: we have all the appliances and arrangements of a large city—gas, splendid water works, perfect fire alarm, finely organized Fire Department—indeed, everything needed for comfort or luxury, and a population that is growing every year. These, with the efforts which our leading business men are making to increase our growth and prosperity, will be very certain to draw desirable manufactories to our borders and in every way improve our thriving town.

— It is proper that the JOURNAL should give the public some information concerning Mr. Wilmot D. Nelson, our new Chief of Police. While a member of the Lynn force he was elected Chief of Swampscott, in which position he served to the satisfaction of the law-abiding people there, having during his term closed up all the rum-shops in that town, and brought about a much needed reform. He is reported as a strong temperance man, believes that all laws should be enforced, is fearless and honest. After the town election at Swampscott this spring, to be courteous to the new Board, Mr. Nelson resigned, expecting of course to be reappointed in accordance with the wishes of the people. It was found, however, that a majority of the Board were not in sympathy with him and the citizens in their ideas of enforcing the prohibitory law, and he was not reappointed Chief. The Board were earnestly petitioned by nearly all of the heaviest tax-payers of Swampscott, including some 25 Boston gentlemen who pay taxes in that town, to reappoint Mr. Nelson, but they declined to heed the appeal—and chose another man. The objection of the majority of the Board to Mr. Nelson was that he was too active and zealous in executing the laws. Learning of this state of affairs at Swampscott, and also the character of Mr. Nelson as a public officer, the Police Committee of the Woburn Board of Selectmen opened up a correspondence with him which resulted in his being elected Woburn's Chief of Police. From the information which we have been able to glean concerning him it is our belief that Mr. Nelson will make a good officer.

— The School Board held their regular monthly meeting on Tuesday evening last at which all the members were present.—Minutes of the last meeting read and approved.——The Superintendent's report for April, including his resignation to take effect on July 1, was accepted and ordered filed.——Further time was asked by the Committee on Rules and Regulations, which was granted.——Thomas Mulkeen was elected Truant Officer from May 1, 1885, at a salary of $360. W. D. Nelson was also elected to the same office without pay.——A resolution was offered by Mr. Emerson endorsing the Teachers' Tenure of Office bill now before the Legislature, which was unanimously adopted. Dr. Harlow of the State Senate, explained the provisions of the bill ——Mr. Aldrich moved that a temporary committee of two be appointed by the Chair to take charge of the school buildings, etc. until otherwise ordered. Carried. Messrs Aldrich and Johnson were appointed said committee.——On motion of Mr. Aldrich a committee of three, consisting of Emerson, Johnson and Bartlett, was appointed to examine the feasability and desirability of consolidating schools, to elaborate a plan, and report as soon as possible. To receive this report, and one other, Mr. Emerson thought it desirable that a special meeting of the Board should be held.——The bills of the month were taken up. Considerable discussion followed as to the exact duty and powers of the Auditor in certain cases. It was determined, on motion of Mr. Johnson, that the Auditor should allow no bills that had not been duly indorsed by persons contracting them, except in the cases in hand, in which that officer was allowed time to procure endorsements to bills in season for the next meeting of the Board of Selectmen.——The Board then went into executive session, at which Mr. Frank B. Richardson was elected Supervisor of schools for the next school year, at a salary of $1200. The name of the office was changed from Superintendent to Supervisor on account of some ambiguity in the law respecting it. The duties are the same. ——Adjourned.

RINK NOTES:—The winning feature at the Academy was the exhibition game of polo between the Woburns and Gloucesters last Friday evening which was won by the home team, as ordained by the inner circles.——There have been some exciting games of polo at Newton's City Rink during the week, and pleasant sessions of general skating. ——The talk now is that the rinks will run only four nights in the week from now on to the close of the season, although no formal announcement to this effect has yet been made.——The Alamedas were rather too many for the Woburn Citys at Newton's last Wednesday evening.——The League games of polo are about finished.——The programmes of both rinks for the next six days may be found in the advertising columns of this paper.

The Sun Electric Company.

Woburn has as good as secured the location of this important manufacturing company, now doing business in Boston. Through the influence of the Board of Trade and the energy and pluck of some members of its Executive Committee the funds necessary to bring the Company here were all subscribed last Saturday evening, which insures a large and desirable manufactory for our town. Thus very early in its history we begin to see some of the advantages of a Board of Trade, which is only a drop in the bucket compared to what may be anticipated in the near future. Without this organization, we all know and must acknowledge, the Sun Electric Company could not have been induced to come here; but organized effort, as the JOURNAL has all along contended it could, has accomplished, on the start, results which will make strongly in favor of our prosperity.

The chief business of the Sun Electric Company is the manufacture of electric lamps, for which they have a burner, invented by Mr. Slatterly, one of the best electricians in New England, unequalled by any now in use, and which secures for them large and rapidly increasing sales. Electric lighting is growing very fast, and the demand for the Sun lamp, which is now used by several of the largest electric companies in the country will in a short time be almost unlimited. Besides these lamps, the Company manufacture dynamos and everything else pertaining to a complete electric plant. At another time a full description of this manufactory will be given in these columns.

On Monday Mr. Gay of Boston, owner of the City Rink, was in consultation with the Executive Committee of the Board of Trade in relation to the purchase or rent of that building for the manufacturing purposes of the Company. Whether this or some other suitable building will be taken for the factory is not yet decided, but will be in a few days. The rink would make a superior one and seems to be just the thing needed, and it is probable that a satisfactory bargain will be made with Mr. Gay for it.

The financial questions involved in the removal of the Sun Company from Boston to this town are in competent hands and will be arranged in a satisfactory manner, and in a short time we shall have the pleasure of witnessing some of the good fruits of the Board of Trade in the establishment of a very important manufacturing concern here.

Spring Meeting of the Woburn Conference.

The Woburn Conference is composed of twenty-one churches, namely: Bedford, Billerica, Burlington, Carlisle, Lexington, Malden 1st, Malden (Maplewood), Malden (Linden), Medford (Mystic), Medford (West), Melrose, Melrose Highlands, North Reading, Reading (Old South), Reading (Bethesda), Stoneham, Wakefield, Wilmington, Winchester, Woburn 1st, Woburn (North). Its officers are: Rev. A. G. Bale, pastor of the Melrose Church, President; Rev. J. W. Batt, pastor of the Stoneham Church, Scribe and Treasurer.

The number of members belonging to the 21 churches, on January 1, 1885, was 3,365, of which Woburn has 509—the largest church in the Conference. The number of scholars in the Sunday Schools of the conference was on January 1 last, 4,734. Twenty of the churches have houses of worship valued at $396,000; there are seven parsonages valued at $27,000.

The Spring Meeting of the Conference was held in the First Congregational church on last Tuesday. It was a large and interesting one. Good weather was vouchsafed for it, which was fortunate for the plans of the committees who had the management of affairs, and made things agreeable for those from abroad as well. Every Church was represented, and the number present was estimated at between 500 and 600, which was probably more than a general average attendance. The order of exercises consisted, in the forenoon, of (1) Devotional exercises. (2) Organization and Business. (3) Reports from the churches. (4) Discussions. (5) Recess and Collation. Rev. A. G. Bale was Moderator of the meeting, and Rev. W. J. Batt, Clerk. The exercises in the fore part of the day were of the usual character. The Church was handsomely decorated for the occasion with a profusion of beautiful flowers, plants, ferns, etc. and wore a gala-day appearance. The ladies' must have credit for this.

At 12.30 a recess of an hour was announced for collation and social greetings. The dinner was a bountiful one, and consisted of substantials and delicacies calculated to make the inner man rejoice. There was an abundance of good things, and several baskets of fragments were left over to cheer many who were not present. At least 500 people enjoyed this feast of fat things and while enjoying them probably blessed the Woburn ladies for their knack in cookery and generosity in providing. The clergy had tables set separate and apart from the congregation, which tables were finely laid out with flowers, etc. On the plate of each minister was a beautiful hand-painted souvenir of flowers, buds, etc., and his name delicately marked on it, which was the work of Mrs. Dr. G. S. Dodge. These cards were very handsome, and showed much artistic taste and skill.

An hour was pleasantly spent over the viands, and then the meeting reassembled in the auditorium of the church. The exercises in the afternoon were very interesting to the Christian men and women who formed the congregation. Rev. Americus Fuller of Aintab delivered a very able address on Foreign Missions to which marked attention was paid by the audience. Rev. Joshua Coit followed with an address on Home missions, which was excellent. Rev. C. F. Woodworth's address on matters appertaining to the affairs of the American Missionary Association was closely listened to, while the address of Hon. Chester Halcombe of China was one of the very best of the session. Dr. March and other clergy belonging to the Conference participated in the exercises of the day.

At a little past 4 o'clock the meeting adjourned. It was a good one, and it is believed that no person went away dissatisfied with the welcome and generous treatment extended by the First Church of Woburn to the Spring Meeting of the Woburn Conference.

Sixty-Sixth Anniversary of Odd-fellowship.

On last Tuesday evening Crystal Fount Lodge, No. 9, I. O. O. F., duly celebrated the sixty-sixth anniversary of the founding of the Order at their Lodge and at Armory Hall. For some time a competent committee had been arranging for the occasion, and it was found that their duties had been carefully performed. Nearly two hundred Odd Fellows participated in the celebration, and it was unanimously voted that the affair was an exceedingly pleasant one.

In response to invitations extended Bethel Lodge of Arlington sent over a delegation of twenty jovial gentlemen; Paul Revere Lodge of Winter Hill, about fifty-five; the Olive Branch Degree Staff added thirty to the number; Warren L. Knox, P. D. D., and suite of Winchester augmented the crowd, while Deputies G. W. Yeaton of Crystal Fount, Franklin of the Olive Branch, Mr. Nightingale of the Boston Journal, and many members of the Order here and elsewhere, made up one of the happiest companies that has met for social pleasures in Woburn for many a day.

In the first part of the evening there was work of the Lodge at their rooms and exemplification of work in the first degree by the Degree Staff of all Olive Branch Lodge which was very interesting and instructive to the members. After this the large company repaired to Armory Hall where a splendid repast, furnished by Tufts, the celebrated Boston caterer, awaited them. The long tables were laden with the very best of everything, and before the onslaught of knives and forks they looked very inviting. Not so much so after the battle.

The after-supper exercises were of the pleasantest character. Brief, spicy speeches were made by many of the visiting and home brethren; toasts were read and responded to; an address was delivered by the president of the evening, which was greatly enjoyed. Between the speeches was cordial social intercourse and fraternal greetings, and the moments flew rapidly away. At about 1 o'clock Wednesday morning the exercises were brought to a close and with them a most delightful celebration of the founding of the Order of Odd-fellowship.

The Country Week.

The Special Committee of the Boston Young Men's Christian Union have issued their Tenth Annual Report of the COUNTRY WEEK, which has for its object sending poor children and others from the city during the summer months, for a vacation of ten days or more, to pleasant homes in the country.

Since the inauguration of the work in 1875, there have been sent out 12,765 children and adults, the visits averaging about 13 days for each.

The number sent in 1875 was 160; in 1876, 320; in 1877, 861; 1878, 1,046; in 1879, 1,316; in 1880, 1,377; in 1881, 1,589; in 1882, 1,795; in 1883, 2,042; in 1884, 2,259.

Visitors were sent last year into 179 different towns, remaining 28,478 days; and the average expense per week for each visitor was $2 40. At the Country Home at Wellesly, Mass., 130 children and others, principally invalids, remained last season 2,034 days.

The report, which contains many interesting details of the work, will be sent to any one desiring it.

Subscriptions are now being received for the season of 1885, and should be addressed to Wm. H. Baldwin, President Boston Young Men's Christian Union, 18 Boylston Street, Boston.

I have used Bradley's Phosphate every year for fifteen years; have also used other fertilizers, but consider Bradley's the best for all kinds of vegetables. By using eight hundred pounds per acre, without other manure, on one and three-eights acres of corn, I sold $237 worth and what corn and fodder I fed out I considered equal to $63, making $300 in all as the value of the crop to me.

HEREDITARY SCROFULA.

ARE you aware that in your blood the taint of scrofula has a prominent place? This is true of every one. It is liable at any time, on the slightest provocation, to develop itself in some insidious disease. Consumption and many other diseases are outgrowths of this impurity of the blood. HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA has a wonderful power over all scrofulous troubles, as the remarkable testimonials we have received unmistakably prove.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO.: Gentlemen— • • • My youngest son has always been troubled with Scrofulous Humor; sores in his head discharging from his ears, and a running sore on the back of his ear for two years; his eyelids would fester and ulcerate, discharging so that I was obliged to wash them open every morning, his eyelashes nearly all coming out; he was exceedingly dainty, most of the time eating but two slight meals a day. We were unable to find anything that had the least effect upon him till last spring, 1876, we gave him two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla. His appetite improved at once. • • The back of his ear healed up without a scar, and not a sore in his head since. Sincerely yours,

MRS. N. C. SANBORN,
No. 108 Merrimack St., Lowell, Mass.

"We do not as a rule allow ourselves to use our editorial columns to speak of any remedy we advertise, but we feel warranted in saying a word for Hood's Sarsaparilla. Sarsaparilla has been known as a remedial agent for centuries and is recognized by all schools of practice as a valuable blood purifier. It is put up in forms of almost infinite variety, but Messrs. Hood & Co., (Lowell, Mass.) who are thoroughly reliable pharmacists, have hit upon a remedy of unusual value. Certainly they have vouchers of cures which we know to be most extraordinary."—Editors Lowell Weekly Journal.

Garland Oil Stove

THE WORLD'S BEST.

This popular Oil Stove is used and recommended by Mrs. Lincoln at the Boston Cooking School. Among its superior features is its new and novel burner, superior to any applied to other stoves and used only on the Garland. It does away with the ratchet wheels for moving the wicks which has been such a nuisance in oil stoves, and affords an even, steady flame. It has two or four-hole boiler tops. Baking, boiling and frying can be done at once.

The Garland is the most popular, convenient and powerful baker in the market to-day. We have sold a great number the last two seasons and they have given decided satisfaction, selling themselves on their own merits. The best is the cheapest.

Miss Carrie L. Pond made a very successful debut at Apollo Hall last week. The Boston papers speak very highly of her.

War in the Soudan was the subject of a very entertaining talk by Mr. Lewis Parkhurst before the Fortnightly Club last Monday.

The prospect for building a large number of fine houses here this season is good. Outside people are learning that Winchester is an exceedingly pleasant town to reside in.

Mr. Elder, our Representative in the General Court, has augmented his popularity with his constituents by his ability and fairness as a legislator. He is a very promising young lawyer.

The committee on building a school house have secured a lot on Church street 139x208 feet. The total cast of the house and land is estimated at $12,500. They will report at a special town meeting soon to be held.

Our old and popular postmaster will stay in all human probability. There will be no steps taken for a change. Mr. Brown is one of the best citizens of Winchester, and is liked by everybody. No one would take the office as against him.

The Clefs Musical Club of this place will give a second concert on this, Friday evening, under the direction of Mr. S. B. Whitney, assisted by two solo choir boys from the church of the Advent. A former entertainment given under the same management and assistance was a great success. Mr. Whitney is one of the best musical directors that there is anywhere.

The Boston Home Journal says: Twombley and Sons of Tremont street (Boston), sent Gen. Grant a large box of handsome roses on Wednesday evening. The varieties chosen were the choicest growth of their great conservatories at Winchester and included a large number of perfect specimens of the pink Baronesse de Rothschild fully 14 inches in circumference.

Frank H. and Kirk D. Pierce of New Hampshire, nephews of President Pierce, have united in presenting to Gen. John M. Corse of Winchester, a splendid memorial of the revolutionary battle of Bennington, Vt., Aug. 16, 1777. It is a large sword which belonged to one of the British field officers whose troops were vanquished in that engagement by the Green Mountain and Granite Hills patriots, that weapon falling into the hands of a Hillsboro, N. H., reader, and remained in the possession of his family until it was presented to Gen. Franklin Pierce when he was elected president of the United States.

LITERARY NOTICES.

For special reasons, in the May CENTURY, more space than usual is devoted to the War Series, and sixteen pages are added to the regular number, 160, in order that other subjects of public importance should not be slighted. Of superior interest is General Adam Badeau's anecdotal paper on General Grant as a soldier. General Badeau's article covers the whole period of Gen. Grant's military experience, from his brilliant services in the Mexican War to the surrender of Lee at Appomattox, concluding with an interesting analysis of Gen. Grant's soldierly characteristics. The frontispiece of the number is a striking portrait of General McClellan. General McClellan contributes a graphic account of the Peninsular Campaign. Of peculiar interest is General Joseph E. Johnston's Manassas to Seven Pines, which is a reply to Jefferson Davis's criticisms. General Johnston describes in detail the battles of Bull Run and the first day at Seven Pines; and his recollections are supplemented by General Imboden's description of Incidents of the Battle of Manassas, and General Gustavus W. Smith's account of The Second Day at Seven Pines. General Imboden relates fresh anecdotes of General Stonewall Jackson and other prominent actors in the battle; and in conclusion he throws new light on the Confederate failure to pursue the Federal army to Washington. General Gustavus W. Smith commanded at Seven Pines from the time of General Johnston's injury, on the evening of the first day, until General Lee assumed command, after the fighting had ceased on the second day. Recollections of a Private describes the movement which saved the Union army from total defeat at Seven Pines. The war papers are illustrated with careful maps, pictures of incidents and of places, and numerous portraits, including a full-page double portrait of Generals Lee and Johnston, from a photograph taken after the war. In Open Letters an account is given of An Interview with General Robert E. Lee, in which the latter discussed war questions, and expressed satisfaction over the abolition of slavery. The rescue of Greely at Cape Sabine is the subject of a noteworthy paper by Ensign Charles H. Harlow, of the rescue-ship Thetis. Other illustrated features of of the May number are papers on The New Orleans Exposition, a series of papers on Typical Dogs. An Artist among the Indians is beautifully illustrated. Edmund Clarence Stedman's paper on the poet Whittier is the important literary feature of the number. Of fiction the May number contains The Prince's Little Sweetheart; The Rise of Silas Lapham, and The Bostonians.

A Great Discovery.

Mr. Wm. Thomas, of Newton, Ia., says: "My wife has been seriously affected with a cough for twenty-five years, and this spring more severely than ever before. She had used many remedies without relief, and being urged to try Dr. Kings's New Discovery, did so, with most gratifying results. The first bottle relieved her very much, and the second bottle has absolutely cured her. She has not had so good health for thirty years." Trial Bottles Free at W. W. Hill's Drug Store. Large size 50 cents and $1 00.

Newspapers of Today.

People generally, and even those who may be termed steady readers and close observers, have but a faint conception of the magnitude and influence the press of this country has attained. From a careful examination of this country has attained, From a careful examination of the advance pages of the 1885 edition of the American Newspaper Directory, issued May 1st, by George P. Rowell & Co., of New York, it appears that there are 14,147 newspapers are periodicals published in the United States and Canada; of these the United States has 12,973, an average of one paper for every 3,867 persons. In 1884 the total number of newspapers was less by 823 than at present, and while the gain this year is not so marked as in some previous years, it is still considerable. Kansas shows the greatest increase, the number being 78, while Illinois follows with a gain of 77. It is curious to notice that New York, the scene of so much political activity durihg the last campaign, should have only about one-third as many new papers as the State of Pennsylvania. As an index to the comparative growth and prosperity of different sections of the country, especially the Territories, the number of new papers forms an interesting study, and may well occupy the attention of the curious.

The Board of Trade's New Rooms.

Last Tuesday evening the Woburn Board of Trade took possession of and christened their new rooms on the third floor of the Bank Building, which an efficient committee had finely fitted up and furnished for the future headquarters of the organization. Members were well pleased with the work of the committee, on whom many encomiums were bestowed for the neat, convenient and handsome appearance of the quarters. The committee apartment is eleganty furnished in cherry with a fine carpet, easy chairs, and ample desk; while the the common meeting room is as neat and nice as the most fastidious could ask for.

Notwithstanding a rain storm prevailed during the evening the attendance at the christening of the new quarters was quite large—larger indeed than could have been expected under the circumstances. Prominent business men from different parts of the town were present and participated in the meeting, and a very encouraging feeling prevailed all around. While the members were sitting or walking through the rooms Mr. Secretary Champney was fully employed in signing receipts for those who placed their names on the record book, and became members of the Board, many of which he passed out during the evening.

At a little past 8 o'clock President Skinner called the meeting to order, and announced the business of the session. Mr. W. W. Hill, Chairman of Committee on Constitution and By-Laws, presented the report of the Committee, which was accepted and the code unanimously adopted. The Committee on Rooms, consisting of N. J. Simonds, Benjamin Hinckley, and E. W. Champney, made their report, which was accepted, and resolution of thanks for the admirable manner in which they had fulfilled their trust was unanimously voted.

Before the business of the meeting speeches by members were in order. The remarks of Hon. John Cummings, who everybody was glad to see present, would make interesting paragraphs in the next history to be written of Woburn. It was largely reminiscent and highly entertaining. He went back to half a century ago and told what Woburn was then—a little village of no more than 1500 people: of its tannery business and its four principal tanners—Tidd at No. Woburn, Dea. John Cummings and Gen. Thompson at the West Side, and Manning at the Centre. From these humble beginnings has grown the great industry for which Woburn is now famous everywhere. To these men, the speaker said, was largely due the credit of shaping the future business of our town. The narrative of these old memories was listened to with great attention. Mr. Cummings also related facts concerning the extension of the Woburn Branch, and modestly disclaimed all credit for bringing about this great improvement. He said it belonged to the B. & L. Company.

By request Mr. N. J. Simonds related the facts concerning the Sun Electric Company which he with others had gained by a critical examination into its merits. Mr. Simonds reported that the necessary funds to secure the location of the company had been subscribed, and there was no doubt but that in a short time it would be located here. He also spoke encouragingly of the benefits that would be likely to accrue from so important a manufacturing establishment.

W. V. Kellen, Esq., also made a good speech. He dwelt on the advantages of the Board of Trade to the town, and as he went along paid Woburn handsome compliments. His faith in our future prosperity, growth and importance is larger than several grains of mustard seed.

The remarks of Hon. B. F. Whittemore had the ring of true metal in them. He never makes a poor speech. Many things anent the objects, aims, duties and work of the Board of Trade were touched on by him; good words for our historic old town were dropped here there; confidence expressed in our future, and encouraging predictions made. The speech was excellent.

Mr. James Skinner, President, made some interesting remarks concerning the benefits sure to be derived from the organization of the Board of Trade, and the bright business prospects of our town.

Towards 10 o'clock the meeting was called off from labor to refreshment, when the members passed out into the Masonic banqueting hall where they discussed a collation with hot coffee for awhile, and then repaired to their respective homes.

Thus the opening and christening of the new rooms were a great and gratifying success.

KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY

Cures a Terrible Case of Gravel When Other Help Failed.

What is Gravel? what causes it, and who are most liable to it? It is frequently attended with acute pain, and unless relief can be found, produces inflamation and death. Both sexes and all ages are liable to it, although men who have reached or passed middle age are its most common victims. Nothing is more urgently needed than a reliable medicine for Gravel, as the disease seems on the increase, and we are glad to say that such a specific is now before the public in the form of DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, of Rondout, N. Y. We put in evidence the following letter, selected from many similar communications:

PITTSFIELD, MASS., March, 1884.

Dr. David Kennedy.

DEAR SIR:—You have a right to know, and I desire the public to know my experience with Gravel and my remarkable recovery through the use of your "FAVORITE REMEDY." I am a carpenter living in this place, and there are plenty of witnesses to the truth of what I say. My first comparatively slight attack of Gravel was in the year 1878. It passed away, and I had little more trouble until last July, 1883. One day when at work in my shop I was suddenly seized with a keen and terrible pain in my left side. I consulted two physicians at once. One said: "I can do nothing for you. Your case is incurable!" I was frightened and went to the second, who said little, but gave me a prescription. It did no good.

Then began a series of experiences the agony and horror of which words cannot depict. Think of it! I was sometimes taken in the street, and would fall, writhing with agony, upon the sidewalk. It was death in life. Thank Heaven, I then heard of "KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY," through Mr. P. P. Cooley. I had not used half a bottle when I passed three stones in succession, one of which was nearly one-half an inch long. I persevered with the medicine, the system gradually abated, and I have had no more trouble since. I am well, thanks to you and "FAVORITE REMEDY." Yours most gratefully, JAMES D. KENNEDY.

What "FAVORITE REMEDY" did in this case it has done in many others.

MALARIA.

As an anti-malarial medicine

DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S

has won golden opinions. No traveler should consider his outfit complete unless it includes a bottle of this medicine. If you are exposed to frequent changes of climate, food and water, Favorite Remedy should always be within your reach. It expels malarial poisons, and is the best preventative of chills and malarial fever in the world. It is especially offered as a trustworthy specific for the cure of Kidney and Liver complaints, Constipation and all disorders arising from an impure state of the blood. To women who suffer from any of the ills peculiar to their sex Favorite Remedy is constantly proving itself an unfailing friend—a real blessing. Address the proprietor, Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. $1 bottle, 6 for $5, by all druggists.

SONG OF THE PRINCESS MAY.

March and April, go your way!
You have had your fitful day;
Wind and shower, and snow and sleet,
Make wet walking for my feet,—

For I come unsandaled down
From the hillsides bare and brown;
But wherever I do tread
There I leave a little thread

Of bright emerald, softly set
Like a jewel in the wet;
And I make the peach-buds turn
Pink and white, until they burn

Rosy red within their cells;
Then I set the blooming bells
Of the flowery alder ringing,
And the apple-blossoms swinging

In a shower of rosy snow,
As I come and as I go
On my gay and jocund way,
I, the merry Princess May.

Naming the Baby.

"Is Beatrice a good name for baby?"

A young woman of prepossessing appearance stood in the door of the editorial room and addressed her interrogatory in a seemingly general way to the gifted gentlemen who were occupying the several corners of the apartment.

For a moment nobody seemed to regard the question as directed particularly at him, but finally the trotting horse reporter removed his generously proportioned feet from the desk on which they had been resting, and allowed a smile to play over his quarter-stretch features.

"Have you a baby?" he asked.

"Why, certainly," replied the young woman, her tone indicating surprise, slightly tinged with anger.

"Well," said the personal friend of Rarus, "you mustn't get angry, because one soft, sensuous day in summer when the birds were twittering their sweetest twits, a woman came here on the same errand that brings you, and after we had picked out a pretty, smooth name for her infant—I forget whether it was Miriam or Carita we settled on—she went away happy, and along in the fall—the golden-tinted fall—just as the leaves were turning brown and all nature seemed hushed in sweet repose, waiting for the baseball championship to be decided, she came back again with a wsitful, weary look in her soft brown eyes, and said she had been mistaken—it was a boy. Woman's nature, you know, is so buoyantly hopeful, so sweetly precious, that she will frequently mistake a four flush for the real article. It is the painful memory of a blackened past that makes us cautious about furnishing names for babies until we know that the little cherubs are here. Do you catch on?"

The lady nodded.

"Well," resumed the admirer of Maud S., "there are lots of things to be considered in naming a baby. Your husband's name is—"

"Perkins," replied the lady.

"That isn't a bad name, although it would be difficult to enshroud it with the mystic glamour of romance. But I hardly think 'Beatrice' would look well in front of it. The name of 'Beatrice,' you know, is always associated with stateliness and beauty, and your little tootsy-wootsy might grow up bow-legged and pug-nosed. And, besides, 'Beatrice Perkins' wouldn't sound just right. You might call—"

"Her, if you please," said the lady severely.

"We always call 'em 'it' in this office; it saves time and prevents our getting rattled. As I was saying, you might call it Perkins' Maid, or Belle of Perkinsville, or something like that. I knew a man in Kentucky who had a chestnut gelding—"

"I can hardly see what that has to do with the matter under consideration," said the lady in a severe tone.

"You are right, madam; I did swerve a little that time. Now, 'Sweetheart' is a good name. Out in California they think 'Sweetheart' can take the pole from anything that looks through a bridle. Now, if you had twins, you might call one 'Sweetheart' and the other 'Darling,' put the tallest on the off side, and by checking the near one up a little higher, nobody could see the difference between them. Of course, if they were not gaited alike, or you had to put a kicking strap on one of 'em, it might be that—"

"Let me tell you again, sir," said she, "that I am not naming a horse. Perhaps this gentlemen," turning to the literary editor, "could give me the information I desire."

"Certainly, madam," replied that person. "You should name your little treasure Cecil—the name has such a sweet, dreamy, aristocratic sound."

"Of course," said the mollified parent, "and I am exceedingly obliged for your suggestion"—and she departed.

"You seem to lose your savoir vivre," said the literary editor to the horse reporter.

"Yes," replied the young man, "she carried me to a double break at the turn, but I should have settled quick and come down the homestretch very fast. If she hadn't hurried me so much in scoring, I'd have picked out a daisy name for that filly of hers."—Chicago Tribune.

Salt River.

An imaginary stream up which a defeated candidate is supposed to be sent, and whence he is not expected to come back. The origin of the expression is as follows: Salt River geographically, is a tributary of the Ohio. Its source is in Kentucky, and, being very crooked and difficult of navigation, it was in early days a favorite stronghold for river pirates. These highwaymen were in the habit of preying upon the commerce of the Ohio and rowing their plunder up Salt River, whence it was never recovered. Hence it came to be said of anything that was irrevocably lost, "It's rowed up Salt River." By an easy transition it was applied to unsuccessful candidates. "He has been rowed (or rode) up S. R.," or "We'll row him (or ride him) up S. R. next fall."—Magazine of American History.

LITERARY NOTICES.

WIDE AWAKE for May gives a charming home life frontispiece by St. John Harper, The Baby in the Library, illustrating a witty poem by Edward P. Anderson. Baby is also celebrated in another poem, Wassis, the Conqueror, with four full-page drawings by Garrett; and in yet another, by M. E. B. What do we call the Baby; this also has a beautiful illustration. Mrs. Catherwood contributes a delightful story for girls, Plum-Blooms, a story with a sweet lesson. The King-Cat, a humorous story, by Mrs. Rowling, has some very funny pictures by J. E. Francis. Mrs. Jessie Benton Fremont gives the first of her four Virginia stories; this one is entitled Crazy Sally, and gives a grapic picture of life many years ago in a great Southern household. After The Buffalo, by Lieut. Wood, is an account of an exciting buffalo hunt in which the writer was a participant; it has a fine picture by Sandham. Yan Phou Lee, in his series, When I was a Boy in China, writes of Chinese school-life. Mrs. Champney and E. S. Brooks furnish interesting chapters of their serials, In Leisler's Times, and The Bubbling Teapot, and Charles Egbert Craddock brings Down The Ravine to a most satisfactory conclusion. There is much other good work from C. P. Cranch, Ernest Ingersoll, Dr. Hale, Celia Thaxter and Will M. Clemens; and the Chautauqua Readings furnish fine art, temperance, historical and literary papers from Edward Everett Hale, Rose Kingsley, Prof. Palmer, Mrs. Jessie Benton Fremont, Mrs. Whitman, and Oscar Fay Adams. $3.00 a year. D. Lothrop & Co. Publishers, Boston, Mass.

COTTAGE HEARTH for May is a blooming number. There is the sweet scent of trailing arbuters all through its bright pages, and the pictures show the skill of the artist's deft hand. There are many excellent things, in prose and poetry, in this issue, the titles of which are too many to be enumerated here. We would call attention to an advertisement of COTTAGE HEARTH in this paper, and the offer of the JOURNAL coupled with it.

Lucky Editors.

When the late N. Villemessant, the proprietor of the Paris Figaro, died, he left the paper to the three men who had done the most to aid him. But there were many old contributors on the paper —men with well-known names, who made an outcery at the division of property. They insisted that they ought to have been consulted, and they threatened to found an opposition to Figaro. This alarmed the three principals, and they made a proposition to the effect that they themselves should take each $35,000 out of the concern yearly, and that the other men should each have a salary of $7,500 for the work they were to do, and at the end of the year draw a like sum out of the profit, thus insuring them $15,000 a year each. Yet these men do not write an average of more than half a column a day each—if indeed, that much; so that they have a very easy time of it. It is one of the conditions that when any one of them dies his share goes to the others, so that the last survivor will have an enormous income.—Philadelphia North American.

The importance of the comma was well shown by a notice recently read in a church in Michigan, which ran as follows: "Dr.——will deliver a lecture on Saturday evening of this week. Subject: The Circulation of Blood in the Baptist Church."

Timely Topics.

Mr. Keely of motor notoriety has recently found a competitor for fame in France, where an inventor, M. Boutet, claims the honor of discovering a new force by the application of air and water. How he does it, he tells no more than Mr. Keely, but he promises to exhibit a tramway operated by the new motor at the coming Antwerp exhibition.

The dahila, after having been unfashianable for many years, has of late again gained many friends, who will no doubt be interested to learn that this flower might this year celebrate the centenary of its introduction into Europe. In 1784 the Spaniard Vincent Cervantes found a new plant in Mexico with small red, violet, or orange flowers along a large yellow centre, growing on a long thin stock. He sent a specimen to Senor Cavanilles, the director of the botanical gardens at Madrid, who gave the flower its present name. From Spain the dahlia was exported all over Europe. For the first thirty years it was cultivated in England in a greater variety than in any other country, but later on Germany, and especially the town of Kostritz, has taken the first place in the culture of dahlias.

Making cyclone pits is one of the domestic industries of Georgia. They are underground refuges for shelter in a tornado. The tremendous force of these storms, several of which sweep across the state every season, destroying everything in their track, has warned the people to provide safe shelters near the house where the family can find refuge when the tornado approaches. In general they are merely deep holes in the ground. The latest improvement is called a "waterproof pit," the floor and walls being lined with brick lined with cement. The track of a tornado is so narrow, very rarely so much as half a mile wide, that the area swept by them is small comparatively, and the likelihood that any particular house will be in the path of a tornado is not great. Most of the makers of cyclone pits will never need to use them, but if the need does come it is very imperative.

The progress of the tea plant at the station near Summerville, S. C., is reported by the superintendent as being quite satisfactory. The plants, it is thought, are now large enough to afford leaves in sufficient quantities to warrant an effort at tea manufacture, if such an operation should be considered necessary by the department at Washington. That the Chinese tea-plant can be grown over a large portion of the United States, and that good teas can be made from these plants, have been demonstrated, but whether teas can be procured of standard qualities to meet the requirements of commerce and bring profit to the planter and manufacturer are questions which have not been practically demonstrated. It is well recognized that in some essential conditions of successful tea production (a principal one being a deficiency in the average rainfall) there is sufficient reason for caution in experiments on a large scale, even in the most favored climate.

A Chinese imperial decree has recently been issued, ordering that the late viceroy of Yunnan, through whose negligence, it is alleged, Sontay and Bac Ninh were captured by the French, and the viceroy of Kwangsi, who did not advance beyond Langson to the relief of these two towns, are to be baheaded after the "autumnal assizes." The viceroys La and Tso, who strenuously interceded for the culprits, are degraded two degrees in official rank. The viceroy of Canton, who was guilty of recommending one of them for employment, is also to be punished. He is, however, to be leniently dealt with on account of recent services in providing for the defence of his province. Chang Peilun, who commanded at Foochow during the bombardment, is summarily degraded and dismissed, and is ordered to Pekin for trial, while several other military commanders and high officials who recommended them for employment are also either degraded or handed over to the board of punishments for trial.

Beethoven's Lock of Hair.

Beethoven took a keen delight in practical joking. The wife of a pianoforte player and composer in Vienna had such an ardent desire to possess a lock of Beethoven's hair that she induced her husband to ask a mutual friend to endeavor to get the great composer to gratify her wish. The friend proved too fond of a practical joke to be a loyal messenger. He persuaded Beethoven to send her a lock of coarse gray hair resembling his own, but cut from another head—a billy goats's, and clipped from a billy goat's beard!

The lady, thinking she had the genuine article, was as proud as a peacock, but her joke was short-lived, for another friend, a party to the trick which had been practiced, informed her of the deception.

The husband of the deluded and distressed lady wrote an indignant letter to Beethoven, upbraiding him; and so fairly was the composer shamed for the discourtesy and unkindness of the jest in which he had joined that he wrote a letter of apology to the aggrieved lady, enclosing a real lock of his hair, and thenceforth refused the visits of the instigator of such ungallant practical joking.

He Kept The Whole House Awake.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Mr. F. O. McCleary a prominet solicitor of patents of this city, was troubled for several weeks with a severe cough, which not only deprived him of sleep but annoyed others. The only thing which did him any good, he says, was the new preparation Red Star Cough Cure, a purely vegetable compound, free from opiates, narcotics or poisons of any kind.

On the Street.

Let the western humorists who delight in satirizing Boston's "culture," so called, wrestle with this, to the genuineness of which the writer certifies. Three well dressed ladies met on Winter street. They were greatly surprised to see each other, and in turn gave expression to their emotions in choice Johnsonian language as follows:

First dame—"Well, shan't I die!"

Second dame—"Well, the old Harry!!"

Third dame—"Well, the old scratch!!!"—Boston Post.

Words of Wisdom.

Weakness is more opposed to virtue than vice is.

Though flattery blossoms like friendship, yet there is a great difference in the fruit.

People addicted to secrecy are so without knowing why; they are so not for cause but for secrecy's sake.

But if you are going to be a fool just because other men have been, oh, my son, what a hopeless fool you will be.

As a man may be eating all day and for want of digestion is never nourished, so these endless readers may cram themselves in vain with intellectual food.

Whatever busies the mind without corrupting it has at least this use: that is rescues the day from idleness; and he that is never idle will not often be vicious.

If ideas and words are distinctly weighed and duly considered, they would afford us another sort of logic and critic than what we have been hitherto acquainted with.

There is nothing meaner than barbarous and cruel treatment of the dumb creatures who cannot answer us or resent the misery which is so often needlessly inflicted upon them.

The every-day cares and duties, which men call drudgery, are the weights and counterpoises of the clock of time giving its pendulum a true vibration, and its hands a regular motion.

The human mind is always inexorable in demanding a motive for all human actions. It is only himself that each man permits to act without one, and avails himself of the privilege with astonishing frequency.

It Is, Is It?

The type-setting machine lately invented in Baltimore by a German American is pronounced by Public Printer Rounds to be entirely practical in every way. He also advances the opinion that it will, in the next five years, entirely revolutionize the art of printing in the United States and throughout the world. This may be true, or it may not—and it leads the Peoria Transcript to propound several conundrums:

Can it take the place of the old-time compositor, on whose willing shoulders are placed the blunders of the editor? Can it strike a town broke, and in two hours be as full as a goose and have a boarding house? Is it capable of taking goose tracks and quail trailings and converting them into a readable article on the tariff or the national debt? Can it put on a "sub," borrow the money he makes, and keep it up for a week or a month, as occasion requires? Can it go on a strike, and have more fun with less money than a monkey with a cage full of peanuts? We think when Mr. Round comes to view the matter over he will revise his opinion. There is nothing that can take the place of the old-time compositor unless it possesses some of the ingredients of a cyclone. And, with due respect be it added, it must also possess brains.

Between The Acts.

"Too bad I had to go out to see that ticket seller about seats for next week," he remarked to his new wife as he settled himself down after a trip down stairs between acts; "the affair quite slipped my mind as we came in. Were you annoyed, my dear?" "Oh, no. I didn't mind it in the least, thank you. I was quite busy working on a mental problem." "And what was that, love?" "Why they call the front curtain the drop." "I see. Did you succeed?" "Yes, I think I got the correct answer." "And that was——" "Because so many men go out for a drop when it is down, my dear."—Detroit Journal.

How China Gets its Name.

The Celestial empire has borne in its time many names, for it was a custom when a new dynasty ascended the throne to give another name to the empire, as Hai que, Chum que, Han que, etc., according to the name of the ruling monarch. The true name is said to be Chumque, "the centre kingdom of the world." This term was by usuage corrupted to Chin que, and from this word the Portugese gave it the name of China.

there wasn't a dry eye in the tabernacle, but if the programme hadn't said in clear, unmistakable print that she was going to sing "Sweet Home," a man might have thought his teeth loose without guessing it.

The Wickedest Boy.

The wickedest boy lives in Washington. He visited an observatory a few days ago with a large fire-fly he had caught, and with the aid of some mucilage, stuck it in the centre of one of the largest lens of the telescope. That night when the astronomer went to work, he perceived a blaze of light apparently in the heavens, and what amazed him the more was that it would give a couple of spurts and then die out, only to burst forth again in a second or two. He examined it carefully for a few moments, and then begun to do sums to find out where in the heavens that extraordinary star was placed. He thought he found the locality, and the next morning he telegraphed all over the universe that he had discovered a new and remarkable star of the third magnitude in Orion. In a day or two all the astronomers of America and Europe were studying Orion; they gazed at it for hours until they were mad and then began to telegraph to the man in Washington to know what he meant. The discoverer took another look and found that the new star had moved eighteen billion miles in twenty-four hours, and upon examining it closely he was alarmed to perceive that it had legs. When he went on the dome next morning he found the lightning bug. The bill for telegraphing dispatches amounted to $2600, and now the astronomer wants to find that boy. This story is related by an exchange, and of course is true.—Boston Journal.

The Resourses of Civilization.

The resources of civilization have been brought into service in the case of Maxwell, the St. Louis murderer, who is on board a steamer bound to New Zeland. A cable message has been sent from St. Louis via England, Portugal the Mediteranean, Arabia, India, Australia and New Zealand to the Auckland authorities at a cost of about $3.50 per word or several hundred dollars altogether, and if it retains any of its original meaning after this trip of 16,000 miles through all these strange countries there is little doubt that Maxwell will be in the lockup within an hour after the ship's arrival at Auckland.—Boston Post.

The Gray Mule's last Exploit.

Old Tom, the ancient gray mule of Mr. James Paulk, wound up the coil of his existence a few days ago, after a lingering illness of several weeks. We have been told that gray mules never die, but we have an ocular demonstration of the fact to the contrary. Old Tom was a faithful mule, and did good service during the many years he lived, Almost the last act of his life was to eat Jim's watermelon seed, causing him the humiliation of having to call upon his neighbors for a supply this year.—*Hawkinsville (Ga.) Pioneer Account.

A man who had been running his business on the credit system was finally compelled to put his books in the hands of an expert.

"Ahem," he remarked as he looked over them, "these accounts remind me very much of the far western plains."

"How?" asked the merchant in surprise.

"Very sparsely settled."

Then he took off his coat and brought in a bill of $100 for expert accountant services.—Merchant Traveler.

"I was down for a speech at our society the other night," remarked Crimsonbeak to Yeast the other day; "and the funny thing about it was that when I got up to speak I couldn't get a thing out." "Then I must be mistaken," replied Yeast; "I understood you got all the people out."

At the close of the sermon, the minister became impressive. Raising his voice he said: "Judgment!" and a small boy near the vestibule shouted: "Out on first!"

"A good wife is Heaven's greatest blessing," remarked Mr. Wilson to Mr. Badger. "Yes,' replied Badger, "but you know I am not orthodox in my belief."

"Ah, Bilings, where are you going for the winter?"

"Oh, I shall take a run to Italy and do Mt. Vesuvius."

"I see—going to a foreign climb."

The Baggage Master, Boston and Maine Railroad, Lawrence, Mass., A. WILLIAMS, says: For several years I was subject to frequent and very severe attacks of sick headache, caused no doubt by imperfect digestion, as my stomach troubled me a great deal, and although I have spent many dollars, I failed to find permanent relief until I used Sulphur Bitters. Since using this medicine I have had no return of the headache, and my stomach has regained its original tone and vigor, and I believe

EDWARD KNOTT, Postmaster, Waverly, Ia., says: I have been in poor health for years, and suffered greatly from biliousness and torpid liver. I have consulted the best physicians and spent a great deal of money, with no permanent benefit, and had about lost faith in everything. I purchased three bottles of Sulphur Bitters and commenced to take them; and, to my great joy, I began to feel better after the first dose. My head is free from pain, my appetite good, and since using Sulphur Bitters I enjoy life with a zest long deemed impossible; and they will purify the blood as no other can do.

I have tried every remedy that I heard of, but without benefit. Sulphur Bitters is the only thing that ever did me any good. When I commenced taking them I could not put my foot on the floor. I can now put my whole foot on the floor and walk on it. I think Sulphur

The Cashier of the Boston Loan Co., WM. E. If you are sick and unable to obtain relief from other medicines, try Sulphur Bitters, for it will cure you. MAY-BLOOM.

Oh, for You that I never knew!—
Now that the Spring is swelling,
And over the way is a whitening may,
In the yard of my neighbor's dwelling.

Oh, may, oho! do your sisters blow
Out there in the country grasses—
A mocking the white of the cloudlet light,
That up in the blue sky passes?

Here in town the grass it is brown,
Right under your beautiful clusters;
But your sisters thrive where the sward's alive
With emerald lights and lustres.

Dream of my dreams! vision that seems
Ever to scorn my praying,
Love that I wait, face of my fate,
Come with me now a-maying!

Soul of my song! all my life long
Looking for you I wander;
Long have I sought—shall I find naught,
Under the may-bushes yonder?

Oh, for You that I never knew,
Only in dreams that bind you!—
By Spring's own grace I shall know your face,
When under the may I find you?

THE LIGHTHOUSE KEEPER.

Saul Rundlett and his little daughter Phœbe kept the Plum Pudding Lighthouse. Saul had been a sailor for half his life, but two or three narrow escapes from shipwreck had convinced him that it was desirable to have something solid under one's feet, and he had with considerable difficulty—for there had been suspicion that Saul was not quite steady enough for a lighthouse keeper—obtained the position on Plum Pudding Rock. Phœbe was born there and her mother dying when she was very little, had grown up there almost as wild and free as the sea gulls that built their nests in the crevices of the rocks. She would have grown up utterly uncultivated if it had not been for Aunt Huldah, who resided on Mouse Island.

There was a school on Mouse Island for half the year and Phœbe went to it sometimes; she couldnt go regularly, because—well, although it is very sad it must be told—because it was not always safe to leave her father in charge of the lighthouse. He had been "steady" ever since he assumed the position of lighthouse keeper, fifteen years before, until the last year. Even after that long period of successful resistance his old enemy, the love of drink, had fallen upon and conquered him. And nobody knew it but Phœbe.

Capt. Saul, as everybody called him, had always been in the habit of going to Jim Bowling's shop at Pondunquit Harbor, which was a sailor's resort, to smoke his pipe and spin yarns with his old cronies, but he never drank anything there. And it was just within the last year that he had brought anything home from the harbor to drink. Now he did it often; indeed, it was seldom he came home without it, and all by himself, he would have a drinking bout, growing merry at first and singing his old sea songs and cracking jokes, and little Phœbe, who did not know the cause, thought him delightful, and wished he would always seem as happy; but soon he began to drink more heavily, and would pass from the merry stage into the cross one, and then become stupid, sleepy and helpless. And besides her grief and humiliation, she was constantly anxious lest her father should lose his situation. They had no money, and where in the world could they find another home if they had to leave the Plum Pudding!

This was the sorrow and care that had changed Phœbe's face from a round and rosy and dimpled little one so that it was now pinched and wan, and had a careworn look that was sad to see. There were several men who wanted Capt. Saul's position at the lighthouse, and would be glad to report anything that they could discover to injure him. Every day Phœbe expected the blow would fall, and they would be obliged to leave their home.

There was to be a great merry-making on Mouse Island. Phœbe's oldest cousin, Marie Cordilly, was to marry Jed Collins, who was soon to sail as mate of the Flying Scud, the finest ship that ever hailed from Pondunquit. But when Phœbe said she didn't think she could come; she would rather stay at home and let her father go, there was a terrible outcry.

Aunt Huldah said Phœbe should come or she'd know the reason, and that was just what Phœbe did not want—that Aunt Huldah should "know the reason." So she said if she possibly could she would come. She tried to persuade her father not to go to Pondunquit Harbor two or three days before the wedding, but on that very day he had an errand that could not be delayed, he said. He came back only just in time for Phœbe to get off to be at Aunt Huldah's as early as she had promised. He seemed to be very kind and affectionate, and told her not to worry; he would take care of the light, and kissed her, which had become quite unusual, and said it was "a great pity if the mate couldn't go on a lark when the captain stayed behind to take care of the ship." He always called the lighthouse a ship, and Phœbe had been the mate ever since she was five years old.

Aunt Huldah Maria rejoiced, even in the midst of her labors as hostess, at Phœbe's bright face. Perhaps the child had only been a little overworked or ailing, and there was not so much trouble at the Plum Pudding as she had fancied. But even while the fiddler was playing his most entrancing strains, and the wedding cake was being passed in most generous slices, Phœbe heard a whisper that made her heart stand still. David Judkin, the son of the man who wanted her father's place, was talking to another young man.

"It isn't such a very thick fog, and I never saw a fog so thick you couldn't see some sign of the Plum Pudding light from Mouse Island; and if it can't be seen to-night it isn't on account of the fog, but because the light isn't there."

"And the Advance is up in the harbor," said the other. "Capt. Saul is at the end of his light-keeping if you are right."

"We might skirmish round a little and see," said David Judkins. "It would be a pity for the officers not to find it out."

The two young men went out. Phœbe knew well where they were going. The Advance was the government steamer whose office was to supply the lighthouses and see that they were kept in proper condition.

David Judkins was going to give warning that there was no light on Plum Pudding. Phœbe went out unobserved. The fog had come so suddenly it was like magic. A dense gray mist seemed to have swallowed up the world. Only very brilliant rays of light could penetrate that fog, but the Plum Pudding light was the finest on the coast. Phœbe's practiced eyes searched anxiously in the direction of the Plum Pudding, but she looked in vain; there was thick darkness everywhere. The lamp on the Plum Pudding was not lighted. Phœbe listened, and heard the steady plash of retreating oars. David Judkins and his friend were rowing vigorously to Pondunquit Harbor.

She ran down to the shore to the place where the rowboat was fastened. She got in and rowed swiftly out into the thick darkness. She had not her compass, which she usually carried in her pocket, and if she had it was too dark to see it without a light. Could she find her way to the island? Phœbe rowed swiftly in the direction of the light. Presently she felt that she had gone far enough; but where was the island? Why did she not get there? The bow of her boat seemed to be pointed toward the open sea. Had she been rowing toward the open sea instead of toward the Plum Pudding? And then suddenly it seemed to her that she was going back toward Mouse Island.

Stout-hearted as she was, Phœbe felt her courage failing. She let the oars slip from her hand into the bottom of the boat and uttered a faint cry of distress. It was so faint that only the sea gulls could have heard it, but an answer came; the sharp, shrill sound of a horn. It could be nothing but the great horn of the lighthouse, although it seemed to come from the direction of Pondunquit Harbor. It was the lighthouse horn. Phœbe rowed with might and main, and very soon a dark shape loomed before her and her boat grazed the rocks of the Plum Pudding. It was at the very steepest part of the rocks, but Phœbe could not delay to row to the landing. Up she scrambled never heeding that her clothes were torn and her hands scratched and bleeding.

It was difficult to find her way to the lighthouse in the darkness, and now there came no sound to guide her. Never before in Phœbe's lifetime had night found that lighthouse with darkened windows. And what had that horn meant? A terrible fear lest something worse than she had thought of had happened to her father made Phœbe's steps falter on the threshold. She pushed the door open, but only to find the living room empty. Phœbe seized a lamp and ran up the lighthouse stairs. At the top she almost stumbled over her father lying in a heap, the great horn fallen from his hands, his red face and heavy breathing showing his sad condition.

Phœbe sprang to the lamp; the great dazzling light flashed out. There were a few moments of silence, and then there came a shout from the water below. Phœbe seized the great horn and blew a blast in reply.

"Light anoy!" shouted a voice.

Phœbe shook her father with all her strength. He opened his eyes and tried with her help to stand on his feet.

"Put your head out of the window and shout to them. Oh, try your best to do it, father," begged Pœbe.

He did try, but it was only a stammering whisper that came.

Phœbe lowered her voice to the gruffest bass notes of which it was capable and called out,—

"Ahoy!"

"All right," shouted the voices below. "We thought there was no light. The fog is so thick that we could not see it ten rods away. Never saw such a fog even in this place. Advance will be here to-morrow with supplies."

"Ay, ay, sir," shouted Phœbe, still in her gruffest tones.

Then, to her great relief, she heard the sound of retreating oars.

Then she helped her father down stairs to his bed. She did not go to bed herself, because she knew her aunt would discover her absence and send some one in search of her, and it was not long before her cousin Augustus Algernon appeared.

"Tell Aunt Huldah Maria that I wanted to come home," was all that Phœbe would say.

"I don't see how you found your way," said Augustus Algernon. "The fog is so thick that I could not see a glimpse of the light till I got half way over. Folks over on the island thought it wasn't lighted; but they may be sure you never would have got here without a compass if it hadn't been."

The next morning Capt. Saul came to Phœbe and laid his hand on her head.

"I tried to light the lamp, Phœbe; I didn't think I'd got so far that I couldn't, and I blew the horn twice; that was all I could do," he said.

"I might never have got here but for that, father," said Phœbe, taking his other hand in hers. She did not reproach him; she never thought of doing that.

"It was the mate that saved the ship last night," continued Capt. Saul, in a voice that trembled, "but with God's help the captain will never be off duty again. He'll never dowse his beak and let that black pirate aboard again!" pointing to a bottle which the child had seen many times before—"if not for his own sake, for the sake of his little gal—he swears that before the Lord."

If you could see how plump and rosy Phœbe has grown you would know that Capt. Saul had kept his word. Aunt Huldah had her suspicions about the doings of that night, but she never expressed them. And there are no signs that old Judkins will ever keep the lighthouse. The fog that was "so thick you couldn't see the Plum Pudding light ten rods away" is still famous.

ENGLAND AND RUSSIA, By George Makepiece Towle. Boston: James R. Osgood & Co.

A most timely and attractive little volume has appeared in "England and Russia in Asia," by George Makepiece Towle. It is the first of a "Timely Topics" series to be issued by James R. Osgood & Co. This volume, in a cheap and compact form, covers the entire subject of the relations and rivalry between England and Russia in the East. It deals not with one phase only of the Anglo-Russian crisis, but exhaustively with all the historical events and circumstances which have led up to it, and of the causes, remote and near, which have brought it about. The reader, after having finished its perusal, will have obtained a clear understanding of the whole subject. Mr. Towle gives an absorbing account of the conquest and government of India by England from the beginning to the present; traces the advance of the Russians through Central Asia for more than two centuries, from their first setting-out down to their occupation of Afgan territory only a few weeks ago; describes with graphic pen the traits and customs of the Tuscomans now under Russian rule; sketches the history and present state of Afghanistan and its people; affords the reader a clear idea of the relative military strength of Russia and of the English in India; and closes with a forcible presentation of the motives and rival purposes of Russia and England in the East. The book is written in a clear, simple, vigorous style, and forms the best, indeed the only, complete survey of the subjects which has been published. This handy volume is to be at once followed by one on "England, Egypt and the Soudan," by the same author; and by similar volumes, from time to time, relating to such "timely topics" as come up to attract the attention of the world.

The Big Sheep Ranches.

The wool growing interest of Montana is almost exclusively confied to the belt of rich grazing country lying between the Yellowstone and Missouri rivers and headwaters of the Teton and Sun rivers. The sheep ranges proper are divided into flocks numbering from 1,000 to 25,000 head, and men of small means are engaging in the business with certain profit to themselves—many of them starting with 1,000 head or less. The sheep growere are proving a more direct and positive benefit to Montana than the cattle men, for the reason that more money is required to conduct the business profitably, and it gives employment to a much greater number of laborers. Sheep require constant care and attention, while cattle require little, and are allowed to roam at will untill the rounding up seasons arives. All the indications for 1885 point to a season of unexampled prosperity for the stock growers of Montana.—St. Paul Pioneer-Press.

"It is too late to save me," said a poor old drunkard, when urged to reform. "It is too late to save me, but, oh! for God's sake, save the boys." Yes, it was too late for him; he had fallen too low to ever dream of forgiveness and peace. The demon of drink held his soul in bondage, and he had lost forever all hope of salvation. With the consciousness of his own degradation, he pleads not for himself, but "for God's sake, save the boys."

DICKENS CARNIVAL IN WOBURN.

THE ANNUAL MAY-PARTY — DICKENS CHARACTERS IN COSTUME—A NOTABLE OCCASION IN WHICH HIGH SOCIAL LIFE LARGELY PARTICIPATED.

Annually for a considerable period it has been the custom of the ladies of the Unitarian church, on each return of the flowery month of May, to celebrate its advent by giving a party in Lyceum Hall for the gratification and entertainment of the public. At each something new has been provided for the pleasure of the people and the large attendance at succeeding parties testified to the high appreciation in which they were held. They have come to be regarded and looked forward to as an important social event and a fitting climax to the entertainments of the preceeding season. Occurring on the threshold of summer when the earth has just awakened from its long winter slumbers; when flowers are beginning to deck the fields and fill the air with their fragrance; when the trees are leafing and budding for autumn fruitage; and all nature is in a laughing, joyous mood, the May-party is doubly welcome and enjoyed.

The ladies who have usually had the planning of these annual May-parties and have been chiefly instrumental in carrying them properly through possess the requisite taste, experience and executive qualifications for the success of the self-imposed task, so that each year something novel is given, and each party is voted superior to its predecessor, if that could be possible. Weeks are sometimes devoted to preparations for the event, and the execution of the plans usually involves much hard labor on the part of the committee who have the arrangements in charge. This was especially true of the party given last Thursday evening.

This year the May-party was given on the evening of April 30 in Lyceum Hall. The attendance was very large, the hall being crowded to such a degree that considerable inconvenience attended the sight-seeing. The character of the company too was excellent, which was gratifying to the managers of the entertainment. The party assumed the shape of a Dickens Carnival, to be succeeded by a dance, and it was a triumph. Ladies and gentlemen who attended a similar exhibition in Boston a few weeks since, and were present Thursday evening, unhesitatingly affirmed that the former did not begin to compare with the latter in the display of costumes, the personation of characters, and general management of the affair. About 150 of the prtncipal characters found in the works of Dickens were represented by persons of every age and degree, and there was not one that was not true to life, or that could not be easily distinguished by those familiar with the great author's works. The following are some of the chief characters:

Capt. J. P. Crane represented Dickens; Pickwick, G. Frank Ellis; Sam Weller, H. M. Aldrich; Judge, W. H. Davis; Buzfuz, W. V. Kellen; Mrs. Bardell, Mrs. S. Simons; Mrs. Bardell's friend, Mrs. Lund; court crier, C. K. Conn; Nicholas Nickleby, Louis Seaver; Kate Nickleby, Nellie True; Mrs. Jarley, Mrs. G. P. Bartlett. The old lady who danced herself to death was represented by Edia Davis; the ruffian disarmed by a smile, Mrs. J. T. Trull and H. Parker; maid pursued by an Indian, Mable Ellis and Edward F. Johnson; maid of honor, Annie S. Wood; Mary, Queen of Scots, Mrs. J. F. Ramsdell; the ghost and maid, Cora and W. Carswell; the senator, J. W. Johnson; Jasper Pecklemerton, P. L. Converse; Mrs. Squeers, Mrs. L. Cole; Barnaby Rudge, H. B. Brackett; Mrs. Rudge, Mrs. T. Frye; Oliver Twist, Walter Mann; Bill Sikes, A. R. Brown; Nancy Sikes, Mrs. Frank Clark; Fagin, H. E. Smith; Toots, Charles Sherburne; Mr. Dombey, Mr. Corey; David Copperfield, W. Fred Bosworth; Dora, Edith Ramsdell; Sophy, Marguerite Falck; Peggoty and Barkis, Mrs. A. A. Fowle and J. F. Ramsdell; Agnes Wickfield, Miss E. Sherburne; Miss Havisham, Miss Etta Crane; Mrs. Heep, Mrs. A. R. Merriam; Mrs. Jellyby, Mrs. O. M. Wade; Lady Dedlock, Mrs. Goddard; Mrs. Marklesham, Mrs. A. B. Brooks; Ada Clare, Mrs. Will Clarke; Ham Peggoty, Bert Day; Betsy Trotwood, Miss S. J. Buxton.

There was a grand procession of characters at 8 o'clock, which was witnessed by the crowd of spectators with great interest. A large space in the centre of the hall was occupied by these grotesquely arrayed persons during the evening and until the dancing began. They were the observed of all observers.

The trial scene in Pickwick was admirable. W. V. Kellen, Esq. as Buzfuz filled the part to perfection. The writhings and contortions of Pickwick during the eloquent and impassioned appeal of Buzfuz to the jury, and Sam Weller's superhuman efforts to keep the old gentleman from pitching into Mrs. Bardell's advocate, and doing other angry and outlandish things, convulsed the audience with laughter. Mr. Frank Ellis was a perfect Pickwick, and the elder Weller would have sworn, had he been there, that Mr. Aldrich was his son Sam. There were full loads of fun in the scene.

Mrs. Jarley's Wax works was a feature. The local hits and play on words and names were mirth-provoking to the last degree. Mrs. Dr. Bartlett was Mrs. Jarley, and she handled her "figgers" like an old showman. Life and men in Woburn came in for caustic hits that kept the audience in a roar. The "figgers" were rare specimens, and it would be hard to find a woman anywhere who could have shown off their parts equal to Mrs. Bartlett. In dress, action, and voice she was Mrs. Jarley, out and out. The persons represented were automatons, or supposed to be, and by winding up with a crank they could be made to move about on the stage and act parts. On opening her show in Woburn Mrs. Jarley experienced considerable difficulty in procuring the services of a first class crank to do the winding, but was at last directed to interview Mr. Fred H. Lewis, who was speedily engaged, and who, Mrs. Jarley assured her patrons, was the crankiest crank in town, and therefore admirably suited to fill the important place. He did not disappoint Mrs. Jarley or the audience. The Senator, (John Warren Johnson), which the show-woman begged the people not to confound with Senator Harlow, was one of the best of the "works." She said he belonged to the "independent" wing of his party, and announced in the last campaign in the Burlington Town Hall that he was a mugwump. It was reported that he is now after a postoffice, but the position of his hands indicated that he would take anything he could get.

Mrs. Squeers (Mrs. Cole) handled the brimstone and molasses in a manner that would make many a mother die with envy. The ruffian (Herbert Parker) who was disarmed by a smile on the white face of a distressed female (Mrs. Trull) was a terrific looking savage, but the smile fetched him, and the girl was saved. The Indian (Ed. F. Johnson) who pursued the maiden (Mabel Ellis) was another fearful character who didn't kill his intended victim.

The Prima-donna (Miss Mabel Davis) was one of the best characters in the show. The old lady who danced herself to death (Miss Edia Davis), the Giant and Fat Man (Mr. A. Ham and Flora Dixon), the Maid of Honor (Miss Annie Wood), the Ghost and Maid (Miss Cora Carswell and Mr. W. Carswell), and particularly Joseph Pecklemerton (Judge Converse), were brim full of fun and excellent hits.

Mrs. Ramsdall was a stately Queen of Scots, and other equally good and interesting "figgers" filled out Mrs. Jarley's excellent bill of fare. These characters were all brought to the footlights, oiled, wound up and set to going by Lewis, while Mrs. Jarley put in the verbal filling to edification and amusement of the crowd.

"The Ivy Queen," the only song Dickens ever wrote, was splendidly sung by Miss Mary How of Boston. This lady has a rich and melodious voice, and her rendering of this piece was admirable.

At 10 o'clock dancing began and was kept up to a late hour. The music was furnished by Baldwin's Cadet Band of Boston, T. W. Henry, cornetist. This May-party was one of the best that has ever been given.

The committee who managed and carried the carnival through so splendidly were Judge P. L. Converse, Benjamin Champney, Albert Thompson, Henry M. Aldrich, Mrs. Phinney, Mrs. Dr. Bartlett, Miss Frost and Mrs. J. F. Ramsdell.

OUR BUSINESS AND FACILITIES.

It is the testimony of those in a position to know that at no time in the last twenty years have the prospects for a large increase of business here been so flattering as they are this spring. Indifference to the public welfare has heretofore been the rule, while individual pursuits have, generally speaking, prospered, but in spite of all discouragements Woburn has increased in manufactures, population and wealth. Business men have been content to attend to their own affairs, to foster their own trades, to look out for number one, and let the town as a whole take care of itself.

There are periods in the history of all places when they renew their life leases and make a spring forward. The time arrives every once in awhile when circumstances favor an advance of public interests and everything encourages a forward move. Then comes an awakening of feeling for the general good, and the progress that communities make are the outcome of such revivals. It is believed that Woburn is about to experience one of these periodical revivals, and that there are bright days for her in the near future. It is in the air.

We are differently cirumstanced from most suburban towns. While close relations are maintained in many ways with Boston we have business of our own which supports a large population and adds materially to our statue year by year. The size and importance of our leather industry is second to no other town in the country. It has given Woburn a name everywhere. The yearly value of the product of our tanneries is close on to $4,500,000: About 1500 men are employed, to whom nearly $600,000 is paid annually in wages.

But there are many other branches of trade besides leather. In 1880 the total value of the products of the various manufacturing industries of Woburn was $5,556,396: capital invested, $1,877,389: number of establishments, 91. This was the exhibit of our manufactures five years ago. They have increased since and are still growing. To this large volume of business must be added that done by our merchants in many lines, farming, and other pursuits which, all footed up, produce a handsome aggregate for a town of 12,000 inhabitants.

To the above many other important pursuits will be added this and for some succeeding years. Already several considerable manufacturing establishments that will bring many skilled workmen and their families have an eye in this direction, one of which has been secured. More are certain to follow in the near future. The organization of the Board of Trade, which is composed of nearly one hundred and fifty of the leading tradesmen and citizens of the town, was opportune, and seems to be a part of the plan, and a very considerable one, in the coming revival. The Executive Committee of the Board keep a watchful eye on movements, changes and planting of manufacturing establishments, and already have several schemes under consideration.

Real estate is looking up. There are more calls for it for business, manufacturing and residence purposes than there has been for years. Dealers inform us that a material advance in prices is certain to be experienced this summer. Individuals and factories seeking locations outside of the city should make a note of this, for they can buy a good deal cheaper now than a few months hence. There is a good opening also for speculators, for money is certain to be made in real estate here in the next year or two.

Our facilities for doing business are good, and in a few months will be unsurpassed. The main line of the Boston & Lowell Railroad runs through the village of Montvale, one mile east of the Centre. Many communities would not regard a railroad only a mile from the centre of trade a bad state of things. But we have the Woburn Branch also with its 40 trains a day, and by next Christmas its extension will be completed, and the Company's main line will run directly through this village. The accomplishment of this excellent scheme will not only supply every facility that could be asked or desired for passenger and freight transportation, but it will open up for settlement a large tract of the best real estate for building purposes in the town. Nowhere can more desirable building sites be found than on the line of the new road between the Centre and Wilmington.

Besides, the extension and adoption of it as the main line will do very much for Central Square and North Woburn. Already a fresh business impulse is felt in both places. We look for the time to come shortly when Woburn will be a continuous solid village, or city, from the Winchester to the Wilmington line. The above is the merest sketch of what we in Woburn are doing and expect to do. A full description would show this to be a very important manufacturing centre, and reflect credit on the town. Our people feel greatly encouraged with the business prospects. The feeling is common that Woburn has entered on a new era of prosperity. We have many men of large wealth whosee in the change additions to their possessions: our community will receive an infusion of new blood in a different class of population: skilled mechanics will neutralize the effects of a class devoted to a single occupation: our town will grow and soon become one of the most important in the State.

☞ Last Tuesday the bill giving female citizens of this State the right to vote for city and town officers, to hold city and town offices, and vote in town meetings, was refused a third reading in the House by a vote of 130 nays to 61 yeas. So, the women will have to try it again next year.

☞ Reil's rebellion in the British northwest is growing. A few days ago there was a desperate fight between the half-breeds and Canadian military in which there were great losses on both sides. The rebels are preparing to drive the troops from the country.

☞ While a peaceful solution of the England-Russia troubles are hoped for, both nations continue their preparations for war, and the situation remains practically unchanged. The best informed of both countries believe that war must come.

☞ Gen. Grant continues to improve in health. On Tuesday he worked on his book several hours and wrote twelve pages of manuscript himself. The doctors are puzzled over the case.

☞ Although strongly opposed by prominent members the teachers' tenure office bill has made a safe passage through the Senate, and bids fair to become a law. It ought to by all means.

☞ The opposition to the appointment of Hon. Eben F. Pillsbury are slow to become reconciled to it. The independent press are bitter in their denunciations of his appointment.

— Dr. George P. Bartlett has been appointed a member of the Boston Board of Pension Surgeons, and took the oath of office on Tuesday last. The position is not new to him, and he will fill it well. The Doctor's friends here, including some prominent Republicans that we know of, heartily congratulate him on his appointment to so important and lucrative an office under the new Democratic administration.

— The JOURNAL didn't know until it read a leading metropolitan daily last Sunday that it was the "official organ of the present town administration." Nevertheless, it is a good administration to be the "organ" of, and the JOURNAL's stomach is not turned by the information.

— It is said that the Wyman real estate, corner of Main and New Boston streets, is soon to be divided up into residence lots and placed upon the market. We trust the report is true. For building purposes—fine residences—there is no tract of land in Woburn that surpasses it.

— The young man who had an overcoat stolen from his room in the Central House two or three weeks ago while he was attending a polo game at Peabody, discovered the garment last Saturday on the back of a fellow in Boston. He recovered it, and will get the rest of the stolen property.

— On Wednesday afternoon a young fellow was arrested by Officer McSweeney on suspicion of being the one who burglarized several rooms of the Central House last month and stole clothing, money and other valuables. He gave his name John Henry Notter, and owned up to the theft.

— The rascals who raid poultry roosts and carry away chickens have emerged from their winter burrowing and taken the warpath again. It is a mean spicies of thieving, but there are a good many of them in the business, who manage to get away with a deal of the poultry-men's property during the summer.

— A few days since Rev. Fr. Murphy discovered that the family of a Union soldier at Walnut Hill were in destitute circumstances and rendered them immediate and proper aid. The attention of the Grand Army Posts was called to the case, by whom suitable provisions for the family have been made.

— The City Rink, which is owned by Messrs. Gay & Parker of Boston, has been secured for the factory of the Sun Electric Co., which will use the basement for their machinery and manufacture of lamps. It will make a capital factory, and very convenient to the railroad. Rinks are good things in their proper place.

— An account of the arrest of Stephen McCall, who brutally outraged a school girl 15 years old at Reading last March, is printed in another column. He is well known here having been in the employ of Pollard & Parker, carriage builders, about the time of committing the crime and just before his flight to New York.

— Some tender plants were slightly nipped in the bud by the frost Sunday night. They come out too early and paid rather dear for their temerity, or foolishness. They forget that frosts, more or less severe, are always imminent from the first to the fifteenth of May, and paid a high price for not remembering that important fact.

— There is talk of the establishment of a factory for manufacturing pockets here. It will employ quite a large number of hands, and make a valuable acquisition to our growing manufacturing business. Mr. Gay, of the coal firm of Gay & Parker of Boston, offers to put a handsome sum of money into this concern if it should come here.

— The horse of one of Mr. Leeds's public carriages became frightened and ran away last Monday, but did no particular damage. Just as the lady, who occupied the hack, was about to jump from it, Thomas C. Boyce, Superintendent of the Fire Alarm telegraph, caught the runaway horse, at great personal risk, and brought him up all standing.

— Mr. N. J. Simonds will have his dynamo and other electric machinery for lighting his factory and business houses in the village in place in about a month. Several Main st. men have engaged light of him as soon as he gets to running, and no doubt that a good many others will do so, as he engages to furnish the electricity as cheap as gas is now afforded.

— The Episcopal society expect to obtain a rector in the near future when no doubt the old differences will die out and the church experience a revival. It has been in a comatose state for some time, but the breath is not all gone out of the body, and a good rector can rebuild a respectably large society. There was quite an increase of pupils at the Sunday school last Sabbath.

— The $10,000 subscription to the Sun Electric Light Company's stock has been nearly all paid in, if not quite. The subscribers responded promptly to the call of the committee. About all that remains to do is to make the necessary changes in the offices of the company, secure a factory and go ahead. Not much time will be required to close the arrangements for active work.

— Hon. B. F. Whittemore exhibited at the rooms of the Board of Trade, the other day, samples of building material lately patented by Mr. A. S. Mayo of Everett, and called the attention of the Board to the importance of securing the manufacture of it here. In the JOURNAL of April 3 a full description of this material is given. The old Norris factory would be just the place for it.

— Last Tuesday Chief Nelson had quite an increase to his family. He was presented with three run-away women and babies from the Tewksbury Almshouse by Officers Tidd and McSweeney who picked them up in the streets about noon and took them to Police Headquarters. The authorities at Tewksbury were telephoned who requested our officers to return the runaways, which they did.

— We ask for information: when, if ever, will general fishing become lawful in Horn Pond? Away back in the prehistoric, or pre his-something, age of the world Marvin Parker and his co-officials stocked Horn Pond with alewives, or some other kind of fish, since which remote and misty period no living mortal has been allowed to fish in its pelluced waters. Neither chick nor child has been permitted to drop a pin-hook even into them, and what we yearn to know is, will the time ever come when the close will be removed and people be allowed to angle for gudgeons in said waters? We have a nice crop of worms ripe and ready to be gathered, but what good do they do if we are barred out from going fishing?

— Pondering with wonder and amazement over a list of prices of dogs in some of the papers the other day, the editor of the Reading Chronicle got hold of a realizing sense of the magnitude of Editor Allen's loss when his dog ran away three or four years ago. Seeing that some rare specimens of the canine genius were priced as high as $2000 he says no wonder Editor Allen keeps up a howl over his loss.

— A catalogue of the School of Expression has been received and will be noticed more particularly at another time. The school has but lately opened in Freeman Place, Beacon street, Boston, by S. S. Curry, Ph. D., Snow Professor of Oratory in the Boston University, and has already 129 students. Among them we find the names of the following Woburn ladies: Miss Ella T. Wyman, and Miss Emma Louise Wyman.

— The price of gas has been reduced by the Woburn Gas Company to $2.20 per 1000 feet. This is clever, and we hope the company will keep doing so. If a strong competition should spring up between gas and electricity we should be likely to get our light pretty cheap. A complete test of the matter shows that gas must be sold at 85 cents a 1000 feet to successfully compete with electric lighting when put to its best paces.

— There are placards in Mr. Amos Cummings's store which read: "A dress for fifty cents," and on special enquiry we found that they mean just what they say. Now, at half a dollar for a dress no woman has the least excuse in the world for going about unclothed. It is cheaper than doing without a dress—fifty cents is—and if Mr. Cummings don't have a big trade in those garments we are no prophet, or son of a prophet.

— Besides being able to supply all demands for cut flowers, Horton & Kelley have a large stock of potted plants for sale, consisting of all the best varieties known—vigorous and thrifty. They have sold a good many of these this spring, and in the course of a couple of weeks, when the season for setting out gets fairly open, these florists will have all they can do to fill orders. The ladies will find Horton & Kelley's a good place to buy.

— Last Monday John C. Higgins's place on Winn street was raided for rum by Chief Nelson and officers Tidd and McSweeney, and the attack was rewarded by the seizure of a lot of cider and gin. This place has been in bad odor for a long time, and the community will be very glad that it is in a fair way of being broken up. Some people were found on the premises who now doubtless wish they had been somewhere else when the officers entered.

— Several matters of importance were attended to at the regular meeting of the Executive Committee of the Board of Trade on last Tuesday evening. Steps were taken for a reorganization of the Committee. A committee on issuing a pamphlet descriptive of the town and its business facilities was chosen. The regular meetings of the Committee are held on every Tuesday evening in the month, except the third, when the meeting of the full Board is held.

— The Advertiser of yesterday printed an editorial a column long to enlighten the JOURNAL and the public on a subject that they knew all about before. Nobody but a fool will contend that the Selectmen have not the right to appoint or reject who they please on the police, and all the JOURNAL claimed was that Conn. Waters and Murphy should, by courtesy, have been accorded a hearing, as they were rejected for cause. The Advertiser is the greatest lawyer in North America.

— Col. H. B. Hayes, who is an inventor of considerable note, is considering the matter of establishing a factory for extracting tannin from bark by a recently patented process, and has examined and approved of the Pollard tannery on Eastern Avenue. By present methods about 25 per cent of the tannin is lost, whereas by the new process this can be saved. A New Hampshire party has the patent, and it is not improbable that through the influence of Col. Hayes a factory may be established here.

— The cost of fitting up the Ladies' Reading-room in the Public Library foots up to something over $1,100. The chairs cost from $20 to $105 apiece; the curtains $500; portiere over $100, etc. It is an elegant room, and the committee are entitled to thanks for their liberality in fitting it up for the use of the ladies. A cheaper furnishing would have been out of keeping with the building, the handsome and richly supplied art gallery, the common reading-room, and general character of the beautiful structure.

— Capt. John P. Crane has purchased the interest of his partner in the firm of J. P. Crane & Co., and will hereafter carry on the business by himself. He has leased the F. L. White shop for three months and set about 100 men to work in it. As soon as the insurance on his tannery recently burned is adjusted Capt. Crane will build a large tannery on the old site. He has had favorable overtures from New York parties to engage in affairs there, but his business interest and family and social ties are here, therefore he will remain.

— The Executive Committee of the Woburn Board of Trade are having frequent sessions, and are making progress in the introduction of several new industries into Woburn, and when they are fairly at work they will give an impetus to the town which we have long hoped for. It is plain to be seen that much good is to come of the organization of the Board of Trade. The energy and persistance which the gentlemen of the Executive Committee are at work is a sure indication of a forward movement.—C.

— The Manchester Union speaks very highly of the concert given by Prof. Fred H. Lewis, piano soloist, assisted by the charming contralto, Miss Mary H. How, of Boston, in Postoffice Hall, that city, last Monday evening. It being the 200th anniversary of the birth of Bach and Hendel the selections for the concert were entirely from the works of those great composers. The Union says Prof. Lewis's playing was, as usual, perfect, and gave great satisfaction to a large and cultured audience. The programme was a fine one. Prof. Lewis is very popular with Manchester musical people.

— The Board of Engineers met Monday evening at their headquarters on Winn street, and organized as follows: Chief, Clarence Littlefield; clerk, J. H. Devlin; driver of Hose 1 and superintendent of fire alarm, Thomas C. Boyce; driver of Steamer No. 1, George F. McDonald; driver of fuel wagon, Thomas Shandley; driver of Hook and Ladder No. 1, Charles P. Buckley; driver of Hose 2, Charles H. Nichols; driver of Hose 3, J. H. Doherty; driver of Hose 6, Charles Dean; fireman of Steamer No. 1, John Giroux.

— Several saloon-keepers have carted away the liquors they had on hand at the expiration of their licenses, and say they are done. If they are honest in it that is a wise determination. They ought to be willing to obey the laws like other people. They can give no good reason why the sale of liquor should be made an exception more than any other business, and the most of them are intelligent people. They know too that to keep the statutes inviolate is altogether the best way, and the most profitable in the long run.

— At the request of Mr. W. B. Gay of Boston a hearing will be given by the Executive Committee of the Board of Trade to representatives of the Pocket Manufacturing Company in relation to the matter of taking stock and removing its business here. The hearing will be given in the rooms of the Board Saturday evening at 7.30 o'clock, p. m. President Skinner is desirous that there should be a full attendance of the Committee as this is a matter of great importance, and should be investigated and decided on by all the members.

— To keep step with the march of improvement in Woburn a prominent citizen is seriously considering the advisibility of organizing a Salvation Army in town. With such a project in view he lately went into the city to study the character and modus operandi of the Army, and quite fell in love with both. Several gentlemen of local distinction have expressed a strong desire to join the Army, either as charter members, or after the same shall have been fully organized, and the prospect is that recruits to its ranks will not be wanting.

— The line of the extension of the Woburn Branch through the Centre has been pretty well cleared of buildings, and the expectation is that the work of construction will begin at an early day. The Bedford Branch was opened on April 30, so that the company's hands are free to take hold of the job here. It was said some time back that the commencement would be made at Wilmington, and this may be the design of the railroad authorities now. At any rate, the road is to be completed and running by the 1st of December next, which will answer Woburn's ends very well.

— Our people are delighted with the express train put on last Friday morning. It has conveyed about 100 passengers daily in and out. The schedule time from Woburn to Boston is 20 minutes and the same out. On Friday morning the running time was 18 and one half minutes. When the passengers landed in the depot on Causeway street they gave three tremendous cheers for the new fast train, and three more rousers for C. S. Mellen Esq., the enterprising and popular General Superintendent of the road. Mr. Mellen need have no fears about Woburn patronizing the fast 8.15 in, and 5.35 out, train.

— Interest in the work of the Woburn Y. M. C. A. grows apace. The attendance on the Sunday afternoon meetings was never more encouraging than at the present time, and the hearty Christian labor of the Association is continually yielding fruit. At the 4 o'clock meeting, next Sunday afternoon, Miss Jennie Skinner, one of our foremost teachers, will give a Bible reading, which, we have no doubt, will be very interesting and attract a large attendance. On Sunday, May 17, Miss Emma Dow will also give a Bible reading at the 4 o'clock meeting. Mr. Hutchins leads the music of the Sunday afternoon meetings with his cornet.

— Last Friday evening a social party assembled at the residence of Mrs. Josiah Parker, Central Square, to celebrate in a quiet way the 25th anniversary of the marriage of her brother Horace Wyman, to Louise B. Horton, a graduate from the first Class formed in Woburn High School. Their residence is in Worcester, where for many years Mr. Wyman (a native of Woburn) has held a lucrative position as Superintendent of the Crompton Loom Works, and has designed and patented many improvements on those celebrated looms. The reception was held in Woburn for the convenience of their relatives who composed the party, and the evening was much enjoyed in social converse, and much enhanced by the cuisine of caterer Dooling of Boston.—H.

— In the shape of a 15-cent suspender the Boston Clothing store has got a big stock of the ne plus ultra on hand. It is a daisy of a suspender—nickle-plated, fleece-lined, and worth several times more than the subscription price. For hot weather there is no article in the market that begins to compare with it. One very valuable peculiarity about this suspender is, that it lets up and lets down at the own sweet will of the wearer, and is thus made to fit, by a simple turn of the wrist, the tallest man or shortest boy. The elasticity of the article is a surprise to everybody. Whoever buys a pair gets the benefit of a bankrupt sale. This seems to be considerable to write about a little 15-cent suspender, but we can assure the public that it is the best thing for the price on the market and we want everyone to know it.

— The Boston Sunday Globe contained the following from the racy pen of its Woburn correspondent: Woburn is now experiencing the driest time for many years. Nearly all the saloons are closed; those that are open have run billiard or pool tables. Thursday evening, by 10 o'clock, those of the liquor dealers who had a supply of beer offered it to all comers without money and without price. On one saloon door-knob is hung a black crape; in others, the placards usually in the window were hung upside down. Bartenders were at a discount, and gathered in groups, advising together how to get out of their difficulty. On the whole the liquor business, whether in the gilded soloon or back kitchen, has got a black eye, and it looks as though they would succeed in their determination to run no risk this year. The new chief has brought with him the reputation of a hard customer among the dealers in the ardent.

— We had for some time been laboring under the impression that the W. V. I. A. was a defunct institution. From that sad mental plight we were rescued day before yesterday. It was a welcome awakening from an unpleasant dream. We have always pinned our faith to the sleeve of the W. V. I. A.—or did while we supposed it had an existance on this mundane sphere—and it is with genuine feelings of delight that we learn of its continued, if not prosperous, condition. Of its programme for the current year we know nothing. Whether it will again offer premiums for the best kept lawns and flower gardens or not is a conundrum which we give up. Whether the society will run to trees considerably this season or not, is another of those nuts which we confess ourself unequal to the task of cracking. It may incline to streets and sidewalks; perhaps to new parks; but whatever feels the pressure of its genius, culture and taste, that thing is bound to shine, and don't you forget it.

A Useful Experiment.

WINCHESTER, MASS., Jan. 2, 1885.

I used Bradley's Phosphate the past season for the first time, as an experiment, to test the claim made by others concerning its good results. I planted two pieces of cabbage, one with manure, the other with Bradley's Phosphate; the crop from the latter was much more abundant—in fact, the largest yield ever given me from the same area of land—and I cheerfully recommend it as an excellent and profitable fertilizer.

In the history of proprietary medicines has any article met success at home equal to that which has been poured upon HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA. Why, such has been the success of this article, that nearly every family in whole neighborhoods have been taking it at the same time. Every week brings new evidence of the wonderful curative properties of this medicine.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Combines the BEST Remedies of the vegetable kingdom, and in such proportion as to derive their greatest medicinal effects with the least disturbance to the whole system. In fact this preparation is so well balanced in its action upon the alimentary canal, the liver, the kidneys, the stomach, the bowels and the circulation of the blood, that it brings about a healthy action of the entire human organism, that can hardly be credited by those who have not seen the remarkable results that have followed its use. If the Sarsaparilla does not prove sufficiently laxative, take a few doses of HOOD'S VEGETABLE PILLS. It is well in all cases of biliousness to take these pills in connection with the Sarsaparilla for the first ten days. That dull, sleepy, sick feeling can be wholly overcome by the use of these remedies. Will you give them a trial and be yourself again?

An ex-alderman of this city says of Hood's Sarsaparilla, "It is the strongest Sarsaparilla I ever saw."

Each dollar bottle contains one hundred (averages) doses. Sold by all druggists.

— The 7.30 a. m. train will stop at Winter Hill to leave High School pupils from Woburn and Winchester until further orders, commencing Monday, May 11.

"I have thee on the hip," cried rheumatism seizing his victim and tossing him on a suffering bed. "Not so," he cried, "not so! Wait, my ancient foe, just five minutes, until the boy brings a bottle of Salvation Oil, then we'll see who wins the day."

Garland Oil Stove

1885.

THE WORLD'S BEST.

This popular Oil Stove is used and recommended by Mrs. Lincoln at the Boston Cooking School. Among its superior features is its new and novel burner, superior to any applied to other stoves and used only on the Garland. It does away with the ratchet wheels for moving the wicks which has been such a nuisance in oil stoves, and affords an even, steady flame. It has two or four-hole boiler tops. Baking, boiling and frying can be done at once.

The Garland is the most popular, convenient and powerful baker in the market to-day. We have sold a great number the last two seasons and they have given decided satisfaction, selling themselves on their own merits. The best is the cheapest.

Woburn Locals.

— Treasurer James N. Dow has got fairly settled in his new home on Academy Hill and has, with his family, already commenced to take comfort. Its location is one of the very best in town and commands the most extensive and pleasantest view of Woburn and surrounding towns anywhere to be found. Academy Hill is regarded the "Court End" of the village for its handsome residences, fine grounds, trees, shrubbery, etc., and well deserves the distinction. Mr. Dow, since purchasing it of Mr. Dexter Carter, has laid out considerable money on the house (the Mower place) in improvements which increase greatly its fine appearance, especially the addition of a neat front porch and railing around the veranda on the north side. The buildings were erected ten years ago upon honor. They were thoroughly built, very conveniently arranged, and make one of the pleasantest residences in Woburn. The house is finished from garret to cellar; is handily divided up; has the sun all day long, and, with its new suit of elegant furniture, makes a home that any rational man might enjoy and feel proud of.

— Some 400 pupils of the St. Charles parochial school attended church last Sunday in a body under the superintendence of the Lady Superior and Sisters. Dressed in pure white the little ones formed a procession at the school building on Main street, and, carrying numerous beautiful banners, under the lead of Miss Mary Kenney, marched to the residence of the priests on Summer street. Here Fr. Quealy, standing on the porch, reviewed the procession, and was delighted. It gave him great pleasure to see so many bright, happy faces paraded and he told them so. The children marched to the church and filed in, producing a very pretty and pleasing appearance. Here the beautiful ceremony of crowning the Virgin Mary was performed by Miss Maggie Reade, who acquitted herself very gracefully, while the small folks who stood around in their white frocks and wings contributed materially to the interest of the occassion. Rev. Fr. Murphy preached an excellent sermon, and altogether the celebration was an affair that gave much pleasure to all who participated in it, and will not soon be forgotten by the children.

— The next meeting of the Woman's Club will be held May 15, parlor of the Unitarian church, Mrs. Stevens of Peabody, speaking upon "Breaking Stones." Mrs. Adelaide Claflin's paper upon "The Duty Women as a Class owe to each other," delivered before the club, on the afternoon of May 1, was, as anticipated, a broad and far reaching essay upon a subject of vital importance, not only to the sex addressed but to thoughtful men and women alike, interested as they equally are in the righteous solution of every social problem. Mrs. Claflin is endowed with a mind and blessed with an experience that enable her to assimilate and develop into acting mental and moral muscle the theories of books and observations of adult life, and mark her in an unusual degree as a personal exponent of the rare and inestimable fusion of culture and common sense. We hope in the near future the pleasure of seeing this lady again in our midst. Those of our readers who keep themselves informed upon the social bearings of the Equal Suffrage cause in this State, will recognize in the names of Mrs. Claflin and Mrs. Kate Gannett Wells (who is expected to appear before the Club at the first meeting of next month) two of the most prominent local advocates of the opposing sides of this great question.

Rink Notes: — Last Friday evening a fine game was played between the Woburns and Cambridge teams at Carter's Academy, which was won by the former in three straight heats. The game drew a large audience, the rink being filled. The best of order prevailed.——On Tuesday evening last an immense crowd assembled at the Academy to witness a game of polo between the Woburns and Bay States. It was a handsomely fought one, and resulted in the Woburns securing two goals to the Bay States three. The floor manager, Mr. Henry Kirk, managed the large party of skaters quietly and handsomely. —— Last Wednesday evening the National Band of Woburn gave a concert at the Academy, which was well attended. The programme, which we published last week, was a fine one, and admirably executed. The National is a first class Band.——There have been enjoyable entertainments at Newton's City Rink during the week. Several polo games have come off there, the most interesting of which were between the Maldens and Woburn Citys, Stoneham Independents and Winchester High School. These were well contested matches and drew good audiences.——The public will ascertain the nature of the attractions at both rinks for the present and coming week by a perusel of the cards of the propriters in this paper.

The Shoes

That are bought at Stetson's establishment corner of Hanover and Blackstone streets, Boston, can be depended on for real downright wear. Also, they can be purchased at prices which bring them within the reach of all. For instance, a lady can buy at this store a very nice Kid Button Boot for $2, while gentlemen can procure a high lace Congress or Button Boot at prices from $2 to $3 a pair that cannot fail to give satisfaction. The store also carries a full line of durable shoes for children. Stetson's old established stand, 158 Hanover, corner of Blackstone streets, Boston. Convenient to northern depots.

WINCHESTER.

Last Tuesday evening the Historical Society held a regular meeting.

Painters and paper-hangers are all busy, and beauty is the result.

The Clefs gave a very fine concert last Friday evening, which was largely attended.

Under the skillful hands of the reformer Mr. Josiah Hevey's store shines like a new-milled dollar.

George W. Davies is the new hand at the Star's helm. The new broom seems to sweep quite clean.

Unlicensed dogs will fare hand unless their owners come to time promptly with their $2 and a collar.

Samuel H. Mead of this place has received the Roach prize of $2000 each year for two years for extraordinary skill in architecture.

The W. V. I. A. have commenced work in good earnest this spring. Many of our best improvements are due to their taste and efforts.

Miss Anna C. Newell enjoys an enviable reputation as a painter. She excels in portrait work in which she shows an eye and hand of great skill.

The subject of the Sunday School Teachers' meeting of the Congregational church last Saturday evening was: "Home Duties—the Christian Warrior."

The Woburn folks object to their fast express to the city should be stopped here to accommodate our people, and there will be no more of it. Conductor Jud. Hart has got things fixed to bar us out from the enjoyment of the fast train.

At the meeting of the School Board last Friday evening Dr. Daniel March Jr. was elected Secretary. The sewing classes will occupy the upper rooms in the Chaplain School house and the final hour of Wednesdays and Saturdays school sessions will be devoted to the needle. The Committee recommended the oppointment of Mrs. Susan C. Bailey for teacher of the sewing classes, Miss Symmes to assist. The committee on drawing reported a plan for supplying pupils with cards and slates for their work. Mr. Carter of the State Board will meet the teachers and scholars here at half past 10 o'clock on June 2, to instruct them in the mysteries of drawing. A substitute has been appointed in the High School for Miss Lord who is ill. All teachers are instructed to report at the next meeting of the Board the names and ages of pupils qualified for promotion.

BURLINGTON.

Mr. B. Browne of the Boston Post Office spent last Sunday in Burlington.

The assessors are making their annual tour, this week.

There was a May party in the Town Hall, last Friday evening. A large number attended.

Miss May E. Fuller, the soprano singer of the church choir, has removed to Acton, where her parents are residing. Her departure from town will be sincerely regretted by her many friends.

Prof. D. Dorchester of the Methodist church at Arlington Heights will preach at the Burlington church, next Sunday morning. It will be remembered that Prof. Dorchester gave a very interesting lecture here, last winter, and those who had the pleasure of listening to him, at that time, should invite their friends and neighbors to go to church and hear him, next Sunday.

The Sunday school gave an interesting concert, in the church, Sunday evening. The subject of the concert exercise was "Our Homes." Miss May E. Fuller gave a fine solo, "Where is Heaven?" and Mrs. M. E. S. Curtis sang "The New Kingdom." Recitations were given by Miss Sarah F. B. Morris and Master Joseph L. Foster. The church was well filled and the audience seemed appreciative and attentive.

Few People Escape.

The taint of scrofula in the blood. With many it is hereditary; but it may also be acquired from want of air or lack of exercise, from improper food, or any cause which brings about weakness of the body and impurity of the blood. The disease is characterized by running sores, abscesses, swellings, enlarged joints, sore eyes, etc. No medicine has been so successful in curing scrofula, as Hood's Sarsaparilla. The most terrible running sores gradually disappear under the purifying and strengthening influences of this great medicine. If you are a sufferer from scrofula and desire more evidence as to the wonderful success of Hood's Sarsaparilla, send to C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass., for a book containing many remarkable cures.

McCall Captured.

Reading, May 5. — Nearly two months ago Gertrude Stimpson, aged 15, was brutally assaulted while on her way home from school. She gave a description of her assailant, and a few days afterwards she was shown a picture of Stephen McCall of Stoneham by Officer Meloney of Wakefield. She identified the picture, and then Officer Meloney and two or three Boston officers set to work to catch McCall, but through some mistake made by the Boston officers McCall escaped, and Officer Meloney spent several days in New York looking for him, and, although unable to find him, he was satisfied that he was somewhere in that neighborhood. A few days since the officer ascertained that McCall's mother-in-law, who lives with Mr. Bancroft at Stoneham, was receiving letters from McCall, who signed his name "Robert St. Clair," and directing that she send her letters to Jersey City. After seeing the letters, the officer communicated the facts to a detective in Jersey City, and that official found where McCall was stopping by calling at the Jersey City Post Office, where he was shown a postal card from McCall, directing the postmaster to forward all letters addressed to "Robert St. Clair" to East Orange, which is a short distance outside of Jersey City. Officer Meloney was notified yesterday that his man had been located, and he left for Jersey City at 4 p. m. yesterday. He sent a message to Wakefield this forenoon, stating that he had McCall under arrest, and would leave for Boston with him on the 3 p. m. train from New York, arriving in Boston at 9 in the evening.

The town of Reading offered a reward of $300 for McCall's capture, and besides this sum the citizens of Reading and Wakefield agreed to subscribe as much more. Officer Meloney deserves great praise for his successful work.

SPRING AND AUTUMN.

From the southland came a songbird,
Flying in the golden springtime,
Soaring on the clouds at morning,
Singing to the sun at noontime,
Chanting to the stars at even:
Sang he loud with joy exultant,
Sang he low for love of God.

Ah! thou hapless little songbird,
Where are now thy songs of springtime?
Where are now thy flights at dawning?
Throbs thy heart no more at noontime;
Chantest thou no more at even:
Hushed and dead thy song exultant.
Ah! the pathless ways of God!

Fun.

"Adam" is the name of a new daily paper issued just before Eve.

A recent effusion is called "A Poet on an Editor." It's wrong, all wrong; the editor is always on top.

"The way to sleep is to think of nothing," says a scientist. All an editor has to do is to ruminate over his bank account.

"Write something on Lent," said the managing editor. And the editor sat down and wrote: Umbrella.

Tennyson says: "Men are God's trees." Some, however, that call at newspaper offices are not. They never leave.

A recent article is entitled "A Poet on an editor." This is reversing the usual title. Generally the editor sits down on the poet.

A New York editor complains that "the silver dollar is too big and the gold dollar is too little." Our objection to both is that they are too slippery.

"What is education?" asked a writer. Well, it is something a college graduate thinks he has until he becomes a newspaper man. Then he has to begin all over again.

Crabb Robinson says that Goethe never had an affliction which he did not turn into a poem. Some writers never have a poem which they do not turn into an affliction.

"Going down stairs should always be done very deliberately," advises a physician. In order to do this we would suggest that poets take the precaution to send their verses by mail.

Some men go into the newspaper business for the purpose of making money, but they soon come to the conclusion that they should work for fame.

Noticed anything fresh to-day?" asked the dude as he strolled into the editorial room. "Nothing until you dropped in," replied editor, carelessly, and there was no more said.

"How can I always win money at poker?" writes an anxious subscriber to a Western editor. "How do I know" replied the journalist. "If I could do that, do you suppose I'd be fool enough to edit a newspaper?"

A graduate of the University of Michigan who is a good Greek and Latin scholar is doing duty as a policeman in Detroit. He would have entered journalism and molded public opinion, but he has a wife and two children depending upon him for support.

Mrs. Frank Leslie claims to have "the smallest foot of any lady in the United States." Mrs. Leslie publishes a dozen newspapers and magazines, and this information concerning the size of her foot will prove encouraging news to those poets who are in the habit of offering their poetical effusions personally.

Editors have their peculiarities as well as other people. They practice and inculcate brevity, which is a virtue. They are absent-minded, which is a failing. It is not strange, then, that one should send a note to his lady love like the following: "Dearest, I have carefully analyzed the feeling I entertain for you, and the result is substantially as follows: I adore you! Will you be mine? Answer." Then after a moment of thought he added, in a dreamy, absent way: "Write only on one side of the paper. Write plainly and real name, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith."

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle.

Dip Your Crust in Your Own Gravy.

A gentleman at a recent meeting said: "There was a man who was given to strong drink: he sold one thing after another until he had nothing left. One morning he came from his work, and looked about for something to eat; but failed to find anything but a crust of bread. Taking the crust in his hand, he made his way to the public house, where he was sure of getting warm, at any rate. Soon he was sitting comfortably in the public house keeper's warm kitchen. She was busily engaged in frying ham for breakfast. She had occasion to leave him alone for a few minutes, and on her return she found him dipping his crust into her pan. "Scoundrel," she exclaimed angrily, "how dare you dip your crust in my gravy?" These words went so much to the poor man's heart that he went home, and nothing more was heard of him for months. One day when the public house keeper was standing at her door, she saw the man whom she had ordered out of her shop coming up the street with his wife, and both were respectable dressed, "Oh, John, where have you been? We haven't seen you for a long time, come away in." "Well," replied John, "I just did as you told me; I have been dipping my crust in my own gravy. You see, I took your advice, and wife and children, and, thank God, myself, have all gravy to dip our crusts in now."—Sel.

National League For The Suppression Of The Liquor Traffic.

A Mass Meeting will be held in Tremont Temple, Boston, Monday, May 11th, at noon. The first session will be opened by the Ruggles Street Quartette, and will continue to 1.30 o'clock P. M.; the second from 2 to 5 o'clock P. M.

The plans and purposes of the League will be set forth by its officers, aided by distinguished speakers from abroad, and the present aspects of the Temperance Reform will be discussed.

Mrs. J. Ellen Foster, of Iowa, will speak at the noon meeting, Rev. Thomas L. Poulson, D. D., of Baltimore, Mrs. Mrs. Mary A. Livermore, Rev. E. E. Hale, D. D., Rev. D. Dorchester, D. D., and others, will address the Convention.

During the few months since the organization of the League, its principles and methods have received the heartiest indorsement from leading friends of temperance of different parties though the country. Words of approval have come from almost every State and Territory in the Union, and co-operative endeavors are already very widespread and earnest.

A large edition of the first of a series of Standard League Documents, —an explanation and vindication of non-partisan methods of promoting temperance,—by the President of the League, has been issued, and is being sent over the land.

The second document, "A Plea for Prohibition versus The Sterile Philosopher's Plea," has been prepared by an eminent member of the legal profession, Judge Rhone, of Pennsylvania, and will soon appear.

Meanwhile the increasing enroachments of the Liquor Traffic, and its devastating horrors, are continually arousing new classes of citizens to measures for self-protection, and the various forms of temperance legislation now being urged, furnish fruitful subjects for inquiry and debate.

While the National League advocates and employs non-partisan methods, also, are cheerfully co-operating with the League, in working along its main lines of effort.

The exigency demands a spirit of hearty co-operation in all friends of temperance, making common cause against a common foe.

A cordial invitation to the Convenis extended to all.

By order of the Directors,
A. H. PLUMB,
Recording Secretary National League.

The Oyster.

An oyster has a stomach and a heart. In America it has a sex, but none in Europe. We have male and female oysters on the American coast. Those of Europe combine the two sexes in one animal. Two parent oysters produce many million oysters in a season. These bivalves were cultivated for food in the days of Pompeii and Herculaneum. They used to be far more plentiful than they are now in our country. There was once a great bank of them on the Maine coast. If let alone the creatures might grow to be a foot and a half long. The garden of them is in Chesapeake bay, but even there they are disappearing before the murderous system of fisheries pursued. Fortunately the abundance can be brought back by cultivation — persistent and systematic cultivation.

The distinguished U. S. Senator from Indianna, Hon. Daniel W. Voorhees, certifies that in a case of rheumatism in the back, he obtained instantaneous relief from St. Jacobs Oil. He says it is a remarkable remedy.

A temperance reform is in progress in Troy, N. Y., where over 2,000 men have recently joined the pledge. The saloon keepers are appalled, and only appalled, and only 125 have taken out licenses. Last year liquor was sold in 780 places.

Items of Interest.

It costs $500,000,000 to support the criminals in this country. It is not estimated how much the criminals who are not in jail cost the country, but it is very much more.

Wolves still abound in France. Last year rewards were paid for the distruction of 1,305, the amount reaching over $4,000. Nine persons were attacked and killed by wolves during the year.

The New York Tribune says that "one of the minor results of the uprising of El Mahdi in the Soudan may possibly be a gum-arabic famine. Most of the gum arabic of commerce comes from the country now in the possession of the false prophet, and since the fall of Khartoum little gum arabic has found its way out of the Soudan."

The surprising statement is made by an exchange that the demand for gunpowder is greater in times of peace than in war. It is said that more was used in the construction of the Hoosac Tunnel than during the course of the late civil war. The United States consumes on the average 100 tons a day, which is estimated to be more than would be burned in a battle in which 50,000 men would fire forty rounds each.

The cook in a New York club was bothered by a number of rats, until he hit upon a novel dish of them. He collected a small pan of wine-bottle corks, and chopped them up. Then he fried the pieces in lard, and breaded them. The rats ate them all night, and drank from a dish of water conveniently placed. In a few days the rats were all found dead, and the cook was very happy over his experiment.

The ninth volume of the tenth census report, just issued, shows that the forest product of this country for the census year amounted to $700,000,000 in value, while the wheat harvest, valuing the product even at $1 a bushel, amounted to only $450,000,000, and our iron and steel production is less than $300,000,000. All our coal, soft and hard, for the year, was valued at $100,000,000, while our wood burned for domestic purposes alone was estimated to be worth more than three times that sum.

A narrow escape from premature burial is reported from Freeport, Ohio. It was a case of suspended animation in a boy who showed signs of life at the grave, and finally was restored to consciousness. In many instances where it has been supposed that persons were buried alive there has been room to doubt that fact, as well as the natural inference that many more people are thus interred than is commonly suspected; but in this case the principal fact cannot be disputed, and the old inference will be drawn again.

A funeral in Moscow, when conducted as is usually the case, in the orthodox national manner, is a picturesque and interesting sight. The procession is headed by longbearded priests in their black robes, carrying shrines and burning tapers in their hands. Next comes the hearse with four horses. On the steps of the hearse are more priests, holding images of the Savior over the coffin. Yet more follows, speaking words of consolation to the friends and relatives of the departed. As the procession moves on the people in the streets cease from their occupations, uncover their heads, bow, and pray for the repose of the deceased.

A Queer Scheme.

In the way of novel eating, an enterprising New York adventuress has hit upon an odd idea. She advertises as follows: "A young widow of means, with lovely apartments, desires a cultivated gentlemen to take an occasional dinner with her; he must be wealthy and give highest references; none others need apply." That is a bait which is catching big messes of fish. The man who writes in nibbling response is invited to call at an apartment house near Madison Square, where he is received by a handsome and fashionably attired young woman with a remarkably limber tongue, who makes an appointment for him to dine with her on a certain day. He can bring as many friends as he chooses, and the charge per plate is two dollars. "Which barely covers the cost," she mildly purrs, "for I don't seek to make profit out of the mere sociability. She suggests, too, that her guests might like to have her assemble their own number of agreeable ladies at the table—on the same terms. The oddity of the scheme is captivating, and probably a dinner-party of two to half a dozen couples is made up. The dinner is excellent and reasonably cheap. The young women are glib, good looking, and fashionably dressed, and there is a hilarious evening over the convivial board; but when the bill comes to be settled it is found that a great deal of wine, mostly champagne, has been swallowed, and the visitors are lucky if they get off with a charge less than ten dollars apiece. This is the queerest restaurant that the inventiveness of New York has yet devised. —Argonaut.

Rescued to a Life of Usefulness.

In the Luteran cathedral at Magdeberg there is a monument erected to the memory of the Frau von Asseburg, she is represented as a mature woman, kneeling in front of a block of stone, and by her side is her husband. Stretching outward from her side is a goodly line of daughters, and from the side of her husband an equal line of sons. The inscription relates how this noble lady was, after her marriage taken sick, and, under the supposition that she was dead, the body was left in the family vault. Fortunately, the vault was left unlocked, and, regaining consciousness in the night, she returned home to her husband, and bore all this family after her strange experience in the tomb.

The Flower Medicine Co., is conferring a great boon upon the public by introducing the remedies of that celebrated physician, Dr. R. C. Flower, whose practice has been so phenominally successful, that without doubt these remedies will be much sought after.

The late Dr. Willard Parker one of the most eminent physicians in the land, said the average life of a liquor-drinker was but little more than half that of the non-drinker.

LITERARY NOTICES.

OUR LITTLE ONES for May is a very bright and beautiful number. Almost every page contains a picture with which the little folks will be pleased; and then the stories and poetry they will find delightful reading these warm spring days. OUR LITTLE ONES is published by the Russell Publishing Company, Boston, who know how and spare no expense to make a magazine that children will love.

GOLDEN DAYS, published by James Elverson, Philadelphia, is a magazine intended for boys and girls, although it is equally well adapted to adults, who find its monthly issues entertaining and instructive. Each number contains a profusion of pleasing and valuable illustrations which increase the interest of the text which they embellish. There are many stories too in each issue, with lively sketches, poetry, anecdotes and other interesting reading. An excellent feature of the magazine are the Sunday School lessons, which are furnished by a competent writer, fully explaining the lesson for each Sunday in the month, and afford great help to the superintendent, teacher and pupil. Briefly, GOLDEN DAYS is a first-class, high-toned, clean magazine.

ST. NICHOLAS for May opens with an amusing story entitled The Tricycle of the Future, with strikingly descriptive illustrations. A timely paper on the New Orleans Exposition, from the stand-point of a boy and girl who have lately visited it, will interest their compeers. Mrs. S. M. B. Piatt's sweet Irish poem, In Primrose Time, reminds us that Spring has come again in earnest. Driven Back to Eden tells of the tasks and pleasure of spring-time; while Children of the Cold shows how, even in the land where Winter lingers in the lap of Autumn, the boys and girls are not without their games and amusments. His One Fault, and Among the Law-makers have entertaining instalments, and a sketch of Handel forms the second of the From Bach to Wagner series. Myself, or Another? will be of especial interest to young readers, as it is the story which won the first prize in the recent competition for the best story for girls, to be written by a girl. In addition to the foregoing and a great deal else that is interesting, beautiful, and instructive, are another Brownie poem, a long Persian legend put into verse by H. H. (Helen Jackson) and some bright jingles by Laura E. Richards, with several full-page illustrations by Reginald B. Birch.

Miss Anna L. Dawes, the accomplished daughter of Senator Dawes of Massachusetts, has in the press of D. Lothrop & Co., under the title of How We are Governed, a popular treatise on government in the United States. The advance orders are said to indicate a large sale.

Tennyson has sent to the author of The Gray Masque (Mrs. Mary B. Dodge, D. Lothrop & Co. publishers) an autograph letter in which he speaks of the book in most complimentary terms.

A story from the versatile pen of H. H. Clark of the United States Navy is announced by D. Lothrop & Co., under the captivating title of Boy Life in the United States Navy.

Mrs. Mary H. McQueen, of Brooklyn, N. Y., enters the literary field with a delectable little book entitled Baby Barefoot. It will be issued by D. Lothrop & Co. in a few days.

One of the most talented writers at the West is undoubtedly Mrs. Ada Langworthy Collier of Dubque, Iowa. Her last story, now appearing in the Overland Monthly, gives evidence of marked power. Her most important work, Lilith—The Legend of the First Woman, is announced by D. Lothrop & Co. It is the intensely interesting story, told in exquisite language, of the legendary predecessor of Eve in the garden of Eden.

Alaska has found a worthy chronicler in E. Ruhamah Scidmore whose excellent book will be issued by D. Lothrop & Co. next week.

The present interest in Chinese affairs will make doubly welcome the complete authentic, and scholarly one volume History of China, by Robert K. Douglas, just published by D. Lothrop & Co.

Many will be glad to know that Goethe's best sayings have been gleaned and brought together by C. Adelaide Cooke, in a delightful volume published by D. Lothrop & Co., under the title of Many Colored Threads.

Centrifugal Force.

Artemus Ward did not claim to be a scientist, but rather an artist in wax. He once gave his thoughts, however to one of the great problems of science with this result:

The earth moves round from west to east in a year, and turns on its axis in a day.

Supposing the earth to be suddenly arrested on its axis, we all—men, women, children, horses, cattle, and sheep, donkeys, editors, and members of Congress—with all our goods and chattels, would be thrown into the air at a speed of one hundred and seventy-three miles a minute, every mother's son of us describing the arc of a parabola, which is probably the only description we should ever be able to give of the affair.

This catastrophe, to one sufficiently collected to enjoy it, would doubtless be exceedingly amusing; but as there would probably be no time for laughing, we pray that it may not occur until after our demise, when, should it take place, our monument will probably accompany us.

"Gentle Spring."

Among spring preparations, do not neglect that which is most important of all—your own body. During the winter the blood absorbs many impurities, which, if not expelled, are liable to break out in scrofula or other disease. The best spring medicine is Hood's Sarsaparilla. It expels every impurity from the blood, and gives strength to every function of the body. Sold by all druggists.

Nankin's Porcelain Tower.

The city of Nankin, the capitol of China, has for centuries been famous to the "barbarians" of the outer world for its porcelain tower—a relic of the splendor of its ancient days before Peking usurped its dignity as the seat of the empire. The place is now, to a great extent, a city of ruins, and the city proper has shrunk to one-forth of its former dimensions. The porcelain tower was built quite early in the fifteenth century, by the order of the Emperor Yung Loh, and as a work of filial piety. It was a monument to the memory of his mother, and he determined that its beauty should as far outshine that of any similar memorial as the transcendent virtues of the parent, in her son's eyes, surpassed those of the rest of her sex. No expense was spared in its erection, and its total cost is estimated at more that three-fourths of a million of our own money. The work was commenced at noon on a certain day in 1413, and occupied nearly twenty years in its completion. The total height of the porcelain tower was more than 200 feet, or about equal to that of the monument of London, and it was faced from top to bottom with the finest porcelain, glazed and colored. It consisted of nine stories, surmounted by a spire, on the summit of which was a ball of brass, richly gilt. From this ball eight iron chains extended to as many projecting points of the roof, and from each chain was suspended a bell which hung over the face of the tower. The same arrangement was carried out in every story. The bells added much to the graceful appearance of the tower, breaking its otherwise formal and monotonous outline. Round the outer face of each story were several apertures for lanterns, and when these were all illuminated, we are told, in the magniloquent language of the Chinese historian, that "their light illuminated the entire heavens, shining into the hearts of men, and eternally removing human misery." It is not difficult to imagine, however, that the appearance of the tower on such an occasion must have been beautiful in the extreme. On the top of the tower were placed two large brazen vessels and a bowl, which together contained various costly articles in the nature of an offering and a charm to avert evil influences. Among these were several pearls of various colors, each supposed to possess miraculous properties, together with other precious stones and a quantity of gold and silver. In this connection, designed to represent the best treasures of the state, were also placed a box of tea, some pieces of silk, and copies of some ancient Chinese writings. The tower was demolished by the Taeping rebels in 1853.

Queer Customs.

The manners and customs of the Masai, as described by Mr. Joseph Thompson in the account of his recent travels in Africa, are to put it in the mildest language, most peculiar, and a whole chapter is devoted to the description of them. Their usual mode of salutation on meeting is to spit in each other faces, the more copious the expectoration the greater the friendship; and Mr. Thompson, having been voted a great medicine man, was expected to cure diseases in this way; but so great was the demand on his salivary organs that he could satisfy his patients by taking repeated draughts of water.

Equally strange is the custom of all the unmarried men and women living in villages together, while the married folks live by themselves; these latter are allowed to eat and drink what they like, but the unmarried ones may only eat meat and drink milk. As soon as a man marries he ceases to be a warrior and has to tend the herds of cattle. He is no more allowed to join in cattle raids, or that extermination of his neighbors which is continually going on, and which seems to be the greatest delight that the young Masai is capable of enjoying; and it is probably because they would have to forego the pleasures of rapine and bloodshed that these amiable people decline entering into the state of matrimony.

They have certainly a kind of religion, but very little even of that, and seem to have no belief in a future, as all dead bodies are thrown to the hyenas, who are so encouraged by being thus continually fed that if no one should die to provide them with a feast, they help themselves to the living by taking the children out of the huts.—London Field.

Temperance.

A little girl of this city hit it very happily, when she said one reason why she was glad her father had quit drinking, was because he sent her to the butcher shop now to buy beefsteak instead of to beg liver as she used to do. There is nothing left to be said, for a neat temperance lecture.

The Grand Jury made their final presentment yesterday. They say: "As the larger portion of crimes are caused by drunkenness, or are committed in saloons, a reduction of their number is imperatively essential to the public welfare, and we recommend a high license, increasing from year to year, until it becomes practically prohibitory to all but a few, as a measure which experience indicates to be the best adapted to the conditions existing in large cities." —Phila. Ledger.

Safest Place to Ride.

After much discussion it has been decided that if there is any safest place on a railway train, it is in the rear seat of the car. One of the greatest trials of sleeping-car conductors' lives is to provide center lower berths for everybody who comes. If the center of the car rides any easier than the end, then the cars, built as solid and strong as they are, spring up and down in the middle precisely as does a buckboard. If they do not, why should it ride any easier? As a matter of fact, the jar in an ordinary sleeper will be found, by close tests, to be quite as noticeable in the center as in either end of the car.

Yankees Abroad.

There is a story of three Yankees abroad who compared notes. One said: "I was mistaken for the emperor of Russia." Quoth the second: "And I am continually asked if I am not Louis Napoleon." Up spoke the third: "I kin beat that. Yesterday I was goin' along the Champs Elysees and a fellow slapped me on the back and hollered: 'Satan, is that you?"

KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY
Cures a Terrible Case of Gravel When Other Help Failed.

What is Gravel? what causes it, and who are most liable to it? It is frequently attended with acute pain, and unless relief can be found, produces inflamation and death. Both sexes and all ages are liable to it, although men who have reached or passed middle age are its most common victims. Nothing is more urgently needed than a reliable medicine for Gravel, as the disease seems on the increase, and we are glad to say that such a specific is now before the public in the form of DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, of Rondout, N. Y. We put in evidence the following letter, selected from many similar communications:

PITTSFIELD, Mass., March, 1884.

Dr. David Kennedy.

DEAR SIR:—You have a right to know, and I desire the public to know my experience with Gravel and my remarkable recovery through the use of your "FAVORITE REMEDY." I am a carpenter living in this place, and there are plenty of witnesses to the truth of what I say. My first comparatively slight attack of Gravel was in the year 1878. It passed away, and I had little more trouble until last July, 1883. One day when at work in my shop I was suddenly seized with a keen and terrible pain in my left side. I consulted two physicians at once. One said: "I can do nothing for you. Your case is incurable!" I was frightened and went to the second, who said little, but gave me a prescription. It did no good.

Then began a series of experiences the agony and horror of which words cannot depict. Think of it! I was sometimes taken in the street, and would fall, writhing with agony, upon the sidewalk. It was death in life. Thank Heaven, I then heard of "KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY," through Mr. P. P. Cooley. I had not used half a bottle when I passed three stones in succession, one of which was nearly one-half an inch long. I persevered with the medicine, the system gradually abated, and I have had no more trouble since. I am well, thanks to you and "FAVORITE REMEDY." Yours most gratefully, JAMES D. KENNEDY.

What "FAVORITE REMEDY" did in this case it has done in many others.

A GLOVE.

Ah, yesterday I found a glove
Grown shabby, full of tiny rips,
But dear to me because my love
Once through it thrust her finger tips.

A glove one would not care to see
Upon his arm along the street;
Yet here I own there is for me
No relic in the world more sweet.

A faint, far scent of lavender
Steals from it, as the clover smelt
When through the fields I walked with her,
And plucked the blossom for her belt.

Faith! but I loved the little hand
That used to wear this time-stained thing,
Its slightest gesture of command
Would set my glad heart fluttering.

Or if it touched my finger, so,
Or smoothed my hair—why should I speak
Of those old days? It makes, you know,
The tears brim over on my cheek.

Poor, stained, worn-out, long-wristed glove!
I think it almost understands
That reverently and with love
I hold it in my trembling hands.

And that it is so dear to me,
With its old fragrance, far and faint,
Because my mother wore it, she—
On earth my love, in heaven my saint.

—James Berry Bensel.

THE GRIZZLY'S POCKET.

BY HENRY NEWPORT.

"That's a pretty little girl you got with you in the Pullman, Cap. Granddaughter?"

"No, she ain't no granddaughter," said "Cap.," looking at the conductor with an injured expression. "I ain't no spring chicken, and yit I ain't no grandad."

"Daughter, perhaps?"

"Nary daughter."

"Niece?"

"Nur yit niece."

"Child of a friend, may be?"

Cap. gave two or three savage pulls at the long cigar, which had beguiled him from the side of the little girl in the Pullman into the free and easy atmosphere of the smoker, before he saw fit to answer the conductor's last question. The express (en route to El Paso) had entered on that long run between Oakland Pier—four miles out of San Francisco—and Lathrop, ninety-one miles distant, and seeing several hours without a stop before him, the conductor had strolled into the smoker for a chat.

"See here, young feller," said Cap. at that, "did I pay that gal's way, or didn't I? Did you punch her cowpon with that little silver pistol of yours, or didn't you? Do I owe this yer road anything? Ef I do, present yer bill; ef I don't what makes you so all-fired keen to know the whole history of the case? I ain't a kidnappin' her; you kin bank on that; but all the same she ain't no kith nor kin er mine, and she don't belong to no friend. I'm a takin' her to her mother in St. Louey. Jest heft that pile."

He twitched a red cotton handkerchief out of an inner pocket and thrust it into the surprised conductor's hand.

"Jest heft that pile," he continued, "it's pure, solid twenty-four karat gold; ever grain of it belongs to that little gal, and I'll bet the drinks you can't come within a hundred of its value. Jest heft it once."

The conductor held the handkerchief by its ends, and gravely "hefted" something of about the bulk of an ordinary fist, which was knotted in the centre of the rag.

"It weighs about two pounds, I judge," he said, after some little hesitation.

"What is the figger?"

"Well if it is pure gold, as you say, it may be worth $500.

"You are jest a hundred out. She is worth $402.23. A greasly bar played St. Nicholas' game last Christmas eve and throwed that handsome little tribute into the little girl's stocking. He killed her dad at the same time and died himself—which was two of the whitest deeds as ever a greasly done, to my way of thinking."

To the conductor's way of thinking, as well as that of every passenger within hearing, Cap. was altogether too lightheaded to be trusted with his own superintendence while making his five days' run between San Francisco and St. Louis, much less to be the pro tem. guardian of a seven-year-old girl. He saw the incredulous smiles excited by the remark, and seemed to understand the pitying glances which went with them.

"Of course, you think I am crazy," he said, simply. "They can't be no such thing as that happen. All the curious things has happened already. There ain't no gold in Californy no more, and they ain't no greaslys in the Rockies, and they ain't nothing odd nor outlandish in the whole world. Everything is dead open and shet. What you don't see you don't believe. But all the same it's true, and ef I told you it happened back in '49 you'd believe it but becuz it happened last Christmas eve, and becuz I'm here and the gold is here and the little gal is back in the Pullman asleep it seems too much like bringing miracles home to you, and you shake your head and say: 'all a lie; the old man's crazy.'"

He had the knot in the handkerchief undone by this time, and gave the conductor, as well as two or three of the passengers, a satisfying inspection of the pound and a half lump of dull, yellow metal which it had enfolded. The conductor pronounced the metal to be, without doubt, genuine gold.

"You see, it was this way," said Cap. turning about in his seat so that he could speak to those in the seat behind him as to the conductor in front—"me and the old lady allus calc'late to give our children a little candy and things every Christmas; but when, the day before Christmas, I came home from the store down in the village with a pound or two in this pocket, and a few pounds in that, and a sack full slung over my shoulder, and a wooden elepaant with a leather trunk and a Noah's ark, and a doll baby that would cry 'mamma,' a bursting out of a paper sack in my arms, and me a-sneakin' around the back way so as the children might not catch me and tumble to the racket, I felt like a full growed St. Nicholas and my heart was jest a singing 'Peace on earth and good will toward men.'

"'Abner,' says my old lady when she sees my pile, 'I don't believe that little gal down to Jake Pearson's ranch is got a blame thing. Jake is that mean that he'd never squander a dollar on fool toys, and it jest natchelly makes me tired to think of our brats rolling in goodies and that little yeller haired girl without even molasses.'

"I saw her bluff and raised it. 'Gimme that there doll, old lady,' I sez, 'and a tin horse and about two pounds of that confectionary, and we'll see if she don't have a Christmas yet, all the same.

"I put 'em in a sack and waltzed along the road tell I kem to the place jest above Pearson's ranch, which lies at the foot of the mountain, and after stumbling down fur about a hundred yards I could almost look down Pearson's chimbly, directly underneath me, and all at once I heard the little gal scream.

"Pearson hadn't lived in them diggin's more'n six months, and we neighbors didn't know a great deal about him; but our wimmen folks they'd a spied out the land a little, as wimmen will, and they 'lowed that Pearson was a-livin in the shanty all alone, 'cepting fur this little seven-year-old gal, and they swore up and down that he didn't treat her right. They knew he was a rascal the first time they seed him, and once or twice he was seen a whippin' her with a luther strap. We men didn't take much stock in their talk; but we laid low and 'lowed that the first time we ketched him red-handed a-whippin' ary gal with a luther strap 'ud be a mighty unhealthy time for Pearson.

"Well, sir, boys, he wus doing that very thing when I lit down on him—with the buckle end too, mind you; and if I hadn't been a law-and-order-abiding citizen, I swan I'd a shot him then. But I 'lowed it wuz best to have witnesses, and ef I'd a killed him 'thout no one by to see fair play, it might have caused talk. So I jest tuk the strap from him, and kinder scared him into decency with a touch or two on his own shoulders, and then I tuk him to one side and guv him the knickknacks.

"'You put them in the kid's stocking to-night so she will find 'em when she wakes up in the morning,' sez I. 'It's Christmas morning, and we are all Christians up yer in these diggins,' sez I, 'and if you don't I swear I'll smash your head.'

"He snarled and showed his teeth, like a bull dog that wants to bite but is afraid to, and I swan to man, gentlemen, I wuz downright put out that we'd a let that little gal live all alone so long with sech a human hyena. But, as I said before, I didn't like to take the law into my own hands all alone, so I waltzed off and hunted up some of the neighburs, and told them jest how the land lay, and asked their advice. They all said the same thing.

"'We'll go down and talk to him, right of,' sez they.

"'Bring the little gal up to our ranch after you get through with him,' sez my old lady; "she kin have a home with us so long as she pleases.'

"Thet druv the nail home and clinched her on the other side. The wimmen wuz with us. So we tuk along a stout luther lariat, with a running noose in one end, kinder handy fur talking to seech carrion ez Pearson, and jest as night wuz beginning to sot in we got under way toward his ranch. They wuz six of us—Hank Fletcher, Cale Bledsoe, Stumpy Bluebaker, old man Basset, Injun Pete and me—jest enough to be judge, jury and executioner."

Cap. paused here to light a fresh cigar; but before the flame of the match had taken hold on the tobacco he tossed the burning match aside.

"Jest excuse me fur about two seconds, gentlemen, whilst I waltz in and see ef my little gal is hankerin' for anything that I kin get her."

The girl was contentedly cuddled up in a corner of the green plush-covered seat, fast asleep, with her head, resting on a soft black and white plaid shawl. With her delicate features and beautiful yellow hair, she would have been considered lovely anywhere, and after seeing her it was easy to understand the look of tenderness which lighted up the old ranchman's face whenever he mentioned his "little gal."

"Well, sirs," he continued upon gaining his seat in the smoker—and by this time every man in the car was a listener,—"well, sirs, we didn't say much, becuz our heads had a powerful sight of thinking in 'em and our feet wuz busy climbing over the rock toward Pearson's. It wuz a long time sense we'd a ben engaged in sich business; but we knowed Pearson deserved it, and we meant to give him sich a talking to as he wouldn't have no chance to forgit.

"But the card wuz packed agin us. In the centre of the road, jest where we meant to leave it, to climb down toward Pearson's, an' old greasly bar wuz camped as cool as you please, diggin' among the rocks fur worms. I hadn't seen no bar in those diggin's fur years, and I begun to think that things wuz happening powerful brisk all at once, and thet it never rains fun but it pores, when clip went old man Bassett's rifle and clip went Pete's and the greasly started down the hill toward Pearson's with a bullet in his forehead and another in his chist.

"You remember I told you that I could a'most look down Pearson's chimbly from the road. Well, that's what the b'ar did, an' more. He jest natchelly tumbled down the side of the mountain and gave one big bound jest above the shanty and went kerplump onto the roof, smashing in the rafters like they were straw and knocking the mud chimbly seven ways for Sunday.

"When we got there the little gal wuz in her night dress, standing in the middle of the floor and rubbing her eyes.

"'It is Christmas?' she sez, 'and is St. Nicholas come? And what woke me up?'

"I ketched her up in my arms and wrapped my coat all around her, so she couldn't see what had waked her up, and I sez, sez I:

"'It ain't quite Christmas, yit, honey,' sez I; 'but St. Nicholas is come, sure, and he's got a whole raft of things fur you, up to my ranch.'

"'I want my stocking,' she sez, kinder struggling to git away from me. 'Father don't know I hung it up, but I did, and I want it.'

"Well, sirs, jest to quiet her, I found out where she'd hung her stocking way up the chimbly, where her father couldn't see it, becuz she knew powerful well he wouldn't hev no sech foolishness, and I got one one of the boys to kinder hunt around fur it, jest to quiet her.

"Well, sirs, gentlemen, that thar little stocking—with more holes and patches and places where she had cobbled it herself with cotton string, than stocking—wuz a laying in the ashes just where the bar had knocked it when he broke down the chimbly, and they wuz a nugget of gold us big as my three fingers right on top of it. Two or three smaller pieces was scattered around, and it wuz plain to the meanest intellec' that in falling the greasly's paw had clawed out a nugget of gold in the rocks just above the shanty, and the whole had just natchelly gravitated down with the bar.

"He wuz dead, of course, and when the boys kem to lift him, Jake Pearson wuz under him, smashed so that he had jest breath enough to tell me where to find the little girl's ma before he went.

"The next day—Christmas day—we sashayed around there with shovels and picks, and, after some little trouble in tracing it, we finally located the pocket and dug out the balance of the gold. I had every crumb of it melted into this yer brick in my handkerchief, and when we get to St. Louy I hands it over to the little girls ma, and I sez, sez I:

"Four hundred and two dollars and twenty-three cents as a Christmas gift for your little gal, from a greasly bar, who wuz a whiter Christian than ever Jake Pearson wuz, madam, beggin' your pardon,' sez I."

"Lothrop—twenty-five minutesfrspr!" sung out the brakeman, as the train slowed up at the supper station, four hours and fifteen minutes out of San Francisco."—Detroit Free Press.

An Inconsistent Teacher.

"Bring me, let me see, bring me a cranberry pie, a glass of milk, and a boiled apple dumpling."

"Anything more?"

"Oh, yes; let me have some cocoanut cakes; nothing more."

I heard this dialogue the other day in a very well-known cafe at the lunching hour. When I turned my head to see who had ordered this very remarkable luncheon, whom do you suppose I saw? Some giddy girl with an unfailing appetite for sweet in unwholesome quantities? Some reckless boy without a particle of respect for his stomach? Some sentimental young creature who believed in sweets to the sweet? Or do you suppose that it was a lunatic just escaped from Longview?

It was none of these. It was the principal of an intermediate school up town. Think of it! And that man lectures his pupils, or should lecture them, on what to do to keep well, what is wholesome and unwholesome, and how to make their lives sweet and beautiful by avoiding dyspepsia.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

It is said that the seas on the Australian coast are heavier than anywhere else in the world. For hundreds of miles black, beetling cliffs, from four hundred to six hundred feet high, extend without an opening of any kind into which a distressed ship might run for safety. Round the base of these cliffs the crested hills of angry waves surge and roar, swept along with terrible force by winds born at the southern pole, and which careering over thousands of miles of sea, have encountered land here for the first time.—Boston Advertiser.

Two Relics of the Past.

There have recently been framed and hung in the antique department of the public library two articles, which are historically valuable, and of some interest to the citizens of this town. One is a copy of the first printed town report, entitled "Statement of expenses of the Town of Woburn, from April 1st, 1812, to April 1st, 1813," dated Woburn, Jan. 19, 1814, and submitted by John Wade, Isaac Richardson, and John Edgell, a committee to prepare such a document. The other is a copy of a handbill published soon after the Lexington battle of April 19, 1775, with forty coffins and the names of the Americans slain presented upon it, entitled the "Bloody Butchery by the British Troops; or the Runaway Fight of the Regulars." The copy here presented is about forty years old, and is a reprint of an older original one.

The Revolutionary handbill originated with E. Russell's Salem Gazette, a well known newspaper of that period, and was designed, curiously enough, "either to frame and glass," or otherwise to preserve in the houses of all well-wishers to America, as a token of gratitude to the memory of the "Deceased Forty Persons," and as a perpetual memorial of that important event,—"on which, perhaps, may depend the future freedom and greatness of the commonwealth of America;"—being the particulars of the "victorious battle," hastily gathered in the confused state of affairs, at the time. Though inaccuracies of names occur in the accounts, still there are here preserved particulars which are found nowhere else; and some which are of the highest importance to Woburn, because, at that period, they were no where else preserved.

Two of the "forty coffins" are devoted to the memory of Daniel Thompson and Asahel Porter, the two Woburn men who fell on that day, and are inscribed with their names. The two rows of solemn black coffins do not inspire cheerful thoughts; but there is a paragraph in the production describing the funeral of the above two victims of the battle which is a gem for Woburn antiquaries for all time to come:

"Same day," it reads (meaning Friday, April 21, 1775), "the remains of Messrs. Azel Porter and Daniel Thompson, of Woburn, who also fell victims to tyranny, were decently interred at that place, attended to the grave by a multitude of persons who assembled on the occasion from that and the neighboring towns. Before they were interred, a very suitable sermon and prayer was delivered by the Rev. Mr. Sherman."

Their names are also in the list of the provincials who were killed and wounded, given also in the handbill as follows:

WOBURN.
Killed.
*Mr. Azel Porter. Mr. Daniel Thompson.
Wounded.
Mr. Geoege Reed. Mr. Jacob Bacon.
Killed by the first fire of the enemy.*

The "funeral elegy" at the bottom of the handbill thus alludes to Woburn:

"Bedford, Woburn, Sudbury, all,
Have suffered most severe,
You miss five of your choicest chore [corps],
On them let's drop a tear."

If the poetry of the elegy was wretched, the sentiment was intended to be complimentary to the virtues of the fallen.

To return to the "first printed town report;" of which two copies only, and those belonging to the public library, are known to be extant. This was a yearly statement, which it took a year nearly for a committee of three to prepare. In it there are facts which are worthy of consideration to-day. We are carried back to a time of small things, which this report can show us. The sum voted for the expenses of the town for the year 1812, was $2200; for supporting the poor, paying town debts, etc., $1700; schools, $500. The school committee were Jonathan Tidd, William Fox, Isaac Richardson, Calvin Richardson, and Joshua Convers—persons well remembered by some of us!—who expended the above $500. The remainder of the expenditures were for "supporting the poor and contingencies." The paupers were boarded or supported by private individuals who collected their pay from the town; others received payment for articles furnished to sundry poor persons, who probably lived in their own homes. The persons who boarded poor persons for the town in 1812-13, were William Tay, James Wyman, administrator on the estate of David Wyman, Nathan Wyman, Jeremiah Convers, Susannah Tay, Edmund Richardson, Jonas Munroe, Josiah Tay, Silvanus Wood, Jesse Richardson, Jonathan Tidd, Josiah Brown, Nathan Simonds, Ebenezer Wade, Elijah Leathe, Abraham Skinner, Jacob Pierce, James Leathe, John Jordan, and John Tallent. The larger part of the sum raised for the expenses of the town was unquestionably for the benefit of those persons who were supported or assisted by the public. The "contingencies" were a comparatively small matter.

Other persons named in connection with supporting the poor were Jonathan Howard, I. Johnson, Ahira Wyman, Esther Thompson, Noah Parker, Abijah Thompson, Widow Mary Richardson, Joshua Tay, Mary Munroe, Joseph Brooks, Hannah Simonds, William Fox, Willard Jones, Robert Eames, John Scottow [the grave-digger], Joseph Eaton, Sylvanus Plympton [for medicine and attendance], Susannah Pierce, Jacob Convers, Merril Beard, J. Wade, Mary and Betsy Munroe, Sophia and Mary Cutter, William Warland [of Cambridge], Francis Kittredge [for medicine and attendance], and Zeb. Wyman.

Zeb. Wyman received for his services as clerk and treasurer of the town, $18.

Zeb. Wyman and Marshall Fowle received pay for refreshments furnished the selectmen and other town officers. Junketing was then universally prevalent.

Marshall Fowle served as constable and collector of taxes in 1812.

Jonathan Tidd was paid for his expenses, and cash paid, in the action of Woburn against Burlington.

Jeremiah Clapp, William Fox, John Wade, Cyrus Baldwin, Benjamin Wood, John Fisk, Joseph Gardner, Josiah Richardson, Wm. Whitwell, John Odin, Benjamin F. Baldwin, and A. Thompson, received pay for their services or material furnished in building the magazine,—the present brick powder house on Powder Hill, which was erected at that period.

Bill Russell, John Eames, and John Edgell, were paid for services as assessors.

Benjamin Wyman was paid for earth to mend the "swamp road," and for other services rendered the town, notably for some in connection with building the powder house, which appear in the original accounts.

Caleb Richardson was paid for services as constable and collector of taxes in 1811.

Joseph Lawrence received for auditing the town accounts $1.50.

Other names, not otherwise mentioned, are John Flagg, Abel Winn, Jacob Richardson, William Gault, Moses Winn, and William Eaton. The War of 1812 being in progress William Gault was paid by the town for making cartridges for the military, and Moses Winn was paid for services as a "detached officer," and William Eaton and twelve others, for their services as "detached soldiers."

The New Postage Law.

We give below the provisions of the bill enacted just at the close of the session of Congress, making changes in the postal laws and establishing a new feature for the speedy delivery of postal matter requiring haste. The changes take effect on the 1st of July:

1. The weight of all single-rate letters is increased from 1-2 ounce each or fraction thereof to one ounce each or fraction thereof. The same increase of weight is allowed for drop letters, whether mailed at stations where there is free delivery or where carrier service is not established.

2. All newspapers sent from the office of publication, including sample copies, or when sent from a news agency to actual suberibers thereto, or to other news agents, shall be entitled to transmission at the rate of 1 cent per pound or fraction therof, the postage to be prepaid. This is a reduction of one-half from existing rates.

3. Any article in a newspaper or other publication may be marked for observation, except by written or printed words, without increase of postage.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

All Advertisements, to insure insertion in this paper, must be handed in as early as 10 o'clock on Thursday forenoon.

☞ The Boston and Lowell Railroad does a very large summer business, which General Passenger Agent Tuttle proposes to greatly increase this year. We know of no one that can do it better. Travel to the White Mountains in summer and early autumn is immense, and a good share of it fails to the Boston and Lowell road. The line runs direct from Boston through the most romantic parts of New Hampshire, taking in many of the finest resorts in that state, landing tourists and pleasure-seekers in the midst of a mountain region which for beauty and sublimity is unsurpassed by any in the world. It has been rightly named the Switzerland of America. Mr. Tuttle, the company's active and wideawake General Passenger Agent, has in press an elaborate pamphlet giving a description of the White Mountains and the favorite resorts along the company's line. The engravings and maps are all new and decidedly better than any ever sent out before. The book will be out June 1.

☞ A furious débate took place in the House last Tuesday over a proposition to compel picnic grounds to take out licenses. Every Sunday School in the State should send in a vigorous remonstrance against such an outrageous scheme. Superintendents also have a deep interest in the matter and ought to combat the absurd and dangerous idea with all their might. For the land sakes, what is the country coming to?

☞ The President is making very good progress in "turning the rascals out." A numerically respectable batch of appointments is made daily, and they are generally of a character to please the most exacting Bourbons of the party. The claims of no mugwumps are considered.

☞ There is great disturbance among the Maine Democracy over the President's delay in appointing Morton postmaster at Augusta. They lay the blame to Mr. Blaine, and are very angry at his alleged influence over President Cleveland.

☞ The Natick Bulletin has changed its form from a folio to quarto. It is a good change for those who like it, but whatever its form may be the Bulletin is a No. 1 newspaper and family journal.

— The following are the officers of Trinity (Episcopal) parish, elected last week: Senior Warden, John Walker; Junior Warden, J. H. Higginbotham; Clerk, L. E. Ward; Vestrymen, James Mack, Charles Pringle, James Graham, 2nd, Patrick Kyle; Delegates to Diocesan Convention, James Mack, James Folsoms, John Walker.

— Daniel S. Jones left for Iowa last Wednesday evening for another car-load of horses for his father's sale-stables, and will return in about ten days with some nice animals. That will make the third lot Mr. Jones has brought here from Iowa this spring. Being first class horses and adapted to this climate ready sales are found for them.

— A meeting of the sons of Maine will be held in Fraternity Hall tomorrow, Saturday, evening, at 8 o'clock, with a view of organizing a society. There are a great many Maine people residents of Woburn, among whom the desire is general for an organization. It is to be hoped that there will be a full meeting tomorrow evening.

— At the meeting of the Railroad Commissioners in Lyceum Hall last Saturday to hear and decide on grade crossings by Woburn Branch Extension there was no opposition made to such crossings, and they settled the matter in accordance with the prayer of the petitioners. That meeting ended all the official and legal preliminaries.

— The police made a raid on a house near Park street last Tuesday, but the bird had flown, or rather, the rum was not there. The fact is, they are all pretty well frightened, and for a month or so the police will make a good many raids without seizing much liquor. Well, we suppose it is just about as bad to be frightened to death as to be killed.

— The case of search and seizure, Commonwealth vs Thomas G. Meriam, will be tried in the District Court, Judge Converse presiding, this forenoon. It has been told to us that the evidence of illegal sale of rum by Merriam is conclusive, and that the officers have got the dead-open-and-shut on him. If so it will only be another instance going to prove that the way of the transgressor is hard.

— The following are the officers of the Woburn Associates elected early this week: President, Griffin Place; Vice-Presidents, Jacob Brown, John Johnson, C. B. Bryant; Treasurer, Charlie A. Jones; Secretary, Charles W. Bryant; Executive Committee, Luke Warren Fowle, E. Everett Thompson, C. P. Jayne, M. M. Tidd, William V. Kellen. The society is well equipped for active, efficient service.

— The rapid transit 8.15 A. M. train takes Woburn passengers to Boston in 20 minutes, and yet Mr. F. H. Lewis is not quite satisfied. He contends that twelve minutes is plenty long enough to be on the road, and that the engine can do considerable loafing by the waysides at that. The next thing we shall hear Mr. Lewis will insist that the R. R. Co. set up a system of pneumatic tubes through which to shoot its suburban passengers, and mebby the Co. will do it.

— Messrs. Ellis will find some difficulty in moving Dr. Harlow's house without injury to the handsome elms on the street. Mr. Bean examined and took some measurements last Wednesday and about concluded that the only route for the movers to take would be to Church Avenue thence to Main street and so on to its destination. This would involve the necessity of moving the Woburn Band house, which would be better than to ruin the beauty of the trees.

— Hereafter, until further orders, the first division of police will go on duty—McSweeney, at 7 a. m. and remain until 6 p. m: Tidd, at 8 a. m. and remain until 7 p. m. The roll-call of the second division will take place at 7 p. m. when all the officers will report for duty and remain until 4 a. m. This insures quiet and orderly sidewalks during the fore part of the night.

— On last Monday morning we were favored with a visit from the gentlemanly Assessors of Woburn, which was highly enjoyed—by them. It always gives us great pleasure to contribute information to these high and mighty officials on which to base our proportion of the public dues, and our Assessors this year have such pleasant, gracious ways of gouging the last farthing out of a fellow that when they left us we regretted that we had'nt a hundred times as much property to pay taxes on.

— When McCall, who committed the brutal assault on the school girl in Reading in March, was arraigned at Court last week, he pleaded in extenuation of the offense that he bought a pint of rum in Woburn that day and drank it, which made him so crazy that he was not responsible for his acts. No doubt of it. Woburn rum produces raving insanity at 40 rods and is sure death at 60. If McCall drank a pint of it the wonder is that he lived to get to Reading and commit the assault.

— Dealers in the ardent have rigged up all sorts of contrivances to beat the police. They have exhausted their skill and ingenuity on blinds, liquor-escapes, traps, etc., but the officers understand every one of them like a book, and will make them of no avail. The dealers will find that bucking against the law is vastly more unsatisfactory than kicking against the pricks, and they ought to know that no man can violate it for any considerable period without at last coming to grief.

— Last Saturday the police made raids on Kate Meehan at North Woburn which was a good thing to do. They found "hard stuff" enough to send the fair and bewitching Kate down for three or six months. North Woburn will be very glad to get rid of her. They also went for Sylvester Murray at Montvale, where some more of the poisonest sort of tangle-leg was seized and confiscated. The erring brother of Montvale ought to be made to keep the fair Kate company at East Cambridge until after haying.

— Editor Allen took in, for all it was worth, the grand spring dinner of the Suburban Press Association at the famous Vendome last Monday. We notice that participation in these festive affairs (editors were allowed to eat at the first table) has a deleterious effect on our esteemed contempory and almost always unfits him for the arduous and brain-exhausting duties of his profession. Perhaps the effect is the same on all of them; which reminds us to suggest to the young and ambitious ink-slingers that it would be well for them to go slow.

— City Rink is closed for good. As a rink it went up a rocket and came down a stick. Our spring poet is picking dandelion greens to-day else we would weave in a few memorial verses here in honor of the remains. The large, fine building makes a capital factory for the manufacture of electric lamps, and thus Munroe & Newton builded better than they knew. Gay scenes have been enacted in that rink. Little dramas played. Some things it has witnessed have produced heart-burnings. But it is no more a place of amusement, and peace to its ashes.

— A competent committee of the Board of Trade are doing the preliminary work on a book descriptive of Woburn, its history, location, business and facilities, which will be issued in early autumn. It will be handsomely illustrated with a number of public buildings and probably several fine private residences, for which Mr. William Miller, the well-known steel engraver, has already made arrangements with a heliotype establishment in the city. One thousand copies of the book, the mechanical work of which Mr. Miller assures us will be executed in the very best style, are to be issued for members of the Board and distribution where they will do the most good.

— John C. Higgins of Hotel Winn was tried in the Fourth District Court last Monday forenoon on two indictments for selling liquor. The first was on a seizure made under Chief Conn's administration, and the second by Chief Nelson and members of his staff. On the first Mr. Higgins was found guilty and fined $75: on the second he was likewise found guilty and fined $100, and six months in the house of correction. He appealed in both cases. Mr. Thomas Salmon and Mr. Ferrin, Higgins's brother-in-law, signed the appeal bonds with the respondent. We reiterate the sentiment expressed in an item respecting Mr. Merriam's case, to wit: Jordan is a hard road to travel.

— Smith & Son have stocks of dry, dress and fancy goods as stylish and desirable as are sold anywhere. Ladies meet with no difficulty in finding at Smith's what they want, and the trade of the house is not confined to our own town by any means. It is reasonable to presume that the ladies of Winchester get as desirable goods at Messrs. Smith & Son's and more satisfactory prices than in Boston, else they would not come here. So it is with Stoneham people, Reading, and others. We speak of these things because the more trade our merchants draw from neighboring towns the better it is for us as a community, and as it occured to us that the Smiths have a large outside patronage we took their place as a sort of text on which to base a few remarks on the importance of putting forth efforts to secure business from other settlements near us. We are glad to know our merchants are doing this with success; but with a little more pains they can greatly augment such business in a very short time.

— The 18th anniversary of the Mishawum Club was observed by a dinner at Young's Hotel, Boston, last Saturday evening. About thirty gentlemen, including some honorary members, were present and participated in the pleasant affair. The bill of fare embraced all the delicacies of the season, and the dinner was a credit to the cuisine of that famous public house. A musical entertainment followed the feast, which was very much enjoyed. An election of officers for the year resulted as follows: President, William V. Kellen; Vice-President, Edwin B. Blanchard; Secretary, W. F. Bosworth; Curator, Marcellus Littlefield; Directors, the President, ex officio, and John H. Ropes. The Mishawum is one of the oldest and most genteel clubs in Woburn. Its membership, which is limited, is composed of our best young men, whose object is social intercourse and intellectual improvement. It was never stronger in interest and character than at the present time. In the near future the Club expects to erect a fine club-house.

— A few evenings since the members of the Mendelssohn club to the number of about forty made their director, Mr. P. E. Bancroft, a surprise visit at his residence on Franklin street. When all were comfortably seated, Mr. B. F. Whittemore, President of the Club, called to order and in his usually eloquent and forcible manner made known to Mr. Bancroft the purpose of their call and in behalf of the Club presented to him an elegant silver water service of four pieces, appropriately inscribed, as a token of their regard and esteem and as a slight recognition of his valued services as their director and instructor. The gift was accepted by Mr. B. in a happy little speech that made gladder the hearts of all present. Refreshments, in the shape was of excellent cake and (n)ice cream, that had been provided by the ladies of the Club were then spread and an hour was pleasantly spent with the repast, in social converse, and with most exquisite music from the pianoforte performed by Miss Bancroft. The party left highly gratified with the success of the surprise and with yet kindlier feelings towards Mr. Bancroft and his family. —H.

— Chief of Police Nelson has got fairly to work and already important reforms have been introduced into the Department. In the two weeks that he has worn the Chief's badge very desirable improvements have been made, from which the town will reap substantial benefits. His efforts to execute the laws are heartily seconded by the force, especially by Deputy Chief Walsh, McSweeney, Tidd, and others. The moral effect of a new and more active order of things is easily observed on the streets and around the places where liquor was wont to be sold. The police headquarters have been renovated and put into decent and presentable shape. A new carpet has been laid in the Chief's private office; a handsome roller-top walnut desk has taken the place of the old, rickerty concern that has tottled there from time immemorial, and order in the office has taken the place of confusion. One important result of energetic work is the dispersion of the crowds of loafers on Main street near Union and in that locality. It has been the custom for gangs of young men and hoodlums to congregate there in the evening and annoy women and gentlemen as they passed. This nuisance has been abated, thanks to the determination of Chief Nelson to have things orderly and as they should be. The vim with which illegal rumselling is ferreted out and prosecuted strikes terror to the violators of the law. The descent on Merriam and conviction of Higgins were unexpected blows. One of the cases on which Higgins was convicted last Monday has been on the docket since last December, and it was thought to have been outlawed. Chief Nelson took a different view of it. He makes no boys' play of shutting up rumholes, but is in dead earnest in the discharge of his official duties. Lawyer Allen thought so when Nelson asked for Higgins a six months term in the House of Correction in addition to his $100 fine and got it. The fact that it is known and thoroughly understood that the Chief is bent on closing all rum shops in this town and has the pluck and energy to carry his measures through will make his task easier, for fear of him will drive many out of the miserable business who otherwise would have to be pursued by the law. On the whole, we judge Chief Nelson is the right man in the right place, and has good men to help him.

RINK NOTES: With a figurative tear the sporting reporter of this paper drops the City Rink from these interesting notes, and will write of it no more forever. Its life for the last few months has not been fresh and vigorous: decay and an early demise were written on its fair forehead: and although Mr. Newton put money, time and energy into its management, the poor invalid grew weaker and weaker day by day, and on Tuesday night last turned its face to the wall and yielded up the ghost. This leaves the field clear for Mr. Carter's Academy and lessens the work of the reporter. If, in his ecstatic frame of mind over the removal of his only competition, Mr. Carter does not increase the expenses of patrons of his rink, of which there is probably no danger, his pathway to fame and wealth is free from obstacles, and all he has got to do is to go on from one stage of glory to another. Contentedly seated in his luxurious arm chair in that nice little private office he can look complacently on and watch the world wag as it pleases, greet his customers with smiles, and pocket the ducats.——A new league has been formed, there being four clubs, the Woburns, Bay States, Globes and Peabodys. They will play four games in every series, two games in each rink, two games per week for five weeks. The prizes will be cash purses, $100 and $50. The games will be limited to a half hour, the club winning the most goals in that time to be declared victorious.——A grand benefit was given the W. H. S. Polo club at the City Rink on Wednesday evening. The game of polo was between the W. H. S. and Chelsea H. S. Clubs an was won by the latter.——There have been fine entertainments at the Academy this week, and for tonight, Saturday night and next week read Mr. Carter's programme in this paper.

The Sun Electric Light Company.

Not very long ago this company was incorporated under the laws of New Hampshire with a capital of $200,000. As has been before stated by us, its specialty, or principal business, is the manufacture of incandescent lamps, for which Mr. M. M. Slatterly has invented a burner which Edison himself says is superior to any in use. About 300 hours is the average life of the generality of burners, whereas it is claimed for the Slatterly that it will run 1,000 hours, and has, under favorable circumstances, burned much longer. Scientists and practical electricians pronounce it a very valuable lamp.

The company commenced the manufacture of the lamps on Sudbury street, Boston, but the place was small, the accommodations limited, rent and power high, for which reasons and others the managers were anxious to remove their establishment to some suburban town where railroad facilities were good and the city within easy reach. They received flattering proposals from several large places, among them New Bedford and Haverhill, but on thorough inspection they decided in favor of Woburn, especially as it was only thirty minutes from Boston, and it has been established here. We think it a very valuable addition to our manufacturing industries and it is so regarded by others.

After the financial arrangements required to secure the establishment were completed it became necessary to reorganize the company to conform to such arrangements and to constitute it a Woburn company. In pursuance of this a meeting of the stockholders was held at the rooms of the Board of Trade late last week, at which a Board of Directors were elected, consisting of James Skinner, Nathan J. Simonds, Griffin Place, M. M. Slatterly and James E. Dixon. Subsequently the Directors chose the following officers:—President, Nathan J. Simonds; Treasurer, B. F. Whittemore; Secretary, James E. Dixon. Mr. Slatterly is the electrician of the company. Mr. Whittemore, the Treasurer, has filed his bond of $10,000 for a faithful discharge of the duties of the office.

When subscriptions for stock in this company were first opened here for one reason and another the matter dragged to some extent. But on a more thorough scrutiny of the merits of Mr. Slatterly's invention, and full explanations by him and others acquainted with it, this state of things yielded to a better feeling and the necessary stock to obtain the location of the establishment here was quickly taken. To-day men of means are seeking the stock, not only here but elsewhere. One party with a plenty of money wrote, only a few days ago for some of it, having become satisfied from a complete examination that it would be a very good thing indeed to have. There will be no trouble experienced in placing the stock.

The company is well manned. Mr. Simonds is an extensive manufacturer and one of our leading and most enterprising business men. He has the push and pluck to make a complete and signal success of the business. Mr. Whittemore is greatly interested in the concern, has put considerable money into it, and will work for its interests. Concerning Mr. Dixon we know but little, but understand he is a thorough-paced business man. The City rink has been leased for a factory, and is now being prepared to take in the machinery of the company. Within a very short time the manufacture of lamps will begin.

Mr. Griffin Place having declined a place on the Board of Directors, Mr. S. F. Trull has been chosen in his stead.

The Seamless Pocket Company.

Last Saturday evening a hearing was given by the Executive Committee of the Board of Trade to representatives of the above company in relation to the merits of the invention and also to locating the factory for the manufacture of the pockets here. After the meeting was called to order Mr. Ware B. Gay of Boston stated in general terms the objects of the hearing, and closed by introducing Mr. Godfrey of Boston, the inventor of the pocket. He exhibited numerous samples and explained the mode of weaving it, the looms, cost of manufacture, and, in answer to a continuous fusilade of interrogations, explained minutely and satisfactorily every thing concerning the business.

The pocket is woven on a peculiarly constructed loom from the thread or yarn used in cotton factories, of different qualities and shapes. It is woven seamless, with round bottoms or square, for gentlemen's garments and ladies, and clothing men pronounce it the most valuable invention for their work in existence. One loom will turn out 160 pockets per day: one person can run 10 looms: 150 looms is the number proposed by the company to start with, or a product of 24,000 pockets a day. The demand for them will be unlimited, particularly as this is the only concern in the world that makes a seamless pocket. This latter is a very important fact.

Mr. Godfrey, after inventing the pocket took it to the Masons of Taunton, who build all the looms for the manufacture of seamless bags, and asked them to invent and build a loom to weave it. The seamless bag loom would not answer at all, and something entirely new must be invented. In time, after much study and labor, the loom that would do the work was finished. Although invented by the Masons the entire control of the loom is in the hands of the Pocket Company, and not one can be made or sold without their consent. Leading Boston makers of clothing have expressed the opinion that the sale of these pockets must be enormous, on account of their superiority in quality, and the very low price at which they can be sold.

Mr. White, who has furnished a good deal of money to perfect the machinery for the manufacture of the pockets, and is a practical man, also explained the merits of the invention, the looms, etc. The capital stock of the company is $500,000. Mr. White is sanguine as to the value of the pocket, and the great success it must meet with on the market. There is nothing to compete with. The loom that weaves it is the only one in existence, and the company controls it.

After a full interchange of opinions, a committee, consisting of Benjamin Hinckley, Jacob Brown, Fred. A. Flint, Ware B. Gay, and James Maguire, was appointed to further investigate the subject, and report at an early day.

If it were possible

to get the testimony of the multitude who have used HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA for debility, languor, lassitude, and that general feeling of stupidity, weariness and exhaustion which every one feels during this season, we should be able to present to our readers such an overwhelming mass of commendatory messages, that the few who have not tried it would do so at once. It is a positive fact, and has been so effectually demonstrated that no one to-day denies it, that Hood's Sarsaparilla contains more real medicinal value than any article before the people.

What a Man Did with Kidney Complaint

DRACUT, MASS.
MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO.,
Lowell, Mass.:

Dear Sirs—I have suffered from kidney complaint and biliousness for fifteen years. Have tried everything and never got any good. Last January, before I commenced taking HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, everything I ate bloated me all up, pain in my chest and arms, headache and dizzy. I could not get up without feeling weary and all fagged out. Many mornings I was obliged to lie down on the lounge. To do any work seemed almost impossible. Have taken two bottles. The backache, dizziness, pain in my chest and arms, and that feeling of intense weariness are all gone. I can eat anything and it does not press me at all. Feel just like work; in fact, like a new man. Can heartily recommend HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, and hope all who desire to know anything about it will come to me and ask what I think of it. Very truly yours,
JONATHAN J. COBURN.

Garland Oil Stove
1885.
THE WORLD'S BEST.

This popular Oil Stove is used and recommended by Mrs. Lincoln at the Boston Cooking School. Among its superior features is its new and novel burner, superior to any applied to other stoves and used only on the Garland. It does away with the ratchet wheels for moving the wicks which has been such a nuisance in oil stoves, and affords an even, steady flame. It has two or four-hole boiler tops. Baking, boiling and frying can be done at once. The Garland is the most popular, convenient and powerful baker in the market to-day. We have sold a great number the last two seasons and they have given decided satisfaction, selling themselves on their own merits. The best is the cheapest.

WINCHESTER.

Our people are begining to talk about a 4th of July celebration. Hope it will amount to something.

Mr. Carter of Boston will confer with the teachers of our public schools at half past 10 o'clock on June 2.

Mr. Russell will have the names of schoolhouses conspicuously emblazoned on their fronts, which is a good thing.

The 7.30 a. m. train from Woburn now stops at Winter Hill to accommodate the High School scholars from this place.

Last Tuesday evening two polo teams of this place played a game at Carters rink in Woburn, the "Owls" beating the "T. D's" by a score of 3 to 2.

Mrs. Cole, wife of our distinguished artist, Mr. Foxcroft Cole, has been seriously ill of late, but is, as we are all glad to learn, slowly recovering.

A few days since our village welcomed to their homes J. A. Dupee, Miss Flora Prince and Miss A. F. Symmes, from a visit to Norfolk, Va.

The wife of Prof. Goodale of Amherst College, member of the Legislature, paid her relatives and friends here a visit last week, by whom she was warmly received.

Some of the bad boys who have been roughly using a few of our public buildings are known and will be prosecuted, unless they mend their ways. An official eye is on them.

The Boston Courier says, that Mr. S. W. Mead, the young architect who has won the Rotch travelling scholarship, will go to Europe this summer. Mr. Meade will make a large mark in life one of these days.

The Boston Herald, which never praises anybody if it can help it, says of Mr. Elder, the able Representative in the Legislature from this District:—"Mr. Elder makes as good a speech as anybody, tells what he knows clearly and briefly, and sits down."

We are all very well pleased to know that D. N. Skillings, Esq., and family, who have been living at the Vendome in Boston since last fall, will spend the summer at their delightful home in this village. It is pleasent to see our people returning from city winter quarters.

A good deal is to be done here this summer in the way of public buildings. Among the projects in hand are a large, handsome schoolhouse, a Town Hall, changes and repairs of the High School building, etc. It is a good year for our mechanics as well as for the town.

Boston Courier: Several leading gentlemen of Winchester have leased very pleasant and convenient grounds in that town and will lay out several tennis courts and a base ball ground. They have formed a club for the encouragement of these and other outdoor sports.

Mr. Leonard Nutter was rendered unconscious by a stroke of paralysis, on Friend street, Boston, last Friday afternoon, and was taken to the hospital by Mr. Shepherd who was passing and observed him fall. He was brought home and died on Saturday afternoon, aged 58. He was a well known and esteemed citizen. A son and daughter mourn the sudden death of a kind parent.

The regular meeting of the Historical Society was held on Tuesday evening of last week. President Thompson in the chair. Dr. David Youngman and Rev. Leander Thompson were admitted to membership. Mrs. G. D. Rand was appointed to collect autographs. The report of the Treasurer show the receipts of the past year to be from membership fees $55, from sale of Record $35.50. Total $90.50. Expenditures $60.50. Balance on hand $30.00. The Librarian reported the donations to the Library to be [illegible]23 bound Books, 252 Pamphlets, 214 Maps and 32 Miscellaneous. The Secretary reported that 60 papers had been prepared for the society, which had been contributed by 32 persons. The Secretary has also edited the two volumes of the Record of the Society which has been published and the third one which is now in press, and will be ready in about a week. A large number of donations was announced.

The two hundred Winchester people, who signed the petition to the School Committee to have instruction in sewing introduced into the public schools, will be surprised and disappointed to learn from your columns, with how very partial a response they have been answered. There are seven school districts in Winchester: the parents in six of these asked with great unanimity that their children might be taught sewing: the Committee reply by allowing it to be taught in the seventh! Is half a loaf, or one seventh of one, better than no bread? Or rather, is bread for one-seventh of a hungry crowd better than none at all? Undoubtedly for the favored fraction: but how about the rest? The selection of Mrs. Bailey as a teacher seemed to show that the Committee is in earnest in desiring the success of the work, as her well known zeal in anything she undertakes is a warrant against failure. Therefore it is to be hoped that this feeble measure, this half-way, (or seventh-way) action of the Committee is only an evidence of the temporary lack of energy incident to this debilitating season, and that with the cool weather of the autumn more energetic counsels will prevail, and the people of Winchester will receive for their children the practical teaching which they so generally desire, and which their generous appropriation gives them a right to claim.

The annual election of the Sunday School was held last Sunday and the following officers were chosen: Mr. Thomas I. Reed, Superintendent; Mr. A. W. Wood, Assistant Superintendent; Mrs. M. E. S. Curtis, Secretary and Treasurer; Mr. Walter Skelton and Mr. Charles L. Foster, Librarians.

Prof. D. Dorchester of Arlington Heights preached at the church, Sunday morning. An unusually large audience attended. His text was "For we are members one of another" Eph. 4:25. He said that mutual dependence is the law of nature and of religious life. The true principle of Christianity is helpfulness. The nineteenth century, despite all modern errors and sins, is really the age of humanity. His greatest desire was that a burning passion for humanity might be kindled in every life. From the lowliest and most obscure places, the greatest men and women have come to help and bless the world. The sermon was most excellent and should exert a lasting influence upon all who listened to it.

The Woburn Branch Extension.

One day last week Mr. C. S. Mellen, Superintendent of the Boston & Lowell Railroad, assured a Woburn gentlemen that within ten days work would be commenced in earnest and that by the 1st day of September next the citizens of North Woburn could board the Boston trains at their own doors. Better news concerning this important railroad scheme has not greeted the ears of our town since the publication of the Company's intention to build the road. In pursuance of this declaration on the part of the Superintendent engineers and workmen were busy on the line of the track here in the Centre last Monday morning. Work has begun!

Ever since Mr. Mellen has had the general management of the Company's affairs a favorite project of his has been to extend the Woburn Branch to Wilmington and set the business centre of our town on the main line of the road, as it should have been years ago. He was not slow to discover, what a very conservative management had never fairly opened its eyes to, namely, that Woburn is an important business point, yielding an income from freight and passenger traffic considerably in excess of the aggregate of all the other towns between Boston and Lowell, and for this reason deserving of better treatment than had been accorded it. He has been earnest in his efforts to bring the directory into harmony with his views as to the importance and justice of extending the Branch, and it is only recently that his plans were accepted by the Directors and stockholders, and the undertaking was agreed to. He saw that, leaving all considerations of justice to Woburn out of the question, and viewed solely in the light of a paying investment to the Company, the extension of the Woburn Branch was a thing greatly to be desired, if indeed owing to the growing restlessness of Woburn people and a not improbable effort on their part to increase their railroad facilities, it would not soon become a necessity.

For what he has accomplished with the Company for Woburn our people feel grateful to Superintendent Mellen. It is proper that they should. It is reasonable to suppose that many years would have elapsed, but for his efforts, before Woburn would have been anything but a terminus of an unimportant branch, less than two miles long, of the main road—an isolated, almost unknown, though busy, thrifty and rapidly growing town. We owe the extension of the Branch mainly, if not entirely, to Mr. Mellen, and our citizens feel like giving him thanks for what he has done for them.

Very soon after the Company's determination to extend the Branch to Wilminton became public the favorable effect on business here was plainly apparent. It seemed to infuse new, active, energetic life into everything, and it was confidently believed that better days had dawned. The improved condition of things becoming noised abroad men seeking residence and business locations visited us, and this has continued to the present time. A good many have remained, and many more would have done so could they have found suitable places for homes. Real estate has advanced in price, and there is a better demand for it than there has been for years. General business has improved, and is in a very encouraging condition.

Now that work has actually commenced on the extension still greater activity will be seen and felt. It will strengthen the forward movement by increasing confidence in the future of the town. It will swell our population at once and rapidly. New industries will locate here—some having already done so; old ones will increase their capacity; new streets will be opened and built up, and everything must prosper. And these are a few of the many good things that the extension of the Woburn Branch has brought to Woburn.

Something About Real Estate, Building, etc. in Woburn.

All signs point to brisk dealings in real estate and building operations in this town during the present season. They already begin to feel the spirit of improvement that is astir and are sensibly affected by the new atmosphere of progress with which the place has recently become enveloped. Life in real estate transactions is a sure indication of prosperity in any community where it prevails, and the activity which is already seen here indicates with absolute certainty better days for us.

Right here it may not be out of place to remark that owners of tracts of land adapted to building for residences or manufacturing purposes will find the present an auspicious time to lay off and open them up for settlement, nor would it be the part of prudence to "hold on for a rise." There are fine tracts of such property here that have been waiting for years for the condition of things now existing in Woburn, and their owners will make money by striking while the iron is hot. A disposition to cling to their real estate by people too strongly tinctured with old fogyism has kept many an otherwise enterprising place back for years, and in some cases ruined them completely.

Recently there has been a number of important sales of real estate here with a view of building, and more are talked of. Last week the town sold two lots to Dr. Seth Kelley, one to Mr. Gould Converse, two to John McDonough, and one to Daniel McColgan, on and near North Warren street, on each of which residences will soon be erected. Dr. Kelley will begin on a large double house at once, and build another later in the season. The other three purchasers intend to put up good houses on their lots at once. These residences will make a very respectable addition to that part of the village. Dr. Kelley has also contracted for the erection of a large, fine house in East street which will be completed early in the season. Applications to rent every one of these places show something of the great demand that exists for tenements.

At No. Woburn several dwellings are in course of erection, and we are informed the building of several others during the season is talked of. The North village will be greatly benefitted by the extension of the Woburn Branch, and it is expected that its influence will shortly be felt in the establishment of additional manufacturing concerns there. By the first of next September the cars will be running from that village to Boston, from which date No. Woburn will begin a new business career.

At Central Square Mr. Fox has bought of Mr. Cutler real estate for building purposes: Mrs. Knapp is putting up a nice house on Clinton street: Mr. A. A. Clement proposes to build, and things are looking up. As we understand it there is to be a depot at Central Square, which, with the excellent residence property in and around it—the best in town—makes it safe to say that within five years many of the largest private establishments in Woburn will be located there. Sufficiently remote from the business centre to secure quiet, with opportunities for large, handsome yards, lawns and flower gardens, high, dry and healthy, Central Square is destined to be the favorite residence quarter of the town at no distant day.

Would space admit of it we might enumerate other recent sales of real estate and building enterprises. Suffice it to say there is progress all over the town. Woburn seems to have aroused herself from the dreaming, indifferent condition of the last fifteen years, opened her eyes to her true interests, thoroughly shaken herself, and at last set about doing something to increase her business, population and wealth. Earnest men are at the helm, and they have come to stay.

Very Remarkable Recovery.

Mr. Geo. V. Willing, of Manchester, Mich., writes: "My wife has been almost helpless for five years, so helpless that she could not turn over in bed alone. She used two Bottles of Electric Bitters, and is so much improved, that she is able now to do her own work." Electric Bitters will do all that is claimed for them. Hundreds of testimonials attest their great curative powers. Only fifty cents a bottle at Wm. W. Hill's.

The hot weather will greatly help the man who earns his bread by the sweat of his brow. When it is hot he can sit down and sweat without ever lifting a hand.

Keeping a diary is not what it is cracked up to be. Thirty days of accuracy is about the limit of endurance; but Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup has never yet disappointed any one who has used it; secure a bottle for that awful cold.

Lugging a twenty-pound baby around the room from midnight until the roosters crow will crush out the divine afflatus from the bosom of the most soulful poet.

LITERARY NOTICES.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE for June is in every way a strong and entertaining number. The frontispiece is a remarkably good engraving by W. B. Closson from G. F. Watts's painting, Paolo and Francesca, illustrating an article by F. D. Millet on the Watts Exhibition, in which the writer asks and answers the significant question, What shall our artists paint? Other papers are, Ladies' Day at the Ranch, 13 illustrations: At End, a poem; A Wild-goose Chase, 11 illustrations; At the Red Glove, 3 illustrations; The June Cricket, a poem; Santa Fe de Bogota, 11 illustrations; To a June Rose, illustrated; A Night with the Germans, 5 illustrations; Knoxville in the Olden Time; From Afar, a poem: A Secret of the Sea; The Watts Exhibition; East Angels; The Trumpet Blows; English in the Schools; June Days, a poem; A Georgian at the Opera; How Earthquakes are caused; Margaret Fuller; Editor's Easy Chair, Literary Record, Historical Record, and Drawer—all full of fresh interesting and valuable reading.

HARPERS MAGAZINE is sold by Sparrow Horton at the Old Woburn Bookstore.

Will whisper to thee of his changeless love.

In distant, desert places
The "mounts of God" are found;
His sky the world embraces,
And makes it "holy ground;"
The heart that serves and loves and clings
Hears everywhere the rush of angel wings.

To God the "there" is here;
All spaces are his own;
The distant and the near
Are shadows of his throne.
All times are his, the new, the old—
What boots it where life's little tale is told?

'Tis not for us to choose:
We listen and obey;
'Tis his to call and use;
'Tis ours to serve and pray;
It matters little, here, or there
God's world is wide, and heaven is everywhere.

We cannot go so far
That home is out of sight;
The morn, the evening star,
Will say "Good-day!" "Good-night!"
The heart that loves will never be alone;
All earth, all heaven, it reckons for its own!

The word measles originally signified leprosy, although in modern times used for a far different disorder. Its derivation is from the old French word messeau, or mesel, a leper.

The fifty-eight horse butchers of Paris distributed to the population in that city, 9,271 horses, asses and mules during the past year, against 6,865 of these animals slaughtered in 1883.

The devotion to ladies was the crowning grace of chivalry. The respect for the sex went so far that an act is on record, of James II. of Aragon, that any man, whether soldier or civilian, native or foreign, traveling through the kingdom with a high born lady, should be safe from all attacks or pursuits, unless he were a criminal under the charge of murder.

In the town of Warwick, Rhode Island, is a boulder so poised on another rock that a person standing on it can rock it from side to side. When it is rocked a dull booming sound is given out, which can be heard for miles over the country on a still night. A legend says thot in this manner the Indians were accustomed to summon their warriors to council at this place.

Few animals in times past have been more esteemed than the cat, or been honored with a wider folks lore. Indeed, among the Egyptians this favored animal was held sacred to Isis and the moon, and worshipped with great ceremony. In the mythology of all the Indo-European nations the cat holds a prominent place; and its connection with witches is well known.

Among the old devices used in the old war of independence for obstructing the progress of cavalry was an ugly, sharp four-pronged piece of iron, so arranged that whatever way it might fall upon the ground, one of the sharp prongs would be erect to penetrate the foot pressed upon it. These were scattered over the ground in the direction of the approach of the enemy's cavalry to attack.

The potion taken by Juliet in Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet" was wine of the atropa mandrago, a plant which grows in the isles of Greece. It is a drug equivalent to our atropa, or deadly nightshade, though a little different in its effect. The Greek physician made "death-wine" of it, and employed it as we do chloroform. "Before any persons were submitted to the cautery or the knife they took a draught of this, and the operation was performed while they were under the influence of the wine, the formula of which remains to this day as Dioscorides and Pliny gave it." Some years ago, Dr. W. B. Richardson says, he had some of the root brought him from Greece, and he was able to make some of the wine and give it evidence as to its action, which was strictly in accordance with that experienced by Juliet from the draught administered to her by Friar Lawrence.

Marrying a Chemist.

"I am determined my daughter shall marry a chemist, and if I had it to do over again I'd marry one myself."

"Well, that's the last idea I ever heard of. What in the world put that notion into your notion into your head, Mrs. Yumley?"

"Because a chemist can make a living easier than any other man, and if a body has one of them in the house, there's never any cause for worrying about what you'll have for dinner day after to-morrow?"

"How do you make that out?"

"Why, here it is in cold print, and in a religious paper, too. Read it for yourself."

And she reads:

"By the aid of chemistry horse beans can be converted into an article of diet superior to beef, and delicate biscuits, fancy pastry, as well as ordinary bread, can be produced from saw dust and wood shavings, plus a little leguminous flour. Excellent sugar can also be made from old shirts and rags."

"There, now then; don't you see I'm right? With a chemist in the family and a carpentershop in the neighborhood, what more does a body want to be comfortable and happy?"

"Yes, to be sure; but I believe I'd take my coffee clear, though."—Chicago Ledger.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle.

A collection of skulls from the Southern Hemisphere has been studied in England, the most notable conclusion reached being that some of the races of South Africa, Australia and the southern most part of South America are remarkable for the smallness of their heads.

Temperance.

"From the ranks of the children there are 60,000 doomed each year to the fate of the drunkard, if the liquor traffic is continued." What answer do you make to this, ye mothers who have no interest in the temperance cause? ye fathers who vote "license"? ye young women who marry moderate drinkers?

With but few exceptions, the present occupants of Boston's 3,000 licensed rum shops are only tenants. They ought not to be judged too harshly; they do not make all the money, and they ought not to be made to bear all the shame. "Good and eminently respectable citizens" stand behind these miserable men.

The Jews, it is said, are not affected by the epidemic. Sanitary law was a part of God's law to the chosen people and the observance of this law protects them. It is our misfortune and our sin that we do not always, in the christian dispensation, remember that Christ said, "I came not to destroy the law but to fullfill."

It is well understood that a builing can be leased twenty-five percent better to a rum-seller than to an honest merchant; for men who live on the vice of the community can afford, and are willing, to pay the highest rents. And so these property-owners, "good and respectable people every one," for the additional twenty-five percent, become silent partners, and make possible a business that has not one redeeming feature, whose legitimate fruits are crime and wretchedness, and the tears and bitter cries of suffering children.

The Liquor Dealer's Association of New York city is trying to fend the passage of high license law introduced in the legislature by promising that if no change is made in the license fee not a single saloon keeper will keep open on Sunday. The query naturally arises whether a legislature can compound with the violators of law in this fashion.

A sensible offer was recently made to the executive of the Manchester Infirmary, (England) by a gentleman who proposed to hand over the sum of £1,000 for the purpose of an experiment which should fairly test the value of alcohol in medical and surgical cases, furnishing a comparison between the results in two wards, in one of which alcohol should be used, while excluded from the other. If fairly tried such an experiment could not fail to be interesting.

The "ready-made" wooden houses of America are attracting attention abroad as well as at home. These houses are constructed in sections which can readily be placed in position. Many towns, located on the plains where timber is not available, are formed entirely of this line of American manufacture. Several shipments on a large scale of these "ready-made" houses have been sent to Buenas Ayres, over 1,500 of them being put together in the embryo city of La Plata, the new capital of the province. Some of these houses are being erected on remote cattle farms, but it is feared they will prove too light to withstand the fierce southwest winds of the Argentine.

In recent experiments Mons. Reinau found that iron reaches its greatest strength at a temperature of 554 degrees Fahrenheit, when it is thirty per cent. stronger than at sixty-eight degrees. Beyond 626 degrees the strength rapidly diminishes, and at 806 degrees is only thirty per cent. as great as at sixty-eight degrees.

The May number of THE BAY STATE MONTHLY contains for it frontispiece a finely engraved portrait on steel of Sylvester Marsh, the projector of the Mount Washington Railroad, which is accompanied by a very interesting biographical article from the graceful pen of Charles Carleton Coffin, the well-known journalist, correspondent, and author. The White and Franconia Mountains is an illustrated paper of New England's famous mountain resort, written by Fred. M. Colby, which is followed by Rambles Among Massachusetts Hills, The Boston Latin School, and many other high entertaining and valuable articles. THE BAY STATE is published by Messrs John N. McClintock & Co., Boston, at $3.00 a year.

THE MUSICAL HERALD occupies a high position among musical publications and well deserves the honor. The May number contains a large amount of fresh, readable matter in addition to several pieces of new music, and much musical chitchat. THE HERALD is published by the Musical Herald Co., Boston.

The attitude of Catholicism toward our public schools—a problem of grave concern at the present time—is to be discussed from opposite premises in the June number of the NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW, by M. How Nutmegs Grows.

Nutmegs grow on little trees which look like small pear-trees, and which are generally not over twenty feet high. The flowers are very much like the lily-of-the-valley. They are pale and very fragrant. The nutmeg is the seed of the fruit, and the mace is the thin covering of the seed. The fruit is about the size of a peach. When ripe, it breaks open and shows a little nut inside. The trees grow on the island of Asia and tropical America. They bear fruit seventy or eighty years, having ripe fruit upon them all seasons. A fine tree in Jamacia has over four thousand nutmegs on it every year.

The Dutch used to have all this nutmeg trade, as they owned the Banda Islands, and conquered all the trades, and destroyed the trees. To keep the price up, they once burned three piles of nutmegs, each of which was said to be "as big as a church." Nature did not sympathize with such meanness. The nutmeg pigeon found in all the Indian islands did for the world what the Dutch had determined should not be done, carried those nuts which are their food, into all the surrounding countries; and trees grew again, and the world had the benefit.

Lord Wolseley's Eye.

I am rejoiced that Lord Wolseley has been able to contradict the reports as to his eye trouble; he can afford ophthalmia less than most men, as, ever since the Crimea, he has had the sight of but one eye. When he was doing duty in the trenches before Sebastopol, a shell exploded in a gabion full of gravel, in moving which he and two sappers were engaged. They were both killed outright; Wolseley got so severe a peppering with the gravel that he was literally "stuck full of stones from head to foot." There was not a square inch of his face that had not a gravel pellet imbedded in it; part of his shin-bone was carried away, and his eyesight was in so great danger that for weeks he was kept in the gloom of cave near Balaclava, and so missed being present at the fall of Sebastopol. —London World.

A Moving Tail.

"Here, boys," called a man. "Come here and catch that rat. Biggest rat you ever saw ran under that pile of lumber. Throw it over here. Now we'll get him."

Three or four men went to work and moved an enormous pile of lumber, but did not find the rat.

"The owner of that lumber will be mad," said some one, addressing the man who had called the boys.

"No, he won't. I am the owner."

"Why, you must indeed be an enemy to rats, going to so much trouble to catch one."

"I didn't see any rat."

"Then why did you let the boys tear down your lumber?"

"Oh, you see I wanted it moved.—Arkansaw Traveler.

Courting by Note.

Greensborough has a certain young gentleman who has lately been enchained in the silken fetters of Cupid, and thoughts of the fair enchantress constantly fill his mind. He has a special book in which during the week he notes down the thoughts which occur to him about his lady love. When Sunday comes he visits her, armed with the note book, and proceeds to read therefrom the most tender expressions which have occurred to him from time to time. This can really be called courting by note.—Savannah (Ga.) News.

Imposing Upon the Poor.

"It all comes o' bein poor," said an old lady, trembling with indignation, to her sick husband. "I just stepped in a minnit at the Rich's to tell 'em as how you wasn't gettin' any better, an' Mrs. Rich sed she was sorry, and wanted me to bring you a bottle of wine."

"Did you bring it?" asked the sick man eagerly.

"No; I heard her say it had been layin' down in the cellar ever since 1855, an' when she offered it to me, I just walked off without sayin' a word."—New York Sun.

In Japan earthquakes have had a noticeable influence in determining the natures of the buildings. Architecture, as understood in other parts of the world, may be said to have hardly any existence there. In consequence of the frequent shakings to which the houses are subjected it is said that the great city of Yeddo has to be practically rebuilt on an average every seven years. Fire almost invariably follows a great earthquake in Japan.

Cure for Infantile Bawling.

Two Dallas ladies were overheard talking over the fence as follows:

"What is the matter with your baby? I don't hear it cry any more."

"I have cured it of bawling." "Do you give it soothing syrup with onion in it?"

"No, I don't give it any medicine at all. I have adopted an entirely new plan.

"What is it?"

"When it begins to cry I smear the tips of its little fingers with molasses, and give it a few feathers to hold in one hand. Its attention becomes aroused and it pricks off the feathers with the other hand. The feathers stick to the other hand, of course, and the little darling picks them off again. The little angel's mind is thus so completely absorbed with the feathers that it forgets to cry."—Texas Siftings.

He Did Not Understand.

"Don't your wife wear a jersey?" blandly asked a smooth-tongued dry goods clerk of Farmer Furrow, who was making a few purchases for his better half.

"Now, look-a-here, young feller," said the old granger, with a look of mingled scorn and ferocity, "don't yer be too fresh. I may be a countryman, but I'll be durned if I'll take any guff from yer."

"Why, I didn't mean anything," timidly retorted the clerk. "I merely asked if your wife wore a jersey."

"Well, sir, if that's all yer want to know I'll tell yer. She milks jerseys, and feeds 'em, but, by gosh! she doesn't wear 'em, confound yer pictur'!"—Burlington Hawkeye.

The Root of the Evil.

To throughly cure scrofula it is necessary to strike directly at the root of the evil. This is exactly what Hood's Sarsaparilla does, by acting upon the blood, thoroughly cleansing it of all impurities, and leaving not even a taint of scrofula in the vital fluid. Thousands who have been cured of scrofula by Hood's Sarsaparilla, testify to its wonderful blood-purifying qualities. Sold by all druggists.

Ammonia is cheaper than soap and cleans everything it touches. A few drops in a kettle that is hard to clean makes grease and stickiness fade away and robs the work of all its terrors. Let it stand ten minutes before attempting to scrape off and every corner will be clean. It cleans the sink and penetrates into the drainpipes. Spots, finger-marks on paint disappear under its magical influence, and it is equally effective on the floor and oilcloth, though it must be used with care on the latter or it will injure the polish. There is nothing to equal it in cleansing the silverware and it gives a higher polish and keeps clean longer than anything else. If the silver be only lightly tarnished, put two tablespoonfuls of ammonia into a quart of hot water, brush the tarnished articles with it and dry with a chamois. If badly discolored they may need a little whiting previous to the washing. An old nail brush goes into the cracks to polish and brighten. For fine muslin or delicate lace it is invaluable, as it cleans without injuring the finest fabric. Put a few drops into your sponge bath in hot weather and you will be astonished at the result, as it imparts coolness to the skin. Use it to clean hair brushes and to wash any hair or feathers to be used for beds or pillows. When employed in anything that is not especially soiled, use the waste water afterward for the house plants that are taken down from their usual position and immersed in the tub of water.

The Famous Notre Dame,

On the 30th of last January, the Sisters of the most noted Catholic ladies seminary in the United States, the famous Notre Dame, at Govanstown, near Baltimore, Md., made public a card, certifying to the beneficial results attending the use of Red Star Cough Cure in that institution. They state that they found it efficacious alike for relieving coughs, oppressions on the chest and irritation of the throat. Officials of the Boards of Health of Brooklyn, Baltimore and other cities have likewise publicly proclaimed the virtues of this new discovery, which is entirely free from opiates, poisons and other objections.

A Worthless Animal.

Farmer Diggins had a horse to sell, and at the market he commenced to dilate on the animals good qualities.

"How much will you give for him?" shouted Diggins.

"Forty dollars," yelled a voice.

"'Twon't do," said Diggins.

"Ten dollars," shouted a wall-eyed man.

"He's worthless," cried another.

"Who said he was a worthless animal?" howled Diggins. "'Twas you, you lop-eared rail-chopper."

"I didn't say any such thing, you mule-backed lump of clay," replied the man. "I only said he was worth less than forty dollars, and now blamed if I don't think he is worthless."

Diggins traded the horse for a side of bacon before the close of the day.—Carl Pretzel's Weekly.

Thanked by Congress.

Since this government has been organized there have been only thirty-four people named in resolutions of thanks by Congress. With three exceptions this honor has only been paid to officers of great gallantry in action during a war. The three exceptions were those of Captain Ingraham, Captain Ringgold and Captain Dahlgren. In the first case Captain Ingraham cleared his ship for action and rescued at the cannon's mouth an American citizen by the name of Martin Koszta from illegal seizure and imprisonment on board the Austrian war-brig Hussar. Captain Ringgold was honored for his daring and skill in rescuing the crew of the steam-transport Gouverneur, wrecked in a gale the 1st of November, 1861, having on board a batallion of United States marines, and also for the search and rescue of the battle-ship Vermont, which was disabled in a gale on the 26th of February, 1864. The third, Captain Dahlgren, was thanked for his improvements in gunnery. This honor gives the recipient the right of admission to the floors of Congress at any and all times.

The Milkman's Mistake.

"What's the matter with this milk?" savagely demanded the customer. "Nothing," promptly replied the poor but honest milkman. "Nothing! It's the purest and richest milk in the world. It's the water that's bad, that's where the trouble is. You see, I've got a new man and when the creek froze over yesterday he went down to the shore and filled up the cans with tide water. Regular greenhorn; I discharged him. Tastes kind of brickish, doesn't it?" And coldly and calmly he drove off, and wound his mellow horn before another door. Truly, in the midst of life we are in the midst of three or four things which some people never can understand.—[Brooklyn Eagle.

Herat, the "Gate of India" and "Pearl of Khorassan," is one of the oldest cities in the world, and probably the most unfortunate. Situated on the Heri-Rud, at the northern extremity of a fruitful province, through which lies the easiest and best road from Central Asia to Hindostan, its possession was a matter of the utmost importance to northern warriors who passed through Afghanistan on their way to the golden plains beyond the Indus. Thus, to use the words of a Persian historian, "the city has been fifty times taken, fifty times destroyed, and fifty times has it risen again from its ashes." The few Europeans who have visited the town agree in describing it as one of the filthiest in the world. The place would be totally uninhabitable were it not endowed by nature with a particularly healthy atmosphere and a benignant north wind, which tend to counteract the unwholesome smells and dirty habits of the people. The surrounding country is exceedingly fruitful, seventeen sorts of grapes, numerous varieties of melons, apricots, wheat and other cereals being among the more valuable products. Silk and carpets are the principal manufactures.

The wind blew strongly across Brooklyn Bridge. The black Derby of a large burly-red-faced man suddenly cleared the iron fence and fell upon the railroad track. The face of the owner grew redder as he leaned over the pickets and saw a train approaching. But he never moved a step, although some thoughtless spectators looked on to see him follow the course of his property in a mad resolution to rescue it. A small boy on the roadway opposite saw his plight, leaped from his wagon, mounted the fence, picked up his hat and handed it to the owner. The redfaced man said simply, "Thank you," and resumed his way. "Never go for a lost hat yourself," he observed to a companion. "During a long experience I have uniformly observed a principle in human nature which invariably leads somebody else to run and pick it up."

"My dear fellow," replied his companion, "the principle is of universal application. The great man is not the one who does things himself, but who can make others do them for him."

We are enabled, by the courtesy of a friend, to publish a letter of Abraham Lincoln's to a railway superintendent, on the subject of renewing a railway pass. The letter is signed A. Lincoln.

HE FELL IN THE STREETS
KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY
Cures a Terrible Case of Gravel When Other Help Failed.

What is Gravel? what causes it, and who are most liable to it? It is frequently attended with acute pain, and unless relief can be found, produces inflammation and death. Both sexes and all ages are liable to it, although men who have reached or passed middle age are its most common victims. Nothing is more urgently needed than a reliable medicine for Gravel, as the disease seems on the increase, and we are glad to say that such a specific is now before the public in the form of DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, of Rondout, N. Y. We put in evidence the following letter, selected from many similar communications:

PITTSFIELD, Mass., March, 1884.

Dr. David Kennedy.

DEAR SIR:—You have a right to know, and I desire the public to know my experience with Gravel and my remarkable recovery through the use of your "FAVORITE REMEDY." I am a carpenter living in this place, and there are plenty of witnesses to the truth of what I say. My first comparatively slight attack of Gravel was in the year 1878. It passed away, and I had little more trouble until last July, 1883. One day when at work in my shop I was suddenly seized with a keen and terrible pain in my left side. I consulted two physicians at once. One said: "I can do nothing for you. Your case is incurable!" I was frightened and went to the second, who said little, but gave me a prescription. It did no good.

Then began a series of experiences the agony and horror of which words cannot depict. Think of it! I was sometimes taken in the street, and would fall, writhing with agony, upon the sidewalk. It was death in life. Thank Heaven, I then heard of "KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY," through Mr. P. P. Cooley. I had not used half a bottle when I passed three stones in succession, one of which was nearly one-half an inch long. I persevered with the medicine, the system gradually abated, and I have had no more trouble since. I am well, thanks to you and "FAVORITE REMEDY." Yours most gratefully, JAMES D. KENNEDY.

What "FAVORITE REMEDY" did in this case it has done in many others.

MALARIA.

As an anti-malarial medicine
DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S

has won golden opinions. No traveler should consider his outfit complete unless it includes a bottle of this medicine. If you are exposed to frequent changes of climate, food and water, Favorite Remedy should always be within your reach. It expels malarial poisons, and is the best preventative of chills and malarial fever in the world. It is especially offered as a trustworthy specific for the cure of Kidney and Liver complaints, Constipation and all disorders arising from an impure state of the blood. To women who suffer from any of the ills peculiar to their sex Favorite Remedy is constantly proving itself an unfailing friend—a real blessing. Address the proprietor, Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. $1 bottle, 6 for $5, by all druggists.

THE SONG OF THE HOUSEKEEPER.

Sweep, sweep, sweep,
In the short December days,
And dust, dust, dust,
In the summer's silvery haze!
It's oh! to be a slave,
And for ever a duster flirt,
And wear the years of our life away
In a hand-to-hand battle with dirt!

Sweep, sweep, sweep,
While the dust rises up to our eyes,
And scrub, scrub, scrub,
Then drive out those horrible flies!
Husbands hungry and tired,
With buttonless trousers and shirt,
Meekly retire from the awful scene,
While we fight a pitched battle with dirt.

Oh! men with brow serene,
How much work you make for your wives!
Leaving your boots and shoes "under foot"—
And eating cake, tarts, and pies.
Cook, cook, cook,
To meet the demands of our kin,
And bake, bake, bake,
Though the heart is faint within.

Oh! for a little change,
A respite however brief!
From petty trials of housework free,
From mutton, pork, and beef.
New songs to gladden the heart,
To all would be far more sweet
Than that old, old tune by housekeepers sung:
"What shall we have to eat?"

Oh! but to breathe the breath
Of the fragrant new-mown hay!
And in pastures and woodlands green
To wander far away,
For only one short hour
Away from housework to steal,
And dreamily rest by a babbling brook
While—some one else cooks the meal!

AN ODD MISTAKE.

Mr. Grey was a man who had committed a great blunder. He had retired! And now time hung heavily on his hands, and he knew not what to do with himself. So, for lack of better occupation, he took to calling on a certain plump widow of his acquaintance, who had a remarkably pretty daughter.

Bessie Peploe was a younger edition of her mother. They had the same black eyes, rosy cheeks, and wavy hair, and truth compels us to add, the same quick temper.

"I'll never marry old Grey," Bessie told Mrs. Peploe, defiantly after the manner of the young lady who refused a man before he "axed her," for Mr. Grey had not yet proposed, although every evening he presented himself at the widow's dwelling, and sat by the fireside, in the most comfortable chair in the room.

"We shall see," returned the elder lady, and her bright eyes flashed, for she had set her mind upon the marriage and already regarded Bessie as the mistress of Mr. Grey's comfortable house, in the High street of the comfortable little town in which they resided.

"Yes: we shall see," muttered Bessie, and putting on her hat, slipped out to have a walk with her admirer, Jack Watkins, to whom she confided her trouble.

Jack was poor, and for that reason had refrained from offering his hand to pretty Bessie; but when she told him that old Grey was after her, he could no longer disguise his feelings, and before they parted the girl he loved had consented to be his wife.

"What will mother say?" thought Bessie, with a sigh, as they parted at the gate of Mrs. Peploe's little cottage. "That horrid man will be there."

That horrid mah was there, in an armchair, opposite Mrs. Peploe.

He smiled at Bessie as she entered; but Bessie frowned at him in return, and his face fell. That evening the girl was absolutdly sullen; she spoke in monosyllables, and ill-temper deprived her pretty face of half its beauty.

"I am afraid her mind is set against it," Mr. Gray told himself with a sigh, "and we might all be so happy, if she could only look at the matter in a proper light; but I suppose it's natural."

And he redoubled his efforts to be agreeable—poor little man! for he had an affectionate heart, and his big house was dull and lonely.

But Bessie's face never relaxed its set expression.

She hated the man, and meant to let him see it, in defiance of her mother's angry glances. What business had a man old enough to be her father to come courting her?

"You have behaved disgracefully," her mother said, when Mr. Grey had taken his departure. "It is so wicked to trifle with the love of any man."

"I have never trifled with his love," retorted her daughter; "he must know that I hate him. I have never attempted to disguise it—now, have I, mother?"

"You are a fool," said her mother, bluntly. "Mr. Grey is the best chance you have ever had, or ever will have, and I insist on your saying yes when he asks you to be his wife."

"Mother," cried Besie, impulsively, throwing her arms around her mother's waist, hiding her face in her bosom. "Mother, I have already said yes to somebody else—somebody I love very dearly."

"What!" gasped Mrs Peploe, freeing herself from her daughter's embrace. "What!"

"It is true enough," said Bessie in a faltering voice. "Jack has asked me to marry him, and I have said yes."

"Without consulting me!" exclaimed her mother, angrily, looking at her with a stern, reproachful face.

"I love him," returned Bessie. "He is the only man in the word that I could ever care for."

"Stuff and nonsense!" cried Mrs. Peploe. "Even if I liked the young man—which I don't—your marrying would be out of the question. He can't afford to keep you."

"I am not afraid of poverty," said Bessie, bravely, "besides we are not going to marry in haste. We can wait."

"Poor fool!" and Mrs. Peploe's lips curled. "I know what this waiting means for the woman. She goes on trusting and believing in his promises, and then when her beauty has faded, he turns round and marries someone else. That's how it ends."

"Even then," said Bessie, "the woman is better off than if she had tied herself somebody she could not love."

"Oh, yes, you are mad—quite mad," returned Mrs. Peploe; "but, thank goodness, you have a mother who won't allow you to make an idiot of yourself."

"What for?" asked Bessie, with resentment.

"For proposing to a girl whom he has no means of keeping in comfort," returned Mrs. Peploe; "a strait-waistcoat is what he wants. You are a pair of lunatics; but fortunately, I've some sense left, and I won't stand by and see my daughter ruined for life."

And soe flounced off to bed without giving Bessie the usual good-night's kiss. Poor girl, she missed it sorely, and sobbed herself to sleep; but she meant to be true to Jack all the same. Not even her mother's anger would induce her to give him up and marry old Grey.

She treated the object of her dislike with the greatest coldness on his next visit, and succeeded in making him look thoroughly miserable. But he brightened considerably when Mrs. Peploe, to atone for her daughter's rudeness, sought to engage him in conversation. Indeed the grateful little man ventured to give the elder lady's hand a gentle squeeze when he rose to take his departure; and, to his surprise and joy, it was warmly returned.

"Now, if Miss Peploe would only get over her objection, how happy and comfortable we should all be," he thought, as he trudged home, "Hulloa," coming suddenly face to face with a handsome young fellow in a rather shabby ulster,

"How are you, Jack Watkins?"

"Oh! I am all right, thank you," said Jack, sulkily, and strode on without another word, while little Mr. Grey stood gazing after him with a look of comprehension on his face.

"I suppose she has been telling him all about it," he said to himself with a sigh. "It's natural, I suppose, but it's selfish, too. Yes! It is a little bit selfish of them." And, shaking his head, the old gentleman knocked at the door of his house in the High-street—that large, gloomy house that had never seemed homelike since the death of that sister who had been his right hand.

When we think we are going to make people happy it is hard to find that we are regarded as an enemy, and Mr. Grey retired to rest in rather dismal spirits.

He arose the next morning with the determination of putting an end to his suspense by offering himself and his home in the High-street to the object of his attachment; he could bear the suspense no longer.

When he arrived at the widow's cottage that evening Bessie was not at home. She had gone out to tea with some friends, Mrs. Peploe said, but failed to add that she had wilfully absented herself because the sight of Mr. Grey was distasteful to her.

"I'm glad she is not at home, dear Mrs. Pepioe," said Mr. Grey, looking very red and nervous. "I am glad she is not at home, because it gives me an opportunity of saying something that is very near my heart."

He edged a little nearer to the widow as he spoke, and she smiled at him in an encouraging way.

She was a handsome woman and her smile revealed the whitest teeth in the world.

"Pray go on, Mr. Gray," she said. "I am all attention."

Mr. Gray coughed, and looked excessively uncomfortable.

He wished that the widow would avert her bright eyes from his face; her steady gaze confused him, and he scarcely knew what he was going to say.

He hardly liked to risk popping the question, for a refusal would mean banishment from the cheerful fireside where he had spent so many pleasant hours.

But the widow was waiting for him to speak, and he could not back out now; he had gone too far.

Poor little man! His heart was beating like a sledge-hammer.

How still the room was. He started as the ashes dropped upon the hearth. This awful silence must be broken, or what would the widow think of him? He must say something.

"You must have known my object in coming here so often," he blurted out at last.

"Well, I think I have guessed it," returned Mrs. Peploe, continuing the stitches in the stocking she was knitting.

"I thought you would," observed Mr. Grey, considerably embarrassed by her reply, but relieved at the same time, for it saved him from the ordeal of a long explanation. "Well, since you have guessed my secret, can you give me hope?"

The widow was silent for a few moments, and Mr. Grey gazed at her in the deepest anxiety, his heart throbbing with mingled joy and fear.

The house in the High-street would seem more lonely than ever, if he returned to it a disappointed man.

"I will be frank with you," she said presently. "As far as I am concerned, there is no possible objection to the marriage; but Bessie is so young and foolish that——"

"Ah! yes! I thought she would object," said Mr. Grey, rubbing his face with a red silk pocket handkerchief. "But don't you think you could bring her round? I'd be so kind to her, that I'm sure she'd get over her dislike of the idea. Now, couldn't you induce her to be more reasonable?"

"I have tried my best," said the widow, with a deep sigh. "But the girl is wild and headstrong. I seem to have lost all influence over her."

"Then, after all, there is no hope for me," said Mr. Grey, looking terribly crestfallen. "I thought we would be such a happy family—we four."

"We four!" repeated Mrs. Peploe, staring at him as if she thought he had taken leave of his senses.

"Yes—we four! Why not?" asked Mr. Grey. "I know Jack Watkins is very fond of Bessie, and I fancied we should all be happy together, if I could only induce you to say 'yes.'"

"Then it is not Bessie you want," said the widow, dropping stitches in her stocking, and blushing like a girl, as the truth flashed through her mind.

"Bessie!" exclaimed Mr. Grey, laughing heartily. "What would I want with a child like that? Didn't you know," here he grew suddenly grave, "that it was you I wanted, Janet?"

"We all thought it was Bessie," stammered Mrs. Peploe. "Oh! what a fool I have been!"

"Don't say that," returned Mr. Grey, in a sad tone of voice. "It is I who have been a fool to think you could ever care for me."

The widow made no reply to this, but gave him a glance that spoke volumes. In another moment his arm was around her waist, and he had stolen a kiss.

"And you think that Bessie won't object?" he said, anxiously.

"I am sure she won't," returned Mrs. Peploe, with a twinge of conscience, as she thought of the way she had received Bessie's confession of love for Jack Watkins.

"I don't know so much about that," said a merry voice from the doorway, and Mr. Grey hastily drew his arm from the widow's waist as Bessie entered the room.

The kiss had opened the young lady's eyes as to the real state of affairs, and she knew in a moment that her mother had been the real object of Mr. Grey's affections. But, why had she not seen it before? She was angry with herself for being such an idiot.

What in the world would Jack say?

Would he be pleased to find that Mr. Grey was an imaginary rival?

Bessie pulled aside the blind and looked out to see Jack, who had escorted her home, standing on the opposite pavement with his eyes fixed on the cottage. Mr. Grey followed her, and, after peering over her shoulder, vanished from the room, while at the same moment her mother called her away from the window.

"Bessie," said Mrs. Peploe, between laughing and crying, "forgive me for all the hard things I said to you."

"I will indeed," returned Bessie, heartily, as she kissed her mother; "but what fools we have been! We must have been as blind as bats not to see that it was you that he wanted all the time."

"Who would dream that he would have looked at me when you were near," returned Mrs. Peploe, stroking her daughter's rosy cheek.

"Oh! mother," began Bessie, but paused abruptly, as the door opened, and Mr. Grey entered accompanied by Jack Watkins.

The four looked at each other in silence for a few moments, and then, tickled by the absurdity of the situation, Jack went into convulsions of laughter. His mirth was contagious, and all laughed heartily, although Bessie tried to look indignant.

"All's well that ends well," observed Mr. Grey, rubbing his hands, and then he bent forward and audaciously kissed Mrs. Peploe right before the eyes of the young people.

It was not long before a double wedding was celebrated, Mr. Grey having lent Jack the money to start in business for himself, and from that day to this the couple in the big house and the cottage—a wedding present from Mr. Grey—have never regretted their choice.

Two Hundred And Sixty-Five Women Vote In Woburn.

EDITORS WOMAN'S JOURNAL:

It is probable that the practical use of woman suffrage was never more clearly demonstrated than at the recent town election in Woburn. During the past year, there has been considerable dissatisfaction among the citizens of that town in regard to the management, or rather mis-management, of the schools. This feeling culminated last autumn, when politics governed the election of teachers, and several instructors of credit and ability were unceremoniously "dropped" by the committee. After this, affairs grew worse and worse. The disputes and dissensions of the committee at their regular meetings, graphically reported by the local newspapers, became the talk of the town. Finally two school reports appeared, the majority report, included in the regular town reports, and the report of the minority, printed at their own expense.

But in the meantime the women of Woburn had been aroused by the first signal of danger to their children, as years of argument and agitation could not have aroused them. During the summer, several of the leading spirits went quietly to work, the town was canvassed, the women were urged to do their duty, and as a result, two hundred and eighty women registered to vote for school committee. Last Monday two hundred and sixty-five of these women went to the polls and voted the citizens' ticket, which, as far as the school committee was concerned, was made on principles of fitness and education rather than of politics. The result was a complete victory for proper school government, the candidates of the citizens' party winning by an average majority of two hundred and twenty votes. Only by the help of the women-voters were they elected. Thus the real paying power of woman suffrage was for once shown to the citizens of Woburn.

But this victory of right and good government, as it must appear to all fully cognizant of the facts in the case, involves the consideration of broader questions than the school system of Woburn. It is a strong and telling argument for equal rights. It has given many women an interest in woman suffrage which they would not otherwise have felt. Selfishly or unselfishly, they have once helped in the work of reformers, and the influence can never wholly pass from their lives. Let us hope that this is only the beginning of a great and lasting work in that town.

We are glad to spread this good news throughout the State as an argument for woman suffrage. Just at this time, when our opponents are presenting their theories of harm and loss to be incurred by the voting of women, it is encouraging to witness this practical refutation at our very doors.

A Remarkable Dog Story.

One Sunday afternoon a group of children were playing at the end of the pier which projects into Lake Ontario, near Kingston, U. S. A. The proverbial careless child of the party made the proverbial backward step off from the pier into the water. None of his companions could save him, and their cries had brought no one from the shore, when, just as he was sinking for the last time, a superb Newfoundland dog rushed down the pier into the water and pulled the boy out. Those of the children who did not accompany the boy home took the dog to a confectioner's on the shore and fed him with as great a variety of cakes and other sweets as he would eat. So far the story is, of course, only typical of scores of well-known cases. The individuality of this case is left for the sequel. The next afternoon the same group of children were playing at the same place, when the canine hero of the day before came trotting down to them with the most friendly wags and nods. There being no occasion this time for supplying him with delicacies, the children only stroked and patted him. The dog, however, had not come out of pure sociability. A child in the water and cake and candy stood to him in the close and obvious relation of cause and effect, and if this relation was not clear to the children he resolved to impress it upon them. Watching his chance, he crept up behind the child who was standing nearest to the edge of the pier, gave a sudden push which sent him into the water, then sprang in after him, and gravely brought him ashore. To those of us who have had a high respect for the disinterestedness of dogs, this story may give a melancholy proof that the development of the intelligence at the expense of the moral nature is by no means exclusively human.—London Spectator.

Will Keep Their Trade.

A reporter stood in the office of a down-town grocery on Saturday conversing with the proprietor, when the sudden "B-r-r-r-r" of the telephone interrupted the chat.

"Hello! What's wanted?" asked the man of provisions.

"Is this Mr. Blank's store?" inquired the person at the other end of the line.

"Yes; go ahead."

"This is Mrs. ———. I would like small change for a five-dollar bill, and wish you would send a man over with it. Will it be too much trouble?"

"Oh, no. I'll send it at once. Good-by."

"Well, that's rather cool," said the reporter. "Such calls must be profitable."

"We don't mind little things of that kind," replied the grocer, "but I'll give you an instance of facial development that's worth recording. One rainy night about a week ago, a lady rang up and asked if I would send her yeast cake at once. I told her I would deliver it myself on my way home. I walked six blocks with that infernal yeast cake in my pocket, and delivered it to a servant who responded to my knock on the front door. The next morning I was somewhat astonished when the lady called me up by telephone and informed me that the next time any of my men delivered goods at her house they were to come to the back door. Isn't that enough to drive a man out of business? Well, it's but a sample of the messages that come over that telephone of mine, but as these people are good customers, I can't talk back to them without losing their trade.—Detroit Free Press.

"Auld Robin Grey."

This exquisite ballad was written by Lady Anne Lindsay, daughter of the fifth Earl of Balcarres. She was born on November 27, 1750, and at the early age of twenty-one produced the ballad which Sir Walter Scott says "is worth all the dialogues which Corydon and Phyllis have had together, from the days of Theocritus downward." In 1792 Lady A. Lindsay married Andrew Barnard, son of the Bishop of Limerick, with whom she went out to the Cape, on his appointment as Colonial Secretary under Lord Macartney. Mr. Barnard dying at the Cape, his widow returned to London, where she enjoyed the friendship of Burke, Windham and others until her death, which occurred in 1825. It was not until her seventy-third year that Lady Barnard made known the secret of the authorship of the ballad. An amusing story is told in connection with its production. On Lord Balcarre's estate was a shepherd of the name of Robin Gray, and for some act of his, Lady Anne resolved to immortalize his memory. Upon her little sister entering her room one day, Lady Anne said: "I have been writing a ballad, my dear, and I am oppressing my heroine with misfortunes. I have already sent her Jamie to sea, broken her father's arm, made her mother fall sick and gave her Auld Robin Gray for a lover, but I wish to load her with a fifth sorrow in the last four lines; help me to one, I pray." "Steal the cow, sister Anne," said her sister. Accordingly we are told that the cow was "lifted."—Illustrated Irish Ballads.

FOR HEALTH.

It is confidently predicted that the Asiatic cholera will visit this country towards autumn this season. To guard against it newspapers, doctors and Boards of Health have been issuing warnings ever since last summer, when the dread disease made such mortal raids in southern Europe. While there is no certainty, and hardly a probability, that the cholera will come over here this year; and if it does, its ravages will be confined to the vilest parts of a few of the largest cities; there would be no harm done if communities were to put themselves into a proper condition to successfully resist any attacks it might make, by removing all those offensive things which invite its presence and help prolong its visit when here. Cleanliness, they say, comes next to godliness. To get clean and to keep so is a virtue that most American people do not have to be driven to practice. Some, however, will go dirty, cholera or no cholera. And the same is true of an occasional community.

But we should not advise the people of Woburn to work themselves into an alarming state of fright over this matter. Ours has always been a tolerably clean, sweet and wholesome place. On an average the inhabitants bathe as often as once a quarter, and that is doing pretty well considering. The backyards of the town are as free from noisome heaps of rubbish as the general run, and it is not certain that lack of drainage has carried off annually more than a small per cent of the citizens. With a "reform" town government, and all the word implies, we fail to see how Woburn is liable to be exposed to the much dreaded epidemic, even if it should conclude to visit these shores this season. "Reform" is equal to almost any emergency, and it can be safely said that there is no better article of it anywhere than we have here. Therefore and lastly, our advice to the people here is, to keep cool, reasonably clean, don't fret, and, if the cholera is bound to come, make the best of it.

GEN. LOGAN ELECTED.

Once in a great while the cloud that temporarily overshadows the Republican party shows a rift in it through which quivers of sunbeams pierce to cheer the souls of the downcast. The latest thing of the kind to afford consolation, and even great joy, to the Republicans was the re-election of Gen. John A. Logan by the Illinois Legislature on last Tuesday to the United States Senate. It was the most noted political event that has happened for several months, and, considering how matters stand in Congress, a very important one. We have felt all the time that Gen. Logan would win in the end, and so the news did not surprise us any. The party or candidate that can beat him must rise exceedingly early in the morning, and work all day smart, and then it can't be done. Gen. Logan was never defeated on the battlefield or anywhere else, and in the protracted contest which ended on Tuesday the Illinois Democracy found in him more than their match. He is one of the ablest and purest statesmen in this country, and it is a blessed thing for it that he was elected.

THE CANADIAN REBELLION.

Riel's rebellion in Winnepeg has come to an inglorious termination. It was expected by the Canadian government and many others that the war would be of considerable duration—a year or two at least—instead of which, after a few pretty sharp bush-fights, the leader of the rebellion finds himself a prisoner in the hands of Gen. Middleton, a large number of braves captured, and the whole affair in a melancholy state of collapse. The fighting was tolerably severe while it lasted, and a good many men fell on both sides; but the odds were against the rebels; Riel turned out not much of a military leader, though plucky and brave; and the affair is all ended, except to dispose of the prisoners, which, just at this moment, is a question that is puzzling the Canadian official brain.

☞ There isn't much likelihood that England and Russia will fight. The latter is ready and almost spoiling for a bout with her old enemy, but the sum and substance of it is, England is afraid. She blusters a good deal, or, did in the first of it, but failing to scare her opponent, she is drawing things more mildly just now. The fact is, England is in a bad way at present. The lion trembles when the bear growls; France has recently given the tail of the animal a severe twist; the Mahdi has driven him out of the Soudan; and even the half-civilized swarms of Afghanistan have served notice on him that hereafter they will swear by the Russian bear, and not by the Empress of all the Indies.

— Some lawless parties have opened rumshops just over the line into Winchester at Montvale, but it won't work. Ere long the proprietors will be brought up all standing as others have been.

— For a week or more Dr. Reynolds has been laid up with measles. He ought to have taken them earlier in life when he could have attended to their case without interfering with business.

— Mr. Samuel Leeds, proprietor of public carriages, has disposed of the horse that ran and stove things last Friday. He will drive no animals in his carriages that are not perfectly safe.

— In answer to a dispatch announcing the mortal illness of his father-in-law, Mr. Warren, a former resident of Woburn, Mr. Marcellus Littlefield hastily left for New York on Tuesday last.

— When ladies start out on a shopping tour they will do well to bear in mind that Copeland, Bowser & Co. give real bargains in dry, dress and fancy goods, and that their stock is a desirable one.

— The assessors have about finished their outside work, and will soon be ready to tackle the books. They have been remarkable spry about it this year, showing conclusively that they can work when the spirit is willing.

— Now that the warm weather has come to stay, parents should provide their boys with Shirt-waists. A full assortment of the celebrated "Star" Waists to be found at Hammond's Clothing and Furnishing House.

— Last Tuesday evening the officers of Quealy Court, No. 32, Catholic Order of Foresters, per hand of High Court Treasurer, James H. Supple of Boston, paid to the family of the late Michael Ferrin $1,000 as insurance on his life.

— A lad, seven years old, belonging in Boston, was killed by a B. & L. train last Friday at Winter Hill. A boy playing with him was somewhat injured. That station is noted for children playing an the railroad track.

— Mr. Fred A. Hartwell is making considerable improvements on his residence on Pleasant street, among them the addition of a French roof. When completed Mr. Hartwell will have one of the best and finest looking homes in town.

— It is expected the committee on the Godfrey Seamless Pocket will report at the meeting of the Executive Committee of the Board of Trade next Tuesday evening, which will make it worth the while of all members to be present.

— The Woburn Mechanic Phalanx (Co. G.), Capt. Buchanan, joined their comrades of the 5th Mass. Regt. for their annual spring drill on Boston Common last Wednesday. They returned in good time, at the beat of the drum, at 6.30 p. m.

— When business is on the boom it would be a good thing for our merchants to make large displays in the JOURNAL, which, as an advertising medium, is unsurpassed by any paper in Middlesex county. It would pay a handsome interest to do so.

— Last Friday John E. Quinn, after collecting a bill of $50 in the city, met a friend on Portland street, and by the time he got ready to return home his $50 was all gone. John related his tale to Chief Nelson who, he hoped, could do something for him.

— It would cost quite a sum of money to add forty feet to the length of Mr. F. S. Burgess's store, but his large and rapidly increasing trade has set him to considering the matter in a serious vein, and it is probable that the work will be done before long.

— After many years and much controversy the maples in front of Dr. Elbridge Trull's premises on Main street have been cut down. The moving of Dr. Harlow's house made this step necessary. The doctor's fine building looks all the better for the absence of the trees, we think.

— The new chief of police of Woburn is a terror to liquor sellers. Not satisfied with pulling them in the morning for violation of law, he pays them an afternoon visit when they are selling, and rolls them in again. He means business everytime.—Winchester Star. That's about the size of it.

— The "Knockabout" and Wear Resister" Suits at $5 are splendid suits for the boys. They are made of strictly all-wool goods, have the celebrated "Cavalry" Knee, and are guaranteed first-class in every respect. Parents should not fail to examine these Suits at Hammond's Clothing House.

— The Judge and Clerk of our District Court are fully earning their salary in these piping times of liquor raids. There is hardly a morning when one or more of the vendors of the ardent are not put through the judicial mill, and these cases with other legal affairs keep the Court pretty tolerable busy.

— On Monday we were favored with a call from Mr. Webster of Kennebunk, Maine, an old and esteemed acquaintance. He has two sisters living here, and many relatives residing in Somerville and other places near by. Having recently fallen heir to a handsome legacy Mr. Webster is enjoying life in his old age.

— Mrs. C. L. Griffin of Topeka, Kansas, formerly an esteemed and well-known resident of Woburn, has been making a brief visit among old friends here. Her son, Rev. Perley M. Griffin, has during the last four years discharged the duties of pastor of the Congregational church at East Bridgewater, Mass.

— According to our figuring Mr. Larry Reade, the undertaker, is about 98 years old. The Globe says "49 equinoctial storms have driven him in out of the rain," and as these storms occur, on an average, once in two years, Larry's locks must belie him as to age, for he does not appear to be much above 50.

— The Commencement exercises of the Perkins Institution and Massachusetts School for the blind will be held in Tremont Temple, on June 2, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Samuel Eliot, LL. D. will preside, and Governor Robinson will give a brief address. Seats will be reserved until 3 o'clock only.

— The removal of Mr. Woodbury's and Dr. Harlow's residences from Pleasant street, to give a passageway for the railroad, leaves a wicked and ragged looking gap there. It was a pity to move them, but everything must give way to make room for the march of improvement, and that is why they had to go.

— The lively movement in real estate transactions is the most encouraging sign of approaching and unusual prosperity for Woburn that has yet fallen under our eye. On all hands sales and purchases are reported, many of them with a view to early building, and this is just what we like to see. It means go-ahead.

— Hon. E. D. Hayden is chairman of the creditors of James R. Osgood & Co. publishers, whose failure was recently announced. At a meeting held Tuesday morning Mr. Hayden, for the committee, reported the liabilities of the firm at $170,000, and the assests $100,000. Another meeting will be held next Tuesday.

— The photographer of Osgood Heleotype Company was out here last Monday taking views for the book soon to be published by the Woburn Board of Trade. Several churches and other objects of beauty and interest were taken. He was accompained by Mr. William Miller, one of the committee on the publication of the work.

— Last Friday evening the John Cummings Hose Company, No. 3, indulged in a very enjoyable sit-down at the Company's house in Cummingsville, at which the members embraced the opportunity to present to their Foreman, Mr. John Breslin, a handsome reclining chair, which was accepted in appropriate remarks. The affair was a pleasant one.

— A preliminary meeting of the Sons of Maine was held in Fraternity Hall last Saturday evening, and arrangements made to take a census of all those residing in Woburn who first saw the light of day in the Old Pine Tree State. Mr. Garcelon, who has the matter in hand, informs us that he has already obtained over 200 names, and thinks the list will run up to 500.

— Messrs. W. V. Kellen, Marshall Tidd and John Maxwell, a committee chosen to report a plan of organization for a Railroad Association, will do so at a meeting to be held at 7.30 o'clock on next Monday evening at the rooms of the Board of Trade. This is done as we understand to make the organization of the Permanent Committee, which has been in existance a year or two, permanent.

— The present able and indefatigable Woburn reporter for the Boston Globe is giving much news in that sterling Democratic paper, and doing good work towards increasing its circulation here. Hardly anything worth reporting escapes the keen scent and argus-eyes of the "new broom", and it is not going an inch too far to say he is the most active and reliable reporter the Globe ever had in Woburn.

— Mr. W. S. Whitford, son of Dea. Hiram Whitford of this town, who has filled the office of Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue at Albany, Georgia, for several years, is one of the "rascals" whose neck will feel the guillotine of the new administration on the 30th of this month. Immediately after his official decapitation Mr. Whitford will, with his family, visit his old home here in Woburn, and perhaps permanently remain in this vicinity.

— We thought we'd seen taffy laid on pretty thick before, but the dose the town fathers of Woburn got from the local reporter of the Globe last Sunday beat anything we ever saw or heard of. It was daubed on thicker'n hasty pudding, and the reporter didn't stop to smooth it off any either. All he seemed to care about was to get it shovelled on. If the Board can stand the infliction they are made of tougher material than we had given them credit for.

— Peoples' popular prices are now the rage in the amusement world, and Hyatt Frost, Manager of the Van Amburgh Shows has fallen into line in answer to the demands of the times and the paying patrons. Charles Reiche & Brother's New Railroad Shows, American and Japanese Circus, Aquarium, Museum and Menagerie, will appear at Woburn, Thursday June 4, when the price of admission will be twenty-five cents. Mr. Frost's head is level.

— There are raids and raids on the liquor-sellers of Woburn. The police give the illicit dealers no rest for their souls. Our Chief can scent a rum barrel at long range and his aim is unerring. The poor beings are in a fair way of being hectored to death. On Monday the Chief with Officers Tidd and Simonds went for the dwellings of Michael Feeney and John McDevitt on Rag Rock and captured a quantity of ale and whiskey. They also made a second descent on Tenney and brought away three barrels of beer.

— The following gentlemen were recently elected officers of the Middlesex East District Medical Society: President, Dr. William F. Stevens of Stoneham; vice-president, Dr. S. W. Kelley of Woburn; secretary, Dr. Daniel March, Jr., of Winchester; treasurer, Dr. J. O. Dow of Reading; counsellors, Dr. Clark of Melrose, Dr. F. W. Graves of Woburn, Dr. S. W. Abbott of Wakefield, Dr. F. Winsor of Winchester, Dr. W. S. Brown of Stoneham, Dr. D. March, Jr. of Winchester, and Dr. Odlin of Melrose.

— Last Saturday evening a prize fight, according to Queen Annsbury's rules, occurred between two Woburn boys, Harry Lerock and James McHugh just across the Wilmington line, which was witnessed by less than a hundred sports from Boston, Woburn and other places. The fight was for $25 a side, and to settle some questions that had long been in dispute between the parties. McHugh knocked out Lerock in the second round and won the contest. Both "gentlemen" were taken home in close carriages.

— More expounding of the law in this week's Advertiser. This time it is all about trees that are liable to obstruct free passage to and fro on the streets. Text: Dr. Trull's shade trees. Dr. Trull planted those trees with his own hands, years ago, and is not to blame for hating to part with them. But the Advertiser, as usual, is lame in the application of its legal lore. Streets are laid out for foot and carriage travel, foot-passengers always having the right of way under the law. Streets are not made to haul buildings through, and parties have no right to haul them through the streets without first getting a permit. To do so without license from the proper authorities is to commit an illegal act. Does the astute editor of the Advertiser see the point?

— The time is drawing near when High school graduates will have to concentrate their intellects on the composition of essays for the great occasion, and do some tall thinking. To compose an essay is the task of all others that tries the High School graduate's soul, and the most of them would gladly escape it. The desire is generally shared by those compelled to listen to them. However, to furnish an essay for the graduating exercises is one of the things that has to be done, nolens volens, and the advice we offer our young friends is shut your eyes, hold your breath, and wade in.

— T. Starr King, some years ago one of the most eminent and eloquent clergymen of Boston, and afterwards of San Francisco where he died greatly lamented, preached his first sermon in Woburn in a building which occupied the present site of the Methodist Church. After that he was called to the Hollis street church, Boston, an aristocratic and highly cultured parish, where he preached with great acceptance for many years. For true eloquence Starr King had not a superior, probably, in this country. And yet just before he delivered his first sermon, here in Woburn, he was a clerk in a store in Charlestown.

— A very pleasant affair took place at the residence of Miss Kate McDonald on Canal street, the well-known musician, last Wednesday evening. A large number of the young lady's friends assembled in the parlors at an early hour, and after cordial greetings all round, they presented her with a valuable gold watch and chain and a well-filled purse. The neat presentation speech was made by Mr. Timothy Sheehan, which was handsomely responded to. There was fine music by Miss McDonald and the Woburn Male Quartette, after which refreshments were served and enjoyed. The occasion was an exceedingly pleasant one to all concerned.

— Both of the Woburn Posts, G. A. R., have been invited to attend divine services next Sunday at Dr. March's church, and will probably be present as organizations. On the 30th the soldiers' graves at Montvale will be decorated by a detachment of Post 33 in charge of Commander Hammond, and the Salem street cemetery will be visited and the graves decorated by both Posts. In the afternoon there will be a parade, formed in the following order:

Woburn brass band; Thomas H. Marrinan, leader; 20 pieces.
Woburn Mechanic Phalanx, Captain George M. Buchanan, about 50 men; Sons of Veterans, Captain James E. Cutler, about 20 young men.
Post 161, G. A. R., Senior Vice Milton Moore commanding.
Post 33, G. A. R., Loren J. Hammond, commander.

The services at Lyceum Hall will include an oration by comrade G. A. Churchill of Boston.

— The paper upon "Breaking Stones," delivered before the Woman's Club, May 15, was, as heretofore announced, from the pen and lips of Mrs. Stevens of Peabody, Mass. After a few refined and impressive remarks by way of prelude, the speaker entered upon the elucidation of the metaphorical caption of her theme, and gave a historic and social philosophic essay upon individuals and masses that have helped to make straight the highway of civilization by courageous and laborious rough-hewing. In the absence of the President from the chair, the pleasant duties of her position were discharged with dignity and ease by the first Vice-Presedent, Mrs. C. G. Johnson. The closing spring session of this successful organization will be held in the Congregational Parlor on the first Friday of June. Mrs. Kate Gannett Wells will present her interesting essay upon "Marriage."

— In another place we print the proceedings of the Selectmen's meeting held on Tuesday evening. They do not however tell the whole story. They fail to state that Mr. Lawrence Reade had a circus. Likewise, that it was a slim affair, and didn't pan out worth a cent for the showman. Not being a professional athlete or slugger—indeed, rather a poor piece of furniture in a fight anyhow—we refrain from repeating public opinion, to the effect that Mr. Reade is the self-elected champion of the rum interests of the town, preferring by all odds to preserve silence on that point, and save our head. It may be that everybody is in error about it and that Mr. Reade is not, as they all say he is, a defender of rum-sellers, both in private and public. But in the wordy altercation he had with some of his brother members of the Board last Tuesday evening he appeared to side with the ungodly. His shrewdly planned attack on Chief Nelson resulted in a complete fiasco. His charges against that officer, put in the shape of interrogation points, fell flatter than pancakes. At that point Mr. Reade's circus was a total failure, and the crowd were entitled to have their money back. But Mr. Eustice Cummings, by a few rasping words, set the manager of the show into a violent rage and for a while things were pretty lively in the rooms. If Mr. Cummings had had more regard for the feelings of Mr. Reade the audience would have had less fun. The nicest part of it was to see Mr. Reade try to get the Board to say by a formal vote that he hadn't insulted anybody during the evening. It was a very unparliamentary request to make, and the Board wouldn't entertain the motion. That didn't appease Mr. Reade's wrath any, or increase his gentle lovliness. And after that the Board adjourned.

— The regular mid-monthly meeting of the Board of Selectmen was held on last Tuesday at the rooms. All members present.——A common victualers license was granted to Anthony Doherty.——Application of W. E. Carter for license of rink referred to Police Committee.——Application of Moore & Morris for leave to surrender victualer's license received and granted.——Application of F. C. Taylor for pool and billiard license referred to Police Committee. Voted to recommend Charles L. O'Niel and Thomas P. Kelley to Secretary of State for peddlers license.——Communication of G. A. C. Peavy relative to the Whitney claim for water damages was referred to Committee on Claims, and Mr. Thomas H. Hill was referred to the Committee for this case.——John J. Mahoney and Thomas S. Casey were drawn as jurors for the June term of the Superior Court to be held at Cambridge.——Compensation to the keeper of the lockup was referred to Police Committee.——Edward F. Bryant, appointed an expert to find the discrepancies between the Treasurer's and Auditor's accounts, made his report which was adopted.——On motion of Mr. Hill it was voted to grant licenses to keep fireworks from June 30 to July 6, and to sell them from July 2, to July 4, inclusive.——Billiard and pool licenses were granted to Hugh Rafferty and Lawrence Martin.——The compensation of the Inspector of Milk was fixed at $100.——Mr. E. K. Willoughby was appointed Police Officer at Horn Pond.——Police Committee reported that no officer was needed at Montvale, and the application to appoint William McDonough was not granted.——Mr. Reade moved to have the Police Committee instructed to have a patrolmen put on from 4 to 7 o'clock, A. M. Referred to Police Committee.——Adjourned.

— The Garland Oil Stove does all the work of a range. All customers testify of its merits. Sold at Jenkins Hardware Store.

RINK NOTES: Carter's popular Academy on Montvale Avenue has been very well patronized this week, and some good sport on rollers has been enjoyed.——The polo game between the Woburns and Bijous of Portland, played on last Friday evening, was a very pretty affair, and won by the Bijous.——There was a fine party present on Saturday evening, when general skating only was in order.——Last Wednesday evening the Stonehams and Woburns were advertised to cross sticks.——This evening will be played a Union League game between the Woburns and Stonehams, which all ought to see.——Next Wednesday will be given the Old Folks costume party, which will be good.——From this date, until further notice, the Academy will be closed afternoons, except Saturdays and holidays.——Please read Mr. Carter's bill in this paper.

Statement of the Accounts

OF THE TREASURER AND AUDITORS OF THE TOWN OF WOBURN, FOR THE YEAR ENDING FEB. 28, 1885.

TO THE BOARD OF SELECTMEN:

In compliance with the following letter this report is respectfully submitted:

BOARD OF SELECTMEN,
176 Main Street,
WOBURN, Mass., April 17, 1885.

TO EDWARD F. BRYANT:

At a meeting of the Board of Selectmen on this date, you were appointed, as an expert, to examine the accounts of the Treasurer and Auditors, for the purpose of discovering where the discrepancy, as reported by the Auditors, exists, and report the result of your researches to this Board.

Very respectfully,
JOHN FERGUSON, Clerk.

REPORT.

The discrepancy as reported by the Auditors and explained by this report is as follows:

The records of the Auditors show amounts actually to the credit of different departments,	$9,461 18
Treasurer's cash balance which should represent the amounts to the credit of different departments,	8,461 18
Department funds misappropriated for payment of temporary loans,		$1,000 00
Appropriation, voted by the town for "Care of Clocks," and paid from miscellaneous account, but not credited to that account,	50 00
Amount of treasurer's cash balance to be paid on note of Cyrus Smith, which amount was charged off the records in February, 1884,	671 20
		721 20
Discrepancy as reported by the Auditors,		$278 80

After a thorough investigation the cash accounts of the Treasurer have proved to be entirely correct, as shown by the following pages.

EDWARD F. BRYANT.

REMARKS.

The above report, on which Mr. Bryant, the expert, has been engaged for more than a month, is accompanied with demonstrations and proofs in the shape of tables and columns of figures, which testify to his skill and accuracy as an accountant. To arrive at the published results it was necessary to wade through and study a mass of papers and records; to closely scrutinize the accounts of the departments under investigation; and to exercise the utmost care in searching all of them for the alleged errors. To an ordinary book-keeper the task, which Mr. Bryant has so correctly and admirably performed, would have proved a puzzle too intricate for him to unravel.

Mr. Bryant submitted his report at the meeting of the Board of Selectmen on Tuesday evening, by whom it was critically examined and unanimously approved. One thousand copies of the report are to be printed for general distribution, considerable interest and curiosity being felt by the public to get at the bottom of the discrepencies and errors in the books. Mr. Bryant has fairly earned the compensation which he will receive from the town for the excellent piece of expert work, and so well pleased are the Selectmen with it that they have employed him to open a new set of books for the Auditors' Department.

The Circus.

Van Amburgh, Reiche & Brother's circus gave two performances yesterday on Brown's lot on Wethersfield avenue to large audiences. It is a Simon-pure one-ring show of the old-fashioned style, and has a way of producing under its canvas just what it promises in its advertisements. The menagerie is a large one and offers a better zoological display than some of the big shows. Particularly good is the ring business with its equestrian feats, trapeze and horizontal bar business, tumbling and clown acts. The Japanese balancing was an attractive feature. Hartford Courant.

This sterling company will exhibit at Woburn, Thursday, June 4, when the price of admission will be but twenty-five cents.

A Walking Skeleton.

Mr. E. Springer, of Mechanicsburg, Pa., writes: "I was afflicted with lung fever and abscess on lungs, and reduced to a walking Skeleton. Got a free trial bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, which did me so much good that I bought a dollar bottle. After using three bottles, found myself once more a man, completely restored to health, with a hearty appetite, and a gain in flesh of 48 lbs." Call at Hill's Drug Store and get a free trial bottle of this certain cure for all Lung Diseases. Large bottles 50 cents and $1.00.

Law and Order League.

WOBURN, May 19, 1885.

EDITOR WOBURN JOURNAL:—

Please allow me to correct the notice in your last week's issue of our Secretary, in which, by a misunderstanding, he calls our association, "The Woburn Associates." We are the Law and Order League of Woburn—the same as heretofore. And here allow me to say to the public, through your reliable paper, that we are not a temperance organization, but simply an organization of citizens for the purpose of aiding, by our encouragement and sympathy, the town officials in carrying out the laws as enacted by the Legislature, and adopted by our citizens, whether the same shall be license, or no license,—or in regard to all other matters whatever that pertain to the good order of our town. We wish to persecute no one, but only ask that the law be carried out in all things, thereby securing good government for all.

In this we ask the co-operation of all good citizens of all denominations, whether temperance men or not. For this work we shall need the moral, as well as financial, aid of our fellow citizens. Believing that the present good condition of our town is due, in some small degree, to our efforts in the past, we shall with the more confidence ask aid in the future.

HOOD'S

SARSAPARILLA

Has "decided" claims upon the public. This is positively proven by the immense good it has done to those who have been cured of diseases from which they have suffered intensely for years, as verified by the published testimonials, every one of which is a positive fact.

CHELSEA, VT., Feb. 24, 1879.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & Co., Lowell, Mass.: The 6th day of last June I was taken sick with a swelling on my right foot, and with an awful pain. The swelling went all over me. My face was swelled so that I could with difficulty see out of my eyes, and I broke out over the whole surface of my body; my right foot up to my knee was one raw, itching mass, and my ankle and foot so lame and sore I could not step on it, and it would run so as to wet a bandage through in an hour. In this condition Mr. W. F. Hood (of the firm of A. R. Hood & Son, druggists, of this town), handed me a bottle of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, and told me to take it. I did so, and by the time I had taken one bottle I found that it was doing me good. I have since taken five bottles more. After I had taken three bottles my soreness began to leave me, and I have been growing better every day, so that to-day I can walk without going lame. I have no soreness in my ankle and it has healed all up, and does not run at all. I owe my recovery to your Sarsaparilla. I write this to let you know that I think it deserves the confidence of the public, especially those who are troubled with humors.

Yours most truly,
JOSIAH PITKIN.

P. S. Every person that saw me said that I never would get over my lameness without having a running sore on my ankle; but thank God I have. J. P.

No other Sarsaparilla has such a sharpening effect upon the appetite. No other preparation tones and strengthens the digestive organs like HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.

Price one dollar, or six bottles for five dollars. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

Garland Oil Stove

1885.

THE WORLD'S BEST.

This popular Oil Stove is used and recommended by Mrs. Lincoln at the Boston Cooking School. Among its superior features is its new and novel burner, superior to any applied to other stoves and used only on the Garland. It does away with the ratchet wheels for moving the wicks which has been such a nuisance in oil stoves, and affords an even, steady flame. It has two or four-hole boiler tops. Baking, boiling and frying can be done at once.

The Garland is the most popular, convenient and powerful baker in the market to-day. We have sold a great number the last two seasons and they have given decided satisfaction, selling themselves on their own merits. The best is the cheapest.

WINCHESTER.

The Chapin School has classes in sewing.

Interesting vesper services were held in the Congregational church last Sunday evening.

The State census here is being taken by Mr. George Cooke. It will take some time to finish the job.

Rev. C. R. Seymour's lecture on the "Cologne Cathedral" before the Fortnightly Club was very interesting.

Mr. Henry L. Richards lectured in Lyceum Hall last Sunday evening on "The Catholic View of the Bible."

Rev. J. Coit has commenced the erection of a fine house on the east side. Mr. E. C. Sullivan is doing the stonework.

Mr. L. R. Tucker, of the Suffolk Savings Bank, has rented a house in Rangeley, where he will reside in the future.

Capt. C. G. Thompson's lectures before the first class of the Grammar school are very entertaining and instructive.

Mr. Taylor is trying the experiment of making daily trips to the west side with his barge, and if it pays the line will be made permanent.

Rev. Joshua Coit, Secretary of the Home Missionary Society, preached in the Congregational Church last Sunday. He gave a resume of the work and condition of the Society.

The able correspondent of the Woburn Advertiser is exultant over the many and varied improvements going on in this town. And well he may be, for we are going ahead with vigor and rapidity.

BURLINGTON.

Mr. J. H. Walker is very ill with pneumonia.

The ladies of the Sewing Society held a pleasant meeting, at the residence of Mr. P. Rogan, Thursday afternoon.

We have seldom seen as fine a collection of pansies as we received from Mr. J. W. Hutchinson's greenhouse, this week. Mr. Hutchinson is selling, this spring, a very handsome lot of plants. He has sold some of them in Boston and has others at his greenhouse waiting for purchasers. Our florists, this spring, seem especially enterprising.

Mr. Charles H. Walker, has a beautiful display of plants in his new greenhouse. His collection of geraniums, pansies, carnations, and other bedding plants is varied and extensive. He has one fuchsia, which now has about three hundred blossoms and buds. Mr. Walker has very convenient arragements for heating and watering in his greenhouse. He celebrated Arbor Day by setting out a number of fine trees. He has now a good collection of flowers and plants, at his greenhouse, which he will be glad to show to his friends or sell to purchasers.

The Shoes

That are bought at Stetson's establishment corner of Hanover and Blackstone streets, Boston, can be depended on for real downright wear. Also, they can be purchased at prices which bring them within the reach of all. For instance, a lady can buy at this store a very nice Kid Button Boot for $2, while gentlemen can procure a high lace Congress or Button Boot at prices from $2 to $3 a pair that cannot fail to give satisfaction. The store also carries a full line of durable shoes for children. Stetson's old established stand, 158 Hanover, corner of Blackstone streets, Boston. Convenient to northern depots.

MONTVALE.

Rev. J. L. Marsh of Winchester will officiate at All Saints Chapel on Sunday, May 24, at 3 o'clock, p. m. Seats free.

NORTH WOBURN.

Mr. John R. Carter has rebuilt his steam sawmill that was burned several weeks since, and now has it in successfull operation at Derby, N. H. The boiler and engine were saved in a damaged condition from the fire, and are now as good as new. It is one of the best sawmills in operation, and has a large custom.

Several dwellings will be erected here this season. The spirit of improvement, arising from the certainity of near railroad facilities, has struck this village solid, and the result will be a great change for the better immediately. Mrs. Goodwin is building a large double house; Mr. Shields is putting up a residence on Poole street; a fine house will be soon begun by Samuel A. Thompson on West street, and Mrs. Duffy is changing a building into a good house. Others are contemplating enterprises of this kind, for which some are already making preparations.

What our people most desire is that North Woburn should become a place for nice, genteel residences, instead of additional manufactures. No part of Woburn offers more attractions to men of wealth and leisure to settle than our village, and as there are always more or less of these in the city seeking locations for pleasant country homes, it behooves our citizens to put forth extra efforts to secure a share of them.

The celebration of the close of the first year's existence of the North Woburn Village Union in the Chapel last Monday evening was an event that will not fade from the memories of the participants for many years, if ever. Though the weather was unfavorable for a large meeting the arrangements were none too extensive, for at least one hundred people were present, and every plate on the well-laden tables was appropriated. The supper was a bountiful and excellent one. The ladies of the Union evidently intended that all should be well and abundantly fed, and no feast was ever more throughly enjoyed. The musical and other exercises were very entertaining. The North Woburn Glee Club, consisting of Messrs. True, Kimball, Carter, Poole, Severns, Curtis, Perry, Bennett and Cummings, with Mr. Frank Bancroft of Reading at the organ, gave the assembly some splendid music, while the "Shurbert Serenade" and other pieces were finely rendered by Miss Pierce and Mr. Skinner. Miss Laconto gave an excellent piano solo, and Miss Nellie Linscott of Boston delighted the audience with "The Kerry Dance." Speeches were made by Mr. A. R. Linscott, the first President of the Union, Rev. Charles Anderson the present presiding officer, Mr. E. M. Munyan, Mr. Keyes, and others. All were to the point, and listened to with pleasure. In many ways the Union has been of great benefit to North Woburn. Improvements have been originated and carried through by the society of substantial and lasting value. Their good work, however, has only just been fairly inaugurated, and more will be done in the future. The celebration was a great and gratifying success in every way.

Let the Good Work Go On!

Public sentiment has been thoroughly aroused at last, in favor of the movement toward the erecting of Bartholdi's Statue, "Liberty Enlightening the World," in the harbor of New York. Americans now understand that those among them who subscribe to the completion of this grand work, will perform an act of patriotism, and at the same time one of international comity worthy of the enlightened ideas permeating this nineteenth century.

Some idea of the extent of the public sentiment is shown by the fact that the New York World has been able to report subscriptions of over $30,000 in a month's time, in sums averaging less than $1.00 each, the great bulk of these contributions being in dimes and quarters.

What a magnificent object it will be, towering almost into the clouds from New York's beautiful harbor! It will stand as a grand symbol of liberty before the eyes of every one coming from the oppressed countries beyond the ocean. At the gateway of no other nation could it stand with such appropriateness. Here it symbolizes the fullest achievement of human freedom and will forever stand to tell that story.

The Committee in charge of the erection of a pedestal for the reception of this great work have prepared a beautiful statuette, as a souvenir to send to each person who subscribes $1.00. Ought not the heart of every American to respond with pride when he has the opportunity of contributing toward the erection of such a monument?

It is one of the grandest undertakings of modern times and eminently fitting that it should be built from the hearts and pockets of our people.

The Committee does not believe the American people are indifferent to this great work, therefore calls upon them for their aid. Every person wishing to become a subscriber should send their address to Richard Butler, Secretary American Committee of the Statue of Liberty, No. 33 Mercer Street, New York, inclosing $1.00, and will receive in return a miniature reproduction of this great work.

While large subscriptions are always desirable it would be far more to the credit of this great nation if every man, woman, and child should own a block in the pedestal which will support the everlasting monument of "LIBERTY ENLIGHTENING THE WORLD."

Thousands Say So.

Meeting of the Board of Trade.

Last Tuesday evening the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Trade was held in their rooms in Bank Block. Although a hot night the attendance was large, and the proceedings interesting. At 8 o'clock President Skinner called to order, and directed the Secretary to read the minutes of all the meetings that have been held since the organization of the Board. These included the inception of the movement, the permanent organization, and the progress of the Board to date. Though the minutes covered but a few weeks of time, they showed an amount of business done highly creditable to it, and an earnest of good things to be accomplished in the future.

Many schemes for the advancement of Woburn's interest were informally discussed, and some reports of importance made. Mr. W. W. Hill reported progress of the committee on By-laws. Mr. N. J. Simonds reported on the Sun Electric Company, which was replete with encouragement. He said the Gay rink had been leased for a term of years, the upper floor of which would be occupied by the Company, and it is now being put in condition for business. An engine and boiler have been purchased, and work on the manufacture of lamps would begin in two or three weeks. The prospects of the Company are bright, and he believed the establishment would prove a great benefit to Woburn. Incidentally, Mr. Simonds informed the meeting that he is having encouraging success in disposing of electric lights from the plant in his factory which will soon be in operation, nearly all the business men on Main street having engaged to take it.

Mr. Benjamin Hinkley reported progress on the Godfrey Seamless Pocket Company, and gave a succinct and encouraging statement of what he believed to be the great value of the invention. His remarks were supplemented by explanations by Mr. Fred A. Flint as to the probable demand among the manufactures of clothing for the pocket. Mr. George Buchanan, a gentleman of large experience in mechanics, spoke highly of the pocket: explained lucidly the cost of production: estimated the profit on 150 looms, and threw a good deal of light on the subject. Each speaker expressed entire confidence in the success of the business.

The President suggested the advisability of selecting a committee of the Board to attend the meeting of the County Commissioners on the widening of Main street next Monday, in pursuance of which Messrs. E. E. Thompson, Col. W. T. Grammer and Joseph B. McDonald were chosen said committee. Mr. Thomas H. Hill, of the Board of Selectmen, addressed the meeting on the importance of such a committee. He also stated that it had been arranged to widen Main street from the Episcopal church to the Hudson school house without the intervention of the County Commissioners.

President Skinner thought the walls of the Board's rooms would look better if hung with appropriate pictures—manufacturing establishments, marine views, etc. and Mr. George Fowle thought the President's portrait on the wall would be a proper thing to have. Mr. Fowle's idea was a good one, and it would be well to add the portraits of subsequent Presidents to the list. Col. Grammer made some remarks, and others spoke.

The meeting was one of the best that has been held by the Board. Every member is enthusiastic, and filled with faith in the future prosperity of Woburn.

WILBOR'S COMPOUND OF PURE COD LIVER OIL AND LIME.

Wilbor's Compound of Pure Cod-Liver OIL AND LIME. The advantage of compound over the plain Oil is, that the nauseating taste of the Oil is entirely removed, and the whole rendered entirely palatable. The offensive taste of the Oil has long acted as a great objection to its use; but in this form the trouble is entirely obviated. A host of certificates might be given here to testify to the excellence and success of "Wilbor's Cod-Liver Oil and Lime;" but the fact that it is regularly prescribed by the medical faculty is sufficient. A PERSIAN SONG.

BY T. B. ALDRICH.

Ah, sad are they who know not love,
But far from passion's tears and smiles
Drift down a moonless sea, beyond
The silvery coast of fairy isles.

And sader they whose longing lips
Kiss empty air and never touch
The dear, warm mouth of those they love;
Waiting, wasting, suffering much.

Cut clear as amber, fine as musk,
Is life to those who, pilgrim-wise,
Move hand in hand from dawn to dusk—
Each morning nearer Paradise.

Oh, not for them shall angels pray,
They stand in everlasting light;
They walk in Allah's smiles by day
And nestle in his heart by night.

A Country Village.

Benton is neither a peculiar nor a pretentious village. New England is dotted all over with its counterparts, differing only in minor characteristics; but a pleasenter or more attractive one it would not be an easy task to find anywhere. It sits in the laps of gently sloping hills on one side, which are green and beautiful in summer, but wind-swept and cheerless when the earth is bound in the icy fetters of winter. In smiling June the bloom of many orchards delights the eye and loads the soft air with its delicious fragrance. Cornfields and verdant meadows stretch to the south on each side of the winding road that leads to the next village, half a dozen miles away, and on the east groves of tall, stately pines cast their morning shadows over the roofs and porches of the neat cottages clustered near the banks of a small, clear stream that glides leisurely through the glades and turns the wheels of a mill or two on its way to the sea. To the west the peaks of a twin eminence, that still retains its ancient and unmelodious name, rise boldly above the intervening hills and forests; while miles in an opposite direction is seen the tree-capped mountain first sighted by mariners as they approach the northern New England coast from voyages to foreign climes.

Benton is unconventional in all things. In external appearance, every-day affairs, and social life, it is a typical New England village. Not much order was observed in laying out its streets, and they are all the pleasanter for it; it has its white church with green blinds, its school-house, its postoffice, and store. A bridge spans the stream above the mill, close to the far end of which the smith has planted his forge the better to accommodate the traveller's horse that has cast a shoe, or the farmer's sun-shrunken wagon wheel that lost its tire descending the pebbly hill on the other side. There are glens and grassy knolls on the edge of the village where happy children play and romp in the long summer vacation; and where wide-reaching, deep-foliaged trees invite the laborer and the lazy to after-dinner repose in their grateful shade.

There is more life in Benton in summer than during the long, cold months of winter, for it is an exceedingly healthy place for "city cousins," of which almost every household has one or more representatives during the melting months. Its bracing atmosphere, delightful drives, easy distance from the sea, and generous hospitality of the people, attract numerous visitors from the hot and stifled air of the city, who never grow weary of sounding the praises of Benton, and are certain to come again next year.

It is in summer too that the kind and pleasant-faced maiden lady who presides over the affairs of the village post-office finds her position no sinecure. The bit of knitting grows more slowly under her deft fingers, for the interruptions are frequent and the mail-bags that were wont to be lean and quickly disposed of are now plethoric, and exacting on her time and attentions. But she is courteous to all comers, and never minds the knitting, which she very well knows there will be time enough to finish after the summer and "city cousins" are gone.

But to witness busy life in Benton one must go often and stay long at the store. It is not a metropolitan "palace of trade," but a "hive of industry" during the summer months, and full of interest to the summer lounger. The contents of the store are as varied as the wants and demands of the people who patronize it, and to these there is practically no limit. Dry goods, groceries, household wares, farming implements, notions and knick-knacks fill the rooms from cellar to attic, to exchange for which and cash the industrious wives from neighboring farms on the hillsides and lowlands bring in their "June butter" and freshly laid eggs, the farmers their spring lambs ready dressed for the spider, and the youth their berries. Long ere a majority of the less industrious villagers are astir in the morning the women from the farms, fresh and bright as the daisies they left behind in the meadows, congregate at the store with their buckets of clover-scented butter carefully protected from the sun by cool plantain leaves or white, dainty napkins, and the fresh eggs nicely packed in baskets of bran, where they are met by the gracious proprietor and attentive aids, and trade begins. By the time the village matron has broken her fast the farmer's wife has sold her butter and eggs, made her purchases, mounted the wagon and turned her face towards home, where work in the dairy and kitchen is waiting for her, and the haymakers in the meadow are calling for their mid-forenoon lunch.

If there is one thing that Benton is more famous for than any other, it is huckleberries. In their season little else than gathering and marketing them is attended to. To call the store then "a mart of trade" would be no misnomer, for it is full of life, bustle and huckleberries all day long and all through the week. Everywhere the fruit and its mark are seen, and the tables of the village dames groan under the weight of it. From early morn to dewy eve along the roads from the village to the native heath of the luscious berry processions of men, women and children, on foot and in carriages, bearing buckets, baskets and pails, are to be seen winding their way towards a common centre, where, when reached, the loads are quickly exchanged for hard cash, and the industrious pickers return for more. The huckleberry season is thus one of great activity in Benton, and it is anticipated with lively interest by many people.

All this, however, is changed with the close of the brief, but pleasant summer time. Now comes the cold autumnal storms, the "sere and yellow leaf;" the late green fields grow brown and bare; the foliage withers on the branch and falls fluttering to the damp ground and ultimate decay. At evening the east winds sough drearily through the pines on the village outskirts; the skies are leaden, the clouds heavy, and all nature falls into a sombre, uncheerful mood. Then follows winter.

But winter is not a season of hibernating in Benton. With many it is an unsettled question whether or not its enjoyments do not excel those of summer. Our people, especially the women, are prolific in schemes for social pleasure, intellectual improvement, and practical benevolence, and although we are in a measure cut off, at times, from free intercourse with the outside world by deep snows and heavy roads, our resources for enjoyment are such as to give us no regret at the isolation. True, the donation party, that mortal terror to the good dominie and his faithful spouse, has gone out of fashion, thanks to more light and a livelier exercise of the Christian graces, but the Church festival with its lonely and much abused oyster, the Shakespeare Club, Dorcas Society, the "circle," the evening party, and other means of pleasure and grace, are left, and they are fully improved.

The singing-school too is a standard institution in Benton. Sometimes a "Professor" from the city is engaged to come down and teach it, but more often a gentleman who enjoys only a local musical fame but great capacity for chest notes makes semi-weekly trips to the Benton school-house from a village on the "lower road," and for a modest nightly stipend teaches the rudiments of fa, sol, la, to the beginner, running high up in the science, even to thorough bass, for "advanced" pupils. The singing-school is patronized by all classes. Matrons of mature years, as well as the small ones in pinafores: the town dignitaries and store-keeper, all attend, by whom it is perhaps safe to say more pleasure is enjoyed on singing-school nights than any other in the week. The school always closes its term with a "grand concert," with "talent from abroad," is held in the meeting-house, and attended by people from far and near. Of course, the Church choir is a very capable one: it could not be otherwise with such advantages for instruction in the art of music.

In these, and many other, pleasant ways is the long, inclement winter spent in Benton; and so, no matter what the season, our community manage to get as much comfort and pleasure out of life, all the year round, as do denizens of the metropolis and great towns.

Lost.

Some months ago, the body of a young man was found in the river Mersey. In his pocket was a paper, which, though wet, could be read. It contained these word: "A wasted life. Do not ask anything about me; drink was the cause. Let me die; let me rot."

There was nothing to indicate the young man's name, nor could any clew to his identity be discovered. The simple fact of the discovery of the body and of the manuscript, was published in the newspapers indifferent parts of England. In less than a week, the coroner of Liverpool received over two hundred letters from fathers and mothers all over the kingdom, asking for a description of the young man.

What did this indicate? That in over two hundred English homes there was mourning over more than two hundred sons, who had left the parental roof and had gone, none could tell whither. It means that these sorrowing parents had seen, that in their wayward sons, which led them to surmise that they might meet an untimely end.

There are lost ones in our own country as well as in England. Speak to that young man who comes to your neighborhood, a stranger, away from the restraints of home, exposed to allurement and temptation; he may be in danger, a word from you may save him. You may bring him within the holy influences of a godly life, and perhaps snatch a brand from the burning.

Speak to him!—Sunday School Journal.

Penny Postage.

A Washington correspondent writes: "A proposition will be introduced into Congress next winter to established a penny letter postage. There will be the same objections made to it that have been made to every proposed reduction in the rate of carrying letters. Every reduction thus far has resulted in an increased revenue to the department. It is believed that penny postage can be adopted now without any loss. The bulk of the mail carried by the United States runs over short distances. The mail for the far West is comparatively a small feature of the carrying business of the department. Some of the people who are advocating penny postage are also agitating projects for a new railroad for the West. This railroad they would construct upon a straight line from St. Louis to the East, seeking as level a run as possible. These gentlemen believe that a straight track road running from St. Louis and Chicago, built entirely for through trade, without any regard for the local traffic, could be made to pay. They would have this road devoted entirely to the carrying of freight. They claim that all of the other great through roads are burdened down with the debts of watered stock and the load of non-paying branches."

A Stringy Story.

Several years ago, among the industries of the New England towns, was that of manufacturing shoe strings. They were made by a machine which was operated by a man who turned a large wheel, while another person fed in the leather of which the strings were made. Occasionally some of the boys in the vicinity around would relieve the man at the wheel, and at such times he fed the machine. On one of these occasions, while the boys were making the wheel move at a rapid rate, John was feeding, when by some accident his fingers were caught in the jaws of the machine, and before it could be stopped he was drawn in and his body cut into shoe strings. The story goes that a relative of the unfortunate gathered up the strings and found that there were enough for nineteen 60 pair cases of shoes, from the sale of which more money was realized than he had earned during his whole life.—Haverhill Bulletin.

LITERARY NOTICES.

BABYLAND, Boston, published by D. Lothrop & Co., is a gem of a magazine for the very smallest folks. Each monthly number is profusely illustrated with the cunningest of pictures, and the stories and poetry are made expressly to please little ears. The May number is as fresh and bright as daisies and buttercups.

The numbers of THE LIVING AGE for May 9th and 16th contains, Samuel Johnson and his Age, The Sun's Corona, Since 1880, by Mr. Goschen, and Gordon at Gravesend, Shakespear's Portraiture of women, The German Abroad, 1853 and 1885, Archaeological Frauds in Palestine, and An Appeal to Men of Leisure, Musings without Method, and Reminiscences of Sir Herbert Stewart, Irish Loyalty, and Talmudic Proverbs, The Most Powerful Minute Particles on Light, and Colors of Arctic Animals, At a Eastern Dinner Party, with instalments of "A House Divided Against Itself," and "Fortune's Wheel," and poetry. For Fifty-two numbers of sixty-four large pages each (or more than 3,300 pages a year) the subscription price ($8) is low; while for $10.50 the publishers offer to send any one of the American $4.00 monthlies or weeklies with THE LIVING AGE for a year, both postpaid. Littell & Co., Boston, are the publishers.

PETERSON'S MAGAZINE for June comes to us, a paragon of beauty, ahead of all others. The principal steel-engraving alone is almost worth the subscription-price. A charming story, by Frank Lee Benedict, illustrates this pretty picture. The colored steel fashion-plate is also unusually brilliant, even for PETERSON. Most of the other illustrations—some fifty in number—are devoted to the fashions, to patterns in embroidery, etc. The Story of Louisiana Pine-Lands—one of rare merit—is finished in this number. But all the stories and novelets in PETERSON, as is well known, are exceptionally good. Considering the low price of this magazine, and its very great merit, we wonder it has not an even larger circulation: every family ought to take it. The terms are but two dollars a year, with great deductions to clubs, and costly premiums to those getting up clubs. Specimens are sent gratis, if written for, to persons wishing to get up clubs. Address CHARLES J. PETERSON, 306 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Marion Harland describes a few good and wholesome "nursery desserts" in BABYHOOD for May, for mothers who are judicious enough to give their littlest ones such instead of rich cakes and puddings. Wm. P. Gerhard, C. E., contributes to the same number a practical talk on "Country Houses and their Surroundings," exposing the false sense of security in which many families indulge merely because they "do not live in the city"; were some of his suggestions heeded disease would make fewer raids in the nursery. Besides various other important topics which are treated in this issue, the readers of the magazine appear to vie with its editors in furnishing useful hints. Among the subjects dealt with in their letters and queries are Nicknames A Special Room for the Baby The Training of Mothers Home-made Baby-tenders Crying and Sedatives Imaginary Fear Jumping in Sleep Feeding on a Journey Toeing-in The Shirt of Nessus Oatmeal-Gruel Early Impressions etc. etc. [$1.50 a year. New York.]

The North American Review concludes its seventieth year with its June number. It never had so large a circulation, nor greater influence, nor a more brilliant staff of contributors. This number discusses seven topics of vital public interest by no less than fourteen eminent writers, not including the short contributions in Comments. "Shall Silver be Demonetized? is answered, pro and con, by three distinguished economists, Sumner, Laughlin and Walker, representing Yale and Harvard Colleges, and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The Tardiness of Justice is discussed by Judge W. L. Learned, and Prohibition in Politics by Gail Hamilton; The Swearing Habit by E. P. Whipple, and French Spoliation Claims by Edward Everett. The policy of the Roman Catholic hierarchy toward our Public Schools is assailed in a learned essay by a new polemic, Mr. M. C. O'Byrne, of North Carolina, and defended by Bishop Keane, of Virginia, with equal erudition. It is a most interesting double presentation of an impending issue. How Shall Women Dress? is answered by Charles Dudley Warner, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, Dr. W. A. Hammond, Dr. Kate J. Jackson, and Mrs. E. M. King, the English leader of the dress reform movement.

Mr. Joseph Pennell, the eminent etcher, contributes the leading article to the June issue of OUTING. It is entitled, With the Veloce Club to Ostia, and is illustrated by a series of striking drawings by the author. Two other illustrated articles are devoted to cycling topics. The fiction of the number includes the three serial stories by Julian Hawthorne, E. C. Gardner, and Gottfried Keller, respectively. Mr. George S. Watson, a successful marine artist of Boston, contributes a bright sketch of student life in Germany, entitled A Yankee Scow on German Rivers, with illustrations drawn by himself. Doc Clayborne's Last Shot is accompanied by a strong full-page engraving. Yachting men will find, in the article entitled The Winning and Keeping of the America Cup, a thoroughly accurate record of the race which was sailed when the cup was won, and those which have been sailed since to secure its retention on this side of the water. Mr. Henry A. Clapp furnishes Edwin Booth in Some non-Shakesperian Parts, which will meet with a ready welcome on the part of all friends of the great actor. Another whist paper is given; it is entitled The Three Games of Whist. A charming natural-history paper on Bird Nesting is contributed by Horace Lunt. R. A. Metcalf furnishes Some Points on Tennis, Miss Mina C. Smith under the title Women as Cyclers, gives a careful review of the progress which tricycling has thus far made among the women of this country. The poetry of the number is contributed by Dora Read Goodale and Clinton Scollard; and the editorial departments are strong, vigorous, and entertaining. The July issue of OUTING will contain an elaborate paper by J. R. W. Hitchcock, reviewing the famous boat-races between Yale and Harvard since their inception in 1882, and giving, with appropriate illustrations, a complete history of the improvements in boats, training, and rowing, up to the present time. Price, $3.00 per year. 25 cents per copy. Address, OUTING, Boston, Mass.

A Chinese Cinderella.

Three natives of China arrived at the Union Depot, Pittsburg, Pa., the other day, bound direct from China to Washington, and from their elegant costumes and their luxurious mode of travelling evidently belonged to the nobility. One of them, a lady, was attired in a native rich black silk costume and wore a pair of large ear-rings of half-moon shape, studded with pearls' Her feet were probably the smallest of any grown person who ever passed through the city.

They were but three inches long, and were encased in a dainty pair of white satin slippers, embroidered with gold lace.

So small were her feet that she could scarcely walk into the restaurant. Once she almost fell, but was caught by her companion. The little lady wore no covering over her head and had her queue pinned in a nice roll. She had a rather pretty face with an artistic look. The two took breakfast at the Union Station restaurant, paid for it in gold, and departed on the train for Washington.—N. Y. Morning Journal.

The Door Shut on a Senator.

The Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Sun writes: "A few nights since an amusing incident occurred in which an eminent Senator was the sufferer. In response to an invitation to an entertainment, which included only the most distinguished, he appeared at the door of the mansion of his host and pulled the bell. The door was promptly opened by the sable attendant, who was radiant in full evening dress and immaculate shirt front. The Senator, although a brilliant wit and conversationalist, therefore a great favorite in society, is one of those eccentric public men who make a point of going about in the evenings in their every day clothes, and with him the attire is quite ordinary at that. He was about to enter when the warder of the fortress, who had taken him in from head to foot with one quick glance, barred his way, and in a very contemptuous tone, said: 'Mr. ——is engaged dis ebending, and can't see nobody, sah.' Anxious to join the revelry, the sounds of which came from within, the Senator undertook to explain, but the waiter declined to listen, and repeated that Mr.——was not at home to 'miscuous callers,' closed the door with a vigorous push. The waiter deemed the incident of so little consequence that he said nothing about it, and the story only came out by the host meeting the Senator a day or two afterward and taking him to task for his discourtesy in not coming after accepting the invitation."

"Can't Have Her."

"Never marry but for love," said William Penn, "but see that thou lovest what is lovely." Jonathan Edwards, the great New England theologian, so heartily endorsed Penn's sentiment that he refused the hand of his daughter to a young man who wished to marry her, because she was not "lovely." The youth called upon Edwards at Stockbridge, where he was preaching to the Indians and writing his famous treatise on the "Will," and asked to be allowed to marry his daughter.

"You can't have her said the preacher.

"But I love her."

"No matter; you can't have her."

"But she loves me, too."

"I say you can't have her."

"But I am well off and can support her."

"You can't have her, I tell you."

"Why not, Mr. Edwards? What have you against me?"

"Nothing."

"Why, then, can't I have Emily?"

"Because I think you are a pretty decent sort of a young man: too good for her."

"What? Mr. Edwards, what in the world do you mean?',

'She's got a wicked temper, and you wouldn't be happy with her.'

"But I thought she was a Christian."

"So she is young man; so she is.

"But before you have lived as long as I have, you'll find out that there are some people in this world that the grace of God may get along with, but you can't."

Beware of May Flirtations.

"I've learned one lesson about this first of May moving business," remarked a passenger on a Chicago suburban train, "and that is to suspend flirting on the cars for a month or two after May sets in." "Why?" You wouldn't ask why if you had heard the blowing up I got at home a few nights ago. You see, I sometimes flirt a little quietly and innocently, you know, on the trains. It doesn't harm anybody. Made the acquaintance of a nice little woman the other day, and said some silly things to her. I heard of it at home the same evening." "How?" "Why, that nice little woman was one of our new neighbors. I didn't know her, nor she didn't know me. After she got home that afternoon she and my wife got acquainted over the back yard fence. Of course, woman-like, she boasted of the conquest she had made on the cars, and described the man. Whenever I flirt after this it will be where I know all the new neighbors—you can wager the last dollar on that."

FLOWER MEDICINE COM'Y,

HE FELL IN THE STREETS
KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY
Cures a Terrible Case of Gravel When Other Help Failed.

What is Gravel? what causes it, and who are most liable to it? It is frequently attended with acute pain, and unless relief can be found, produces inflamation and death. Both sexes and all ages are liable to it, although men who have reached or passed middle age are its most common victims. Nothing is more urgently needed than a reliable medicine for Gravel, as the disease seems on the increase, and we are glad to say that such a specific is now before the public in the form of DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, of Rondout, N. Y. We put in evidence the following letter, selected from many similar communications:

PITTSFIELD, Mass., March, 1884.

Dr. David Kennedy.

DEAR SIR:—You have a right to know, and I desire the public to know my experience with Gravel and my remarkable recovery through the use of your "FAVORITE REMEDY." I am a carpenter living in this place, and there are plenty of witnesses to the truth of what I say. My first comparatively slight attack of Gravel was in the year 1878. It passed away, and I had little more trouble until last July, 1883. One day when at work in my shop I was suddenly seized with a keen and terrible pain in my left side. I consulted two physicians at once. One said: "I can do nothing for you. Your case is incurable!" I was frightened and went to the second, who said little, but gave me a prescription. It did no good.

Then began a series of experiences the agony and horror of which words cannot depict. Think of it! I was sometimes taken in the street, and would fall, writhing with agony, upon the sidewalk. It was death in life. Thank Heaven, I then heard of "KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY," through Mr. P. P. Cooley. I had not used half a bottle when I passed three stones in succession, one of which was nearly one-half an inch long. I persevered with the medicine, the system gradually abated, and I have had no more trouble since. I am well, thanks to you and "FAVORITE REMEDY." Yours most gratefully, JAMES D. KENNEDY.

What "FAVORITE REMEDY" did in this case it has done in many others.

MALARIA.

As an anti-malarial medicine
DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S

has won golden opinions. No traveler should consider his outfit complete unless it includes a bottle of this medicine. If you are exposed to frequent changes of climate, food and water, Favorite Remedy should always be within your reach. It expels malarial poisons, and is the best preventative of chills and malarial fever in the world. It is especially offered as a trustworthy specific for the cure of Kidney and Liver complaints, Constipation and all disorders arising from an impure state of the blood. To women who suffer from any of the ills peculiar to their sex Favorite Remedy is constantly proving itself an unfailing friend—a real blessing. Address the proprietor, Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. PARTING LOVERS.

Winding upward rose a slender vine tree,
Winding upward round the fort of Buda.
Ah, no vine tree was it winding upward,
But a loving maiden round her lover!
Early had the twain begun their loving,
Loving ever since their days of childhood,
Now they have to say farewell forever.

To the maiden thus the stripling murmured:
"Three broad rivers, maiden, run before thee;
Nigh the third a garden green is growing;
In the garden blooms a tree of roses;
From that rose tree pluck a rose, O maiden,
Lay it near thy heart, within thy bosom:
Faster than the rose leaves fade within it.
Faster fades my heart for thee, beloved!"

To the stripling thus the maiden answered:
"Three high mountains, youth, arise before thee;
From the third there flows a quiet fountain:
Nigh the fountain lies a block of marble;
On the marble stands a silver chalice;
In the silver chalice lies a snowflake.
Bear away the snowflake from the beaker,
Lay it near thy heart, upon thy bosom;
Faster than the flake of snow dissolveth,
Faster melts my heart for thee, beloved!"

REUBEN.

It was a legacy from the father who had died before Reuben was ten years old and left him to the care of Uncle Josiah, the brother of Reuben's long dead mother. The strongest memory Reuben retained of his father was a mind picture of a white-haired man sitting up in bed with the beloved violin in his hands, filling the poor attic-room with sweet sounds. He was partially paralyzed even then, and later, when his fingers became helpless, his heart broke and he died. Then Uncle Josiah came from the country to the great city, and took the lad home. At the bottom of the hair trunk containing all Reuben's possessions, were safely stored the violin and case, with a score of music the dead musician had left his boy.

On the farm in Jersey Reuben found a rough kindly welcome. Aunt Polly cried a little over the orphan; Sue and Jennie, kindly maidens, kissed and caressed him, and Daisy, whose blue eyes were like twin violets, stole shyly up to the dark-haired lad and slipped a slice of cake into his hands. It was a busy hive, the old farmhouse, where no drones found place.

Uncle Josiah disapproved altogether of the violin. Never had he heard of a fiddler plowing a field or raising stock. Never had he seen any practical good come from scraping a catgut, and more than once instant destruction was threatened to Reuben's one pleasure. He grew afraid to raise the sweet sounds he loved, inside the farmhouse, and would steal away to practice the lesson his father had taught him, by the brook side, in the whispering woods or the shady lanes.

Nobody loved his violin but Daisy. Daisy would softly touch the string, and listen with parted lips and shifting color when Reuben woke the spirits of music with his bow. Sue and Jennie did not object to a good, lively dance tune; but only Daisy would follow Reuben into the world where dreams floated to the sweet melodies, and the bow and strings talked in music's own language. Daisy alone knew of the lonely walks with the dear companion; and Daisy's lips would quiver and her blue eyes fill, when the boy whispered in her ear of his heart hunger.

Years passed away and the boy became a man.

"Scarcely worth his salt," Uncle Josiah pronounced him, and yet loved him well, for his gentle obedience, his willingness to perform any task, however distasteful.

"A dreamy gawk, in everybody's way," Sue and Jennie said, but saved the choicest bit of the dainty country fare for Reuben.

"A poor weakly body," Aunt Polly said, and her touch was soft on Reuben's hair, while she sighed gently, convinced that the pale thin cheeks would never grow round or rosy, but likely rest under the daisies, she thought pityingly.

Only Daisy really understood the sensitive nature, the tender heart, the starving, longing intellect. Only Daisy grieved when the long delicate hands blistered and bled over rough work, and would never harden. Only Daisy, as maidenhood came, shrined Reuben in her heart of hearts, and knew no other could ever take his place.

Only Daisy filled Reuben's heart! Of all the rough life around him, there was only one gentle influence to keep his heart from breaking. The fair, blue-eyed girl, with hair like floss silk, alone understood him when he talked of the books he borrowed from the minister, and eagerly perused. Daisy alone kept him from the utter despair of heart loneliness.

So these young hearts, in eleven long years, learned the story of mutual truth mutual dependence, sympathy, tenderness and devotion, which we call love.

On the day when Reuben was twenty-one he told Uncle Josiah he loved Daisy, and Uncle Josiah sadly shook his head.

"You'll never be able to keep a wife Reuben," he said. "Never! I love Daisy too well to trust her to you. Why, look at it, lad; you've never earned a full day's wages since you came to the farm. If you'd give up your foolish fiddling now you might make something of yourself, but as long as your heart is is that sawing and scraping you'll be good for naught else. It's my advice to you to smash the fiddle over the first rock, and then I'll talk to you about Daisy.

Break his violin! Destroy his dearest friend, his sole comfort! But for Daisy? What would he not do for Daisy?

Perhaps Uncle Josiah was right. Perhaps if he had no outlet for the dreams that filled his soul, they would cease to haunt him, and he would conquer the mazy routine of farm drudgery that was such a heart-breaking problem to him. Perhaps, when all the phantoms that broke into reality upon his violin were driven away, he would be the practical farmer to whom Uncle Josiah would give Daisy.

Musing thus, very sorrowfully, Reuben took the violin from its case and went to the woods, to an opening the country folks called the fairy ring. Here he sat upon a huge stone and played his farewell, a dirge of hope. Great tears fell over his pale cheeks as the weird, melancholly strain echoed through the space around him. Then he wrapped the violin once, twice in his arms, kissed it tenderly and lifted it high in the air to smash it on the rock. But his heart failed him. His arm dropped nerveless at his side, and he stood motionless, looking at his father's legacy.

Suddenly there stepped into the opening an elderly man, gray-haired and dark-eyed, and dressed in city-cut attire.

"So you would smash your violin?" he said "You had better sell it, or, better still, play on it. Was it you I heard playing as I came through the woods?"

"Yes. I was bidding my violin farewell."

"H'm! Play again for me."

Gladly Reuben lifted his violin and drew the bow across it.

"I will play you the Carnival of the Birds," he said; and there arose upon the air such a twittering chorus, here a saucy trill, there a busy chirp, then a roulade, till the very air seemed alive with songsters, while under all a sweet melody throbbed and melted into softest strains.

"This is the 'Brook's Hymn,'" Reuben said, and the rippling stream was mocked and echoed in faint, fantastic music.

"Who wrote these?" the stranger asked.

"They were never written. They came from my heart," was the quiet reply. "I will play you some written music."

And again the violin obeyed the bow as the works Reuben had studied from his father's music rose upon the summer air.

"And you were about to break your violin?" the stranger said.

"Yes; for I can never be a farmer while my brain is full of music," was the sad reply.

"Ah! You want to be a farmer, then? Would you not rather be a musician?" Reuben's eyes glistened. Long he and the stranger talked, and the sun was setting when he turned his face homeward.

"Uncle Josiah," he said, when all the chores were done and the farmer rested on the moonlit porch, "if in a year I can bring you proof that I can support Daisy, will you give her to me?"

"I will," was the hearty reply. "Have you broken your fiddle, Reuben?"

"No, I am going to leave you to-morrow. I have been offered work in the city."

"Work in the city! Well, lad, it may be you are too peaked for farm work and will find it easier there. But remember, if you fail, there's always a home for you here Reuben."

Reuben grasped the hand stretched out to him in his long, slender fingers and his sobbing "God bless you, sir," came from his very heart.

Not even to Daisy did he tell his new hopes, but bade her be faithful and whether he succeeded or failed he would return at the end of the year.

When he took his place in the stage-coach for the railway station his new friend, met in the fairy ring, was by his side.

Little Daisy kept her heart true. Every market day when the farmer came from town with his great wagon empty, he took from his pocket a letter from Reuben for Daisy, and every one was hopeful. His work was pleasant and was paying him well. Some of the letters were dated New York, some Boston, some Philadelphia; and when winter came Reuben wrote from all the great cities, even New Orleans, and Daisy's heart throbbed high with loving delight to feel sure his love was true amid the gay scenes he described, the new friends he met.

Winter sped away, spring blossoms bloomed and fell and the end of the year was drawing near. A letter came to Uncle Josiah:—

"Will you bring Daisy to New York," Reuben wrote, "and judge for yourself of my prospects?"

And Uncle Josiah, after long consultation with Aunt Polly, concluded to go. Daisy had a new dress of soft white muslin made and bought a dainty straw hat in the village. Then Uncle Josiah wrote to Reuben by what train to expect him and the journey commenced.

Reuben was not at the depot, but in his place was a courteous gentleman, who explained to Uncle Josiah that his nephew was detained by business, took the travellers to a hotel where their rooms were engaged and waited while they had supper. Then telling them he would take them to Reuben, he put into a carriage and drove rapidly to a white building' whose wide hall was brilliantly illuminated. Here well-dressed men and ladies in full evening toilets were entering in crowds.

Reuben's friend led Uncle Josiah and Daisy to a seat in the brilliant hall near the platform, and told them Reuben would come soon.

In Daisy's hand he put a programme and she wonderingly read of the musical treat in store for her, only vaguely comprehending it all. On every side the buzz of conversation bore the name of the great L——, the famous violinist, whose Cremona seemed gifted with speech under the touch of his inspired fingers.

It was like a dream. A white-robed lady came upon the platform and sang, a gentleman played a solo upon the piano. Then there was a great noise of people clapping their hands and stamping their feet, fairly bewildering poor country-bred Daisy.

A great hush, and softly, familiar as a mother's voice, there fell upon Daisy's ear the notes of a violin, bearing out upon the air the melody of Reuben's "Carnival of the Birds."

She looked up then and met the soft, dark eyes of her lover watching her face as he drew his bow across the strings. Not a sound but the music of the wondrous violin broke the stillness of the vast room, where one man's genius kept the crowd spellbound.

It was over, and the great violinist bowed and was gone. Again the deafening, tumultuous applause, and Reuben was back again, playing an air unfamiliar to Daisy, but seeming to answer all the deep joy of her soul.

Twice Reuben played, recalled each time, and then the concert was over, and their escort led Uncle Josiah back to the carriage, Daisy clinging fast to his arm. At the door of their private parlor the new friend bade them good-night and opening the door they stood face to face with Reuben. Not the pale, sad boy of a year ago, but a man, self-reliant, glad and noble, one who had found his life-work and was doing it well.

Uncle Josiah found the strap of his glove most unmanageable while Reuben clasped Daisy in his arms, and low, tender words fell from the lips of both.

No doubt I was an old fool, Reuben," he said; "but I'm not too old to learn."

And Reuben, over the dainty supper that was presently served, told them how his violin had won him fame and gold—more than Uncle Josiah imagined a man could earn in ten years.

"I have an offer to go abroad Uncle," Reuben said, "and if I accept it I must sail next month. May I take Daisy?"

"Yes, lad. You've kept your promise —I'll keep mine."

"You are my guests this week, and then I am free till we sail, so we may go home for the wedding," Reuben said.

And Uncle Josiah, with inward misgivings about the boy, yielded to Daisy's pleading face and consented to the argument.

A week of sight-seeing, shopping, intense happiness, with three of the concerts where Daisy's heart was divided between love and pride, then away to the farm.

There was a quiet wedding, and Aunt Polly wept over the long separation to come, but the little bride had no misgiving when she turned her face from her old home to cross the wide ocean with her husband. And Reuben, in his greatest triumphs, when crowned heads were bent to listen to the voice of his genius, would ever turn his eyes to where, in some quiet corner, he knew Daisy, too, listened to his violin.

Marital Solicitude.

Horace Smith once told me a good story of a night he had passed in a stage coach, when railways were not, and the journey from one part of England to another was a serious undertaking. I forget where he was going, but the distance was considerable, and the four inside passengers naturally endeavored to settle themselves as commodiously as circumstances would permit. Two of them were a married couple, the husband sitting with his back to the horse, and evidently not altogether at his ease. About half an hour after starting he turned to his wife and anxiously inquired if she was comfortable.

"Pretty well," she replied, in a drowsy tone.

"You feel no draught from the window?"

"None at all."

"Quite sure?"

"Quite."

"Ah!" remarked the affectionate spouse, after a momentary pause, "then suppose we change places."—Longman's.

There is now living in Pickens county, Ga., a man who during the rebellion donned his wife's dress, kept his face closely shaved and wore a big sun bonnet, in order to avoid being conscripted and sent to the front. The officers in search of recruits frequently visited the house and asked his wife where her husband was, and at that very moment he could be seen working in the field in female garb. By the time he had worn out seven of his wife's dresses he became tired of masquerading, enlisted and became a good soldier.

Dogs as Newspaper Carriers.

A very common thing on all the Connecticut railroad lines is for accommodating train men to throw newspapers off the train at or near the houses of subscribers living on the line of the road at a distance from the stations. In many instances dogs have been trained to watch for the cars and get these papers, and country dogs it is noticed, take quite an active interest in the affair. Over on the Naugatuck road some one has had the curiosity to inquire into this matter of dog messengers. Mr. Philip McLean, proprietor of the Gate House on the Thomaston road, has a dog who goes a mile and a half every morning to meet the train. The paper was formerly thrown off by the brakeman on the last car, and there the dog watched for it. Lately it has been thrown from the baggage car. The dog appeared angry at the change, barked furiously and waited sullenly for some time before going on his errand. He has not yet become reconciled to the new way of delivering his paper. Below Derby a dog has acted for several years as newsboy for a number of families. The papers are thrown out of the cars under full speed. Whether one or a large bundle of them, the dog is able to lug them off, making good time back. Another dog who has become a veteran as newsboy and cannot now, from age rheumatism, get down to the cars, has in some way managed to train a younger dog to do his work. Edward Osborne, residing below Naugutuck, has a dog who regularly meets the early morning train. The house is a mile away from the railroad, and the dog never leaves on his errand until he hears the train whistle at Beacon Falls station. Then he starts on a run and waits at the same spot always, with his nose poked between the palings of a fence and his keen eyes watching for the flying paper. A story is told of one dog that was first taught to bring a certain New Haven paper, and when his master changed to another one could not be induced to carry the new one. This is unlikely. Another story is that the late Senator William Brown, of Waterbury, had a pet dog that could readily distinguish the whistles of the New England engines from those of the Naugutuck, though running on a parallal track at the same time side by side. The faithful dog always found his train and car, and stood in waiting for the Hartford Times, which he carried home to his master for many years.—Hartford Times.

Rural Artlessness.

The latest way of making money is that of a girl in London, whose method is to remain perdue near any house she intends to operate on until the mistress goes out. Quickly noting the more striking details of the lady's costume, rural innocence waits a while, then marches up to the house with her basket and rings the bell. To the servant who attends the summons she relates that a lady had told her to leave the contents of her basket at the house on receiving payment. What lady? The artless one does not know her name, but she wore such and such raiment, seemed so many years old, etc.

The servant, recognizing the description as that of her mistress, takes in the country produce, consisting of fresh butter and newly-laid eggs, and pays a good price for it, receiving a proper courtesy in return. The denouncement is, of course, that the fresh butter is discovered to be curiously rancid, that the newly laid eggs appear to have been for some time in an incubator, and that the mistress disclaims the honor of rural innocence's acquaintance.

A well-known New York artist has a little place in the country that is his pride and delight, and upon which he spends all his spare time in manual labor. One day he met some of his neighbors, among whom was a lady who at every meeting insisted upon talking art. She at once accosted him with, "Oh, Mr. ——, I'm so glad to see you! Upon what work are you engaged now?"

"One of the greatest of my life madam," replied the artist, impressively.

"Indeed! Do tell us about it. I do so love to know of such things before they are given to the general public. What is the nature of the work?"

"Its nature, madam, is heroic, and the treatment demanded is of the boldest. I am now engaged in washing the surface, which is so large that even this simple task will occupy me several days."

"Why, Mr. ——, you surprise me. How large is the canvass?"

"It is not canvass, madam; it is wood; and in the four sides of the barn that I am whitewashing are about 3,600 square feet."—Harper's Magazine.

A Swell Reporter.

The Baltimore American has the swell reporter of the country. He is a young man about thirty years of age. There is not the slightest necessity for his doing any work, as not only his father a millionaire, but he has a fortune in his own name which yields a large revenue. Nevertheless this young man is so passionately devoted to journalism that he entered the service of the American as a minor reporter in order to master all the details of business. He has now been a reporter a good many years and loves his work as much as ever. He gets a good salary from the paper, but spends twice as much every week. When he goes out on any assignment he uses his private coupe or hires a cab, and if he does not wish to return to the newspaper office he will telegraph all his matter at his own expense. This journalistic phenomenon travels like a lord. He always stops at the very best hotels, and will take two sections of a sleeping car when he can get them. As for clothes, he has an infinite variety, and if ever a special correspondent had a suit for every day in the month this enthusiast has one for every day in the year. He cares nothing for his salary, but works hard to make his mark, and is one of the best newspaper men in this country.—New York Graphic.

"Horse Shoe Luck."

One of the Republican's numerous corps picked up a well-worn horse shoe from the roadway on William street one day last week, and everybody who saw him with it in his hand, congratulated him upon the good luck his find was certain to bring the unpretentious establishment he so ably, though so modestly represents. And the result justified the prediction. He brought the luck-compelling crescent to the office and laid it upon a shelf to thaw out, preparatory to having it esthetically decorated and hung up, and forthwith the luck it was to bring began to arrive. The same day we got news of the failure of a man who owed us forty dollars; within the week our large press got a broken cog-wheel, three angry men came in demanding each for himself to know if we "meant him" in a squib we had printed a week before, our usually docile engine got balky, and a four-foot icicle from the eaves smashed down through the skylight and spoiled a font of new labor-saving rule the foreman had spread out on an imposing stone underneath. If this is horseshoe luck, there is no more of it wanted in this establishment.—Lyons (N. Y.) Republican.

Come to Stay.

A Boston paper, in speaking lately of the number of new medical remedies which are offered to the public every year, called attention to the fact that the majority of them have a very short existence. Some are never heard of after twelve months have passed by; others are forgotten in the course of three or four years, while it is a rare thing to know of any which retain their popularity longer than eight or ten years. When there is an exception to this rule, it may be set down as a fact that the article possesses some extraordinary merit to survive so many changes. The most remarkable illustration of this is seen in St. Jacobs Oil. Steadily and surely it worked its way into public favor, receiving no help, except from its own efficacy, and to-day there is hardly a civilized country in which it is not hailed as a conqueror of pain. Like Tennyson's brook, men may come and men may go, but St. Jacobs Oil goes on for ever.

The Jacksonville (Fla.) Herald has this counsel for the season: By stretching a string near the ceiling of a room flies will use it to light upon instead of the walls, that can thus be kept all the summer free from fly specks. This a good thing for bald-headed people.

MEMORIAL DAY.

The 30th day of May on each year has been set apart for performing the solemn ceremonies of decorating soldiers' graves and refreshing the memory of the services they rendered their country in its hour of peril. This Commonwealth has made it a legal holiday and it is observed as such. Not, however, with the original meaning and intent. True, surviving soldiers visit, on that day, the graves of their dead comrades and strew them with flowers; and they duly observe other forms and ceremonies appropriate to the occasion; but community at large do not treat it as a day of mourning, or one sacred to the memories of the brave men who lost their lives in defense of our glorious land. It is made a holiday after the bad fashion that the ancient New England Fast Day is observed, that is to say, a day for playing games, for sports of a more or less questionable character, and, in many instances, a day for unbecoming and unseemly carousings and immoderate indulgence in strong drinks. The anniversary has become perverted and dedicated to bad uses not contemplated when it was made a legal holiday by public statute.

It is believed that a great share of the veterans now regret that it was ever so made. To them the day is one of peculiar solemnity, and they feel that the manner of its observance is not in keeping with the original design. However this may be, Memorial Day comes around again tomorrow and all over this broad land will the last earthly resting-places of the dead defenders of the Union receive the kind attention which they deserve. The following is the manner in which the Woburn Posts and Sons of Veterans will discharge their willing duties to the memory of the comrades whose remains live in the cemetaries of the town:

Commanders of Posts 33 and 161 have issued the special order for Memorial day. The posts will assemble at their respective headquarters at 8.30 a. m. Each post will furnish ten men to decorate the graves at Mount Calvary cemetery, Montvale, under Commander L. J. Hammond of Post, 33. Comrades G. L. Tibbetts and A. C. Nichols will decorate the graves in Burlington. The rest of the comrades, under Commander Charles H. Harding, will decorate the graves in the Salem street cemetery, and the one on Montvale avenue. The posts will reassemble at 1.30 p. m. and at 2 o'clock, Post 161, under escort of the Woburn Mechanic Phalanx (Company G. Fifth Regiment), will take Post 33 under escort, and march over the following route: Main, Johnson, Franklin, Winn, Pleasant, Warren, Main, to Lyceum, Hall, where the services, by the ritual, will be conducted by Post 161. The oration will be delivered by Comrade Gardner A. Churchill of Post 26. Post 161 will have a collation, with invited guests, in the hall after the services. Post 33, after the services, will escort its guests to headquarters, where a dinner will be served by the ladies, after which the renovated Grand Army Hall will be dedicated with appropriate ceremonies.

☞ The clause in the Senate civil service bill which excludes soldiers of the late war from its operations was retained by a large majority. The strongest opponents of the clause were members of the Senate who served long and honorably in the war. They said that all self-respecting soldiers were opposed to the exemption and in favor of its being stricken from the bill. They doubtless spoke truly, for the veterans here, almost to a man, are strongly of that sentiment. The bill has gone to the House where there are demagogues enough to pass it without any trouble. Practically the measure amounts to but little at the most; but it seems a poor thing to do to pass an act of the Legislature declaring that the men who fought for years and saved the Union are not capable of taking care of themselves when thrown into competition with men who did not go to the war, and never smelled gun-powder. The act is anything but complimentary to the intelligence of the veterans, and they so regard it.

☞ A bill recently passed by the Legislature puts the management of Boston's police affairs into the hands of the State where they will be safe. Boston has been acting so badly in the last few years and losing her good character so fast, that finally some truly good men began to think that she was not capable of self-government, out of which idea grew the bill mentioned We should think it would make the "Hub" grind and gnash her teeth to be subjected to such humiliation. But it's no use, she can't help herself.

— Monday morning Officer McSweeney arrested Hugh Rafferty at Montvale on three charges: one for assault on Chief Nelson; one for assault on Officer Tidd; and one for having liquors for sale. He was arraigned and the cases continued one week.

— Mr. Amos Cummings has his shoulder at the Woburn business boom and is lifting. His mind is prolific in resources. The latest thing thought of by him is to offer a popular weekly magazine free to every one that calls at his store.

— McDonald Brothers proprietors of the Stoneham Granite Works have a card in this paper, to which attention is called. They are first class workmen, and never fail to satisfy their customers. The works are at Farmhill station, Stoneham.

— Mr. Benjamin Champney, the artist, starts for his summer home at North Conway tomorrow. He has a nice residence pleasantly located in that "painter's paradise," which he has occupied every summer for upwards of thirty years.

— Capt. Crane, our Representative, placed himself on the right side of the civil rights bill which passed the House last Tuesday. When it is a question of humanity and right, with politics left out, the Captain almost always stands up on the true side.

— Mr. Peter Kenney has given up the store 150 Main street and moved along nearer Wilmington. He took it in 1861 and has occupied it continuously ever since—24 years—and to abandon the old place must have seemed to him a good deal like pulling teeth.

— The chief civil engineer of the B. & L. Railroad is soon to take up his residence in this village. It is said that he intends to occupy the house to be vacated by Mr. G. F. Jones on the first of August. He will make a valuable acquisition to our population.

— It is said that a former employe of the Hams and a present employe of the railroad company have leased a piece of land between Winn and Middlesex street on which they will build a grain mill this summer. Parties in Boston furnish pecuniary aid for the enterprise.

— The Scandinavian element in our population is growing quite rapidly. Eleven Swedes arrived on one train last week, and more on other trains. They are a sober, industrious and altogether desirable class of people to have settle among us, and it is to be hoped that more are on their way here.

— The ladies' Reading-room in the Public Library has been formally thrown open and is now in daily use. It is richly furnished, and makes a delightful resort for ladies who devote a portion of their time to reading and study. Nothing is lacking to make it an attractive and pleasant room.

— Last Wednesday morning Conductor Richard Carton kindly fetched us a copy of the Lowell Mail of that day containing a full account of the trip of the first train over the Boston & Lowell R. R., made on May 27, 1835, for which we acknowledge our thanks. The Mail's article is a very interesting one.

— Among the establishments to be lighted by electricity from Mr. N. J. Simonds's plant is Carter's Skating Academy. It will have a large number of 5-light clusters, from which the illumination will be very fine indeed. It will take two or three weeks yet before Mr. Simonds gets his plant into full operation.

— Memorial services were held at the Congregational church last Sunday, which were attended by Post 33 and Post 161 in a body. Rev. Dr. March preached an excellent sermon. A large volunteer choir, under the direction of the organist, Mr. John C. Buck, furnished appropriate and beautiful music.

— When the Messrs. Ellis started Dr. Harlow's house from its foundation on Pleasant street three clocks in it were running. When the house was placed on its cellar walls on Main street the clocks were ticking away just as if nothing in the world had happened, which was certainly a very remarkable incident.

— Deputy Sheriff Horace Collamore is engaged in serving legal notices on the owners of real estate over which the Branch extension runs, that the Railroad Company will take said real estate, in all cases where it has not been purchased outright, under the statute, and let the County Commissioners settle the damages.

— At a meeting held by the Railroad Permanent Committee in the Rooms of the Board of Trade last Monday evening the committee on permanent organization made a report embodying the purposes of the organization and some of the needed reforms that have been secured through its influence, accompanied with a skeleton formation. The report was written by W. V. Kellen Esq. and was a very interesting resume of the work of the society during its brief existance. The matter of a permanent organization was put into the hands of a competent committee.

— The great circus of Van Amburgh, Charles Reiche & Brothers will exhibit in Wyman field, this town, on next Thursday, a fact which all lovers of a grand circus and great menagerie should bear in mind. It should also be remembered that the price of admission to all departments is only 25 cents—half the usual price.

— Mrs. Dr. Adams of Central Square brought in four eggs the other day which were fairly entitled to the champion's belt. The largest was eight and a half inches by six and a half inches, and the other three, eight inches by seven and a quarter. They were the fruit of pure blooded Plymouth Rocks, and looked good enough to eat.

— We shall print next week the dying speech of Levi Ames, who was hung in Boston on October 21, 1773, for burglary. One of the thefts confessed was of a gun from Josiah Richardson, and a silver spoon of Mr. Howard, both in Woburn. The confession has been in the family of Mr. Elijah Wyman for a great many years, and by him furnished us for publication.

— Mr. Brown, keeper of the Woburn Almshouse, says that there are 46 people in that institution at the present time—the largest number for years past. Eleven are idiotic or insane; twelve are under 14 years of age; twenty are sane adults, and three prisoners. Of the number 29 are males, and 17 females. One of the females has been at the place 30 years, and another 20 years.

— Engineers of the Boston & Lowell R. R. have been surveying for a possible switch to the J. G. Pollard factory on Eastern Avenue. It ought to be built. The Pollard factory is a complete one and with a short stretch of railroad to it would become very valuable. It would also open up some desirable property for manufacturing purposes, which, no doubt, would very soon be occupied.

— Mr. Joseph B. McDonald has a keen eye to business. When anything is in the air he generally knows it. Mr. McDonald appreciates the fact that there is to be a big amount of building here this summer, and to be ready for it he is now receiving large quantities of all kinds of lumber at his extensive yards. He will not be caught napping. Last year Mr. McDonald unloaded at his yards nearly 220 cars of lumber and building material, from which single item some idea of the immense extent of his business may be learned.

— There was a narrow escape from a serious smash-up at Cross street, on the Branch, last Friday evening. Just before the 5.10 train from Boston reached the Cross street station the engineer discovered an obstruction on the track and called for breaks. On coming up to it a railroad sleeper was found lying across the track which the cow-catcher hit and knocked one side, and fortunately no damage was done. The trackmen had left the spot only a few minutes before, and who did it or what it was done for is a mystery.

— The "Woburn Bargain Store" is known and read by all prudent people of this town. Almost everybody has been in it at one time and another in their lives, and a great many go often. It is in the true sense of the word a "bargain" store, for every nameable and unnameable article in it is sold at a bargain that is truly surprising. It is stocked with everything, and comes nearer to a "curiosity-shop" that any store in town. There are small cards concerning the "Woburn Bargain Store" scattered all through this paper, to which attention is called.

— Mr. Charles H. Barnes of 512 Washington street, Boston, whose card appears in the advertising columns of this paper, bears the reputation of being one of fairest, squarest, and most accommodating dealers in the city. The testimony of his thousands of customers is unanimous to that effect, therefore we take pleasure in recommending his house to the favorable consideration of all those who are in pursuit of any of the various lines of goods in which he deals. They will find everything precisely as recommended and prices invariably low.

— On old "Election Day", May 27, 1835— fifty years ago last Wednesday — the first passenger train that ever ran over the Boston & Lowell Railroad went from Boston to Lowell. It left Boston in the morning and returned the same evening. The event was one of the most important that had transpired in the then recent history of the State. It is still distinctly remembered by the older people of Woburn and other towns on the route and the wonder with which the train was watched is vividly recollected. Many changes have taken place in these fifty years, but through them all the Boston & Lowell Railroad has enjoyed a prosperous existance.

— The show-windows of Mr. Amos Cummings's dry goods and millinery store are very handsome indeed. Large panes of plate glass occupy the fronts and sides with mirrors back of the rich goods with which they are filled; and the south one is lined with elegant red silk plush which sets off the beautiful bonnets, hats, ribbons, etc., finely. It is doubted if there are show windows in Boston more attractively gotten up or or arranged in better taste than those of Mr. Cummings's. He has evidently not been croping in the use of money in building them, for which he must feel himself well paid in the praises of their beauty which fall from the lips of passers-by.

— Mr. Hyatt Frost, who is now on his 39th year of his travel with the best and most popular shows on the road, announces in this paper the appearances of Van Amburg, Charles Reiche & Brothers new shows in this place, on Thursday, June 4, when the Circus, Museum, Aquarium and Menagerie can all be seen for half price; that is twenty-five cents, with one ticket admitting to all the departments. The show is first class in every particular and receives high encomiums from the press everywhere. The grand procession should be witnessed by everybody, for if reports can be relied on it will be a magnificent affair. Please bear in mind that the price of admission is only twenty-five cents to all departments—just one half charged to shows of inferior merit.

— A malicious report was started Wednesday morning to the effect that Chief Nelson and Officer Tidd, in making the liquor seizure at Hugh Rafferty's last Tuesday afternoon, caused the death of James McCall who was sick in the house at the time. McCall died on Wednesday forenoon, but the presence of the officers at Rafferty's was in no way connected with his death. He was in the very last stages of pulmonary consumption and died of it. The officers knew nothing of McCall or his sickness while there, and in making the seizure there was no excitement, except that made by the woman of the house, that could injuriously effect any one. There are always a plenty of rum-sympathizers to catch up such rumors and make mountains of them; but they will not hurt the officers, who will keep right on doing their duty.

— Yesterday morning there were interesting religious ceremonies held at St. Charles (Roman Catholic) Church in this village. More than three hundred children from 10 to 14 years old, about equally divided between boys and girls were confirmed by Bishop Williams of Boston, assisted by the pastors of St. Charles and clergymen from out of town. There was mass at 8 o'clock in the morning, which was succeeded by a nice collation in the church, and the rites of confirmation were performed at 10 o'clock. Before this hour the boys, neatly dressed and wearing white gloves, under the direction of a Sister of Notre Dame, proceeded from the vestry to the auditorium and were seated. Just before 10 o'clock the girls, dressed in pure white, with white veils held with wreathes of flowers, preceded by the Lady Superior, left the house of the parochal school and marched in procession to the church, where seats were reserved for them opposite those of the boys. The girls looked very handsome —indeed, such a large number of boys and girls, neatly attired and wearing their best manners, in which they had been thoroughly drilled by the Sisters, was a very pretty and interesting spectacle. The ceremonies by Bishop Williams were attentively listened to by a very large audience, and the fine music, selected for the occasion, was highly appreciated. This was the largest number ever before confirmed in St. Charles Church at one time. Protestants were present and enjoyed the occasion.

RINK NOTES:—Polo holds the rinks with a firm grip. The fever burns as fiercely as ever, and bids fair to have a long run.——The Woburns and Stonehams have had some sharp games of late. Considerable public interest is centered on both. Over 1200 people assembled at the Academy last Friday evening to witness a tug between these two clubs, among whom there was great excitement, although it was not a League game.——The first Union League game will take place at the Academy tonight between the Globes of Haverhill and Woburns. Look out for big playing and rare sport.——The Old Folks Carnival at the Academy last Monday evening was a gay affair. It was originated and carried out by a committee composed of gentlemen who know no such word as fail. There were more than 100 in costume, some of which were beautiful and unique. There were many in costume from abroad. In class 1, the 1st prize for best old fashioned dress, China teaset, was awarded to Laura Tebbets of Burlington; 2nd prize, lady's slipper bag, to Miss Flora Greenleaf. First prize to gentleman, same class, a French clock, was awarded to Conductor O. J. Hart; 2nd, smoking set, to Fred Swan of Winchester. In second class, first prize, silver dinner castor, was given to Lizzie Coburn; and the 2nd, "Aunt Sally," to Hilda Drew. Gentleman in the same class: 1st prize, writing cabinet, Jockey, to Mr. D. A. Watson of Boston; 2nd, Uncle Sam, 20 season tickets to A. A. Ferrin. In the Fancy Dress class the 1st prize, satin parasol, awarded to Lizzie Cooper, for a dress made and painted by herself; 2nd, to Lucy Weston. Gentlemen in same class; 1st prize awarded to Mr. Charles M. Munroe, a plush mirror. His costume was worthy of particular mention. It was made in Paris for a member of the DeKohn family of Boston, somewhere in the last century, in which to be presented at the Court of Marie Antoinette: it has also been worn by a member of the same family at the Court of St. James on the occasion of the Queen's reception. The dress is a rich dark velvet trimmed in solid silver, and valued at $800. Of course it was an extremely elegant thing. The 2nd prize, 20 season tickets, was given to Bert Gilman. The Judges were Dr. S. T. Sanborn, Mrs. J. H. Parker, Walter O. Safford, Mrs. M. T. Allen.

The Railroad.

The work of grading the extension of the Woburn Branch from Wilmington down was let last Tuesday to Messrs. Ryan & Co., who have a large contract from the Boston & Lowell Company on the Manchester and Keene road. They have had much experience in the construction of railroads, and are said to be live, energetic, successful men. Major H. C. Hall, and Messrs. J. R. Carter and Martin and Jacob Ellis were applicants for the job, but learned Tuesday forenoon that it had been given to Ryan & Co. It would have been gratifying if our townsmen had secured the work.

The letting of the contract means that the grading will begin at once. It settles too what the road is to be. Many stories have been current on this point, some claiming that it is to be a single-track, one-horse—simply a stern-wheel—affair; but the contract is for a double track from Wilmington to Winchester—the whole line of the Branch extension. So that question is settled. It means likewise, what Superintendent Mellen has always declared to be true, that the new line is to be used for all the passenger traffic between Lowell and Boston, and that the old line through Montvale and Walnut Hill will retain the freight trains that now run over it.

Necessary preliminaries have retarded somewhat a commencement on the construction of the line, but these have, at last, been completed, and within a few days shovel and pick and gangs of men will strike into a work, for the accomplishment of which Woburn has long been praying.

Obituary.

William D. Warren, who died last week Thursday at his home, 123 East 37th street, New York City, was formerly a well known resident of this town. He was the eldest of nine children and was born in Griswold, Conn., June 12, 1822. At the age of 17 he left home to shift for himself, and soon after reaching Boston he came to Woburn where he started into the stable business; not long after he established an express route between this town and Boston, often going over the route twice each way a day delivering and receiving his goods himself; while thus engaged he brought into Woburn the first barrel of anthracite coal that was ever sold in town, and soon after he established the first coal yard on the canal in the rear of Mrs. Czanna Littlefield's house. These different enterprises not being suited to his fancy he finally sold them out and went into the contracting business and was successively engaged in building a part of the Delaware Lackawanna and Western railroad, the Stroudburg tunnel, the deep rock cut in Scranton, Pennsylvania, laid all the water pipes in Central Park, part of the water mains through Fifth and Eighth Avenues in New York city, and the Charlestown water works. From thence he went to mining iron at Copake and Dover Furnace, New York, and while thus engaged took the largest contract of his life to build 50 miles of the New York Boston and Montreal, now the New York City and Northern, railroad, which runs from that city to Carmel and Brewsters. He was engaged upon this work when the financial panic of 1873 bankrupted this as well as many other similar enterprises throughout the country. Since that time he has lived in a quiet way at his home in New York city during the winter months, usually starting early in May to spend the summer upon his beautiful farm at White Plains, where he enjoyed solid comfort with his stock and the work of seccessfully conducting a well kept farm. He leaves a widow and four children, three of whom are married. His remains were brought on to Woburn and interred in the cemetery here Monday eve, where Rev. W. S. Clapp of Carmel, a warm friend of the deceased, offered a short prayer.—COM.

Board ot Trade.

On last Tuesday evening the regular weekly meeting of Ex. Committee of the Board of Trade was held in the Rooms. The transactions were of an informal character, no business being done, but interesting discussions took place on various matters of importance to the town. The Board is steadily growing in membership, there being at the present time a few less than one hundred names on the register, with about forty more who subscribed to the original paper, to go on. The Executive Committee are active, and looking sharply after matters of public moment.

On Tuesday evening Messrs Gay, Hinckley, Buchanan and Simonds discussed the Seamless Pocket Company loom and product, each of whom expressed the utmost confidence in the value of the invention. Mr. Gay gave the result of an investigation of its merits by an expert, the Superintendent of the Pacific Mills at Lawrence, which was very flattering. The committee will make a final report on the subject in a short time.

Mr. William G. Miller furnished information respecting the progress made in procuring illustrations for the book soon to be issued by the Board. There will be quite a large number of views of public buildings, private residences, factories in the work, which is to be executed in fine style. President Skinner was in favor of procuring us many views of tanneries for it at possible, which idea was shared by the gentlemen present.

Disgraceful Scenes.

EDITOR OF JOURNAL: — There has been a great deal of drinking, drunkenness and rowdying here on the West Side for a month past, especially on Sundays. The scenes enacted here on every Lord's Day are perfectly scandulous and, if we had a police officer better than a wooden man, there would be a stop put to them. It is reported, and I believe it from the swarms of men I see go there, that a certain female, who sells intoxicating liquors just over the Burlington line, sold four barrels of beer a week ago last Sunday, and last Sunday she must have sold much more. I don't see what the authorities of Burlington are thinking of to let that miserable being in the shape of a woman go on as she does.

Last Sunday men were at her house, drunk and carousing, from Woburn Centre, Montvale, Stoneham, Winchester, and other places, and the scenes were disgraceful. A regular procession was going and coming all day. There are several other holes here where rum is sold right under the nose of our one policemen, but they are decent compared with the one just over the Burlington line. If the officers of Burlington don't do something right away, I and a few others, are going to see Chief Nelson of the Centre, and see if this creature's nest of iniquity can't be broken up. I am amazed that the Selectman, who lives here, who pretends to be in favor of suppressing liquor dens, don't do something. He knows what is going on and I am surprised that he does not do something to abate the awful nuisances here. But I am free to say that some of them will catch it pretty soon, if they do not stop voluntarily. The decent people of the West Side are bound that the holy Sabbath day shall not be desecrated very long as it is now.

AN INDIGNANT CITIZEN.

Cummingsville, May 25, 1885.

HEREDITARY SCROFULA.

ARE you aware that in your blood the taint of scrofula has a prominent place? This is true of every one. It is liable at any time, on the slightest provocation, to develop itself in some insidious disease. Consumption and many other diseases are outgrowths of this impurity of the blood. HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA has a wonderful power over all scrofulous troubles, as the remarkable testimonials we have received unmistakably prove.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO.: Gentlemen— • • • My youngest son has always been troubled with Scrofulous Humor; sores in his head discharging from his ears, and a running sore on the back of his ear for two years; his eyelids would fester and ulcerate, discharging so that I was obliged to wash them open every morning, his eyelashes nearly all coming out; he was exceedingly dainty, most of the time eating but two slight meals a day. We were unable to find anything that had the least effect upon him till last spring, 1878, we gave him two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla. His appetite improved at once. • • The back of his ear healed up without a scar, and not a sore in his head since. Sincerely yours,
MRS. N. C. SANBORN,
No. 108 Merrimack St., Lowell, Mass.

"We do not as a rule allow ourselves to use our editorial columns to speak of any remedy we advertise, but we feel warranted in saying a word for Hood's Sarsaparilla. Sarsaparilla has been known as a remedial agent for centuries and is recognized by all schools of practice as a valuable blood purifier. It is put up in forms of almost infinite variety, but Messrs. Hood & Co., (Lowell, Mass.) who are thoroughly reliable pharmacists, have hit upon a remedy of unusual value. Certainly they have vouchers of cures which we know to be most extraordinary."—Editors Lowell Weekly Journal.

Garland Oil Stove
1885.
THE WORLD'S BEST.

This popular Oil Stove is used and recommended by Mrs. Lincoln at the Boston Cooking School. Among its superior features is its new and novel burner, superior to any applied to other stoves and used only on the Garland. It does away with the ratchet wheels for moving the wicks which has been such a nuisance in oil stoves, and affords an even, steady flame. It has two or four-hole boiler tops. Baking, boiling and frying can be done at once.

The Garland is the most popular, convenient and powerful baker in the market to-day. We have sold a great number the last two seasons and they have given decided satisfaction, selling themselves on their own merits. The best is the cheapest.

Last week Thursday evening a meeting of the School Board and teachers was held in the Grammar School building.

Last Sunday morning a shed connected with the morocco shop of W. H. Cooper on Cross street, was burned with its contents.

The Sons of Veterans of this place will observe Memoriel Day tomorrow indue in proper form, for which all preparations are completed.

The meeting of the teachers of the Congregational church was held in the parlors of the church last Saturday evening. It was a good one.

The annual meeting of the W. C. T. U. was held at Livingstone Hall last Friday afternoon. This organization is a great help in the temperance cause.

Applications for more residences are made almost daily. If Woburn is enjoying a boom, we are growing. The additions to our population are first class too.

The repetition of the concert of the school children, under the direction of Mrs. Bailey, on Monday evening last week, was a grand success. It was greatly enjoyed by all present. Mrs. Bailey has wonderful talent in training youthful voices.

No more beautiful sight is to be obtained in passing through any of the suburban towns of Boston than that of our common. It is the admiration of all who pass in the cars. How much would be added to this charming landscape picture if those massive stone posts and large connecting rails of the fence in front of the church yard could only be removed. The fence makes an unsightly break in the delightful green lawn which extends from the very side of the railroad upwards to the church itself.—Star.

The Winchester Water Works are pushing the work right ahead, and have a strong force of workmen hard at work manufacturing the sheet iron pipes which after being lined with cement, are to be laid in our streets. The pipes which are made of the best of iron, are being punched, rolled and rivetted at the headquarters of the company, and the cementing apparatus is being rapidly pushed forward. Supt. Dotten has procured samples of sand from various localities with which he has mixed cement in equal portion with a view to ascertain which sand has the best economical and staying properties. The decision will be made by the committee upon a careful examination of the samples which have been numbered, and the locality from which the sand came not known to them.—Star.

A. W. Weld Post, No. 148, G. A. R. of this town will observe Memorial Day, on Saturday, with appropriate ceramoinies. The Committee of Arrangements Messrs. S. C. Small, R. S. Carr, and a A. J. Edwards have put out the following order of exercises at Wildwood Cemetery, which will commence at 3 o'clock, P. M.: Music by the Band; Hymn, America; Reading of General Orders by Adjutant W. A. Snow; Prayer by J. L. Marsh; Music by the Band; Address by Rev. Joshua Coit of Winchester; Pleyel's Hymn; Decorations of 36 graves, at Wildwood, and Admiral Fletcher's at Forest Hills.

By order of M. E. Lyon, Commander, comrades will report at Headquarters at 2.30 o'clock, P. M., and H. K. Thatcher Camp, S. of V. will join. The Maplewood Band of Malden will furnish the music. The line of march will be through Church and Wildwood streets to the cemetery.

BURLINGTON.

The scarlet fever has again appeared in town.

Mr. John T. Prince, state agent of Board of Education, has recently been visiting the schools in town. On Tuesday afternoon he met the school committee and teachers at the Centre school house and talked with them on methods of instruction and government. Mr. Prince complimented our improvements in school buildings, saying that the Burlington school houses were better than those in country towns generally.

Just at this time when the attention of people is called to Bible study by the publication of the revised Version of the Old Testament, it may be interesting to the readers of the JOURNAL to know that the late Rev. Samuel Sewall was the owner of one of very few existing copies of that old and rare edition of the Bible, called the Bishops Bible. At his death, it was given by his desire to the library of Harvard College, where it is now kept.

The annual election of officers of the Ladies Sewing Society was held in connection with the meeting of the society at the residence of Mrs P. Rogan on Thursday of last week. Mrs. Mary B. Reed was chosen president, Mrs. L. Woodman, vice president, Mrs. Abbie Walker secretary, and Mrs. Elizabeth Sewall, treasurer. The report of the treasurer showed that the financial affairs of the society are in an excellent condition. This society has been active and prosperous since its organization forty-five years ago.

More Houses Needed.

Real estate dealers and others inform us that hardly a day in the week passes that they do not have applications for tenements. The extension of the Branch and a judicious advertising in the local journals of Woburn's new start towards increased prosperity have already had a marked effect in attracting people seeking business and homes, a large share of whom, it is to be regretted, there are no suitable houses to accommodate. It is noticed likewise that, as a rule, the tenements wanted are of a better character than those which heretofore have been taken the most readily. Rents worth from twenty to thirty dollars are in in demand, and one gentleman said to us the other day that twenty 25-dollar houses could be let at once, if they were only to be found in town. From the lack of them and others of a different character we are constantly losing additions to our population that might be secured just as well as not.

This is an important matter. Growth of population cannot reasonably be expected unless homes are provided for those who would settle among us. A large proportion of the applicants for rents are men who for one reason and another prefer to live in a leased house rather than to build at present. They want good places and are able and willing to pay fair prices. If they cannot get what they want, they prefer to stay away, not a few of whom, every week, conclude to do so.

What Woburn stands greatly in need of just now are more good houses. Quite a good many are in process of building at the present time and the fact that they are promptly spoken for by new-comers demonstrates, if nothing else does, the necessity of large additions to the number. People seeking homes here ought not to be compelled to go away disappointed at finding no suitable tenements to rent. We want to keep all who come, but to do so houses must be provided. In view of the demand, and the absolute certainty of a large increase in the next few months, it is a marvel to us that our men of means do not go to work at once and invest some of their surplus funds in buildings of a character to meet the wants of new-comers, epecially as such investments would be sure to pay good interest.

These are Solid Facts.

The best blood purifier and system regulator ever placed within the reach of suffering humanity, truly is Electric Bitters. Inactivity of the Liver, Biliousness, Jaundice, Constipation, Week Kidneys, or any disease of the urinary organs, or whoever requires an appetizer, tonic or mild stimulant, will always find Electric Bitters the best and only certain cure known. WILMINGTON.

It pays to be honest in business. I mean it pays in dollars and cents, let alone the morality part of the question. And besides, the consciousness of having done right buoys a man's spirits up wonderfully. To illustrate: Mr. Horace Sheldon sold a 3-year old heifer to George A. Carter of Winchester, about the first of April, for $70, and recommended her as A 1. She recently dropped a calf, and on May 19 Mr. Carter wrote:—"the heifer Jennie, that I bought of you, gave 17 quarts of milk to-day, actual measurement. I will sell her for one hundred dollars—ninety-nine no object." I call that a pretty good recommendation for Mr. Sheldon as a stock-dealer.—B.

The Shoes

That are bought at Stetson's establishment corner of Hanover and Blackstone streets, Boston, can be depended on for real downright wear. Also, they can be purchased at prices which bring them within the reach of all. For instance, a lady can buy at this store a very nice Kid Button Boot for $2, while gentlemen can procure a high lace Congress or Button Boot at prices from $2 to $3 a pair that cannot fail to give satisfaction. The store also carries a full line of durable shoes for children. Stetson's old established stand, 158 Hanover, corner of Blackstone streets, Boston. Convenient to northern depots.

There were all the evidences of a comiug storm; the very air vibrated with the odor of danger! but when the kind father took from his pocket a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup then came a calm, for the baby had the croup and would now get well.

Real Estate Transactions.

Land for building purposes begins to feel the effects of the improved condition of things in Woburn. There is a demand for good house-lots, but it is nothing now compared to what it soon will be. Business enterprises will require more real estate then there is now in the market, principally along the route of the new railroad, and owners, in a short time, will find ready sale for eligible sites. Prices of improved property are better all along the line consequent on an increased demand for residence property. The business tide has turned and those who take it at its flood will coin dollars.

There are several schemes on foot for bringing into market some of the most desirable building property this summer. Splendid sites for residences will soon be offered purchasers, to market which no trouble will be experienced The want is imparative and placed at fair prices the sales of lots will be rapid. The heirs of the estate of the late D. D. Hart contemplate opening a street through their fine tract of real estate at Central Square, from Lowell street to Kilby, cut it up into suitable divisions and place it on the market. This will open to settlement the best property in town for homes, and as a handsome depot is to be built near there the reasonable expectation is that Central Square will become one of the most desirable localities for residence purposes in Woburn.

The large tract opposite his elegant home on Main street, belonging to the Carter heirs, has been purchased by Mr. Griffin Place, who purposes to build a street through it to intersect the street proposed by the Harts, which will open up another fine tract for private dwellings. Mr. Place is a shrewd business man and knowns a good thing when he sees it.

At North Woburn, as well as in other parts of the town, new streets are in contemplation on which very eligible residence property will be offered for sale. One good sign is, that men who have clung to their land are now disposed to place it on the market and make it count in the town's sure increase of population. In fact, every-thing points to a brisk transaction in real estate this season, and important additions to the present number of our people.

1861—THE VETERAN—1881.

BY GOVERNOR LONG OF MASSACHUSETTS.

A mother's kiss—a sweetheart's sigh—
A cottage door, red arched with rose;
A fair young soldier cries Good-by,
And to the front of battle goes.

Wounded at Malvern Hill he fell;
In Libby wasted, heart and limb;
Kinder had death been than the shell
At Gettysburg that shattered him.

Yet dared he all, and all he bore.
What need feared he, come late or soon?
And not his country o'er and o'er
Pledged him her laurel and her boon?

Nation and State keep well their trust;
Yet lest one roofless veteran roam,
Mother, sweetheart, and roses—dust,
Add we our gift—A SOLDIER'S HOME!

Early Woburn Town Reports.

We propose in this article to continue our examination of the first printed Woburn town reports. These though little appreciated at the time, and thrown aside as worthless after reading, have become in the lapse of years extremely scarce. We refer to the broadside style of town report, that in which the printed matter is displayed after the form of a handbill, and printed on one side of the sheet only. We know of a collection of nine such Woburn reports, and these, in fact, are all the Woburn reports of that character that we suppose can now be found.

The year 1810 seems to have been the time when printed town reports in the suburban towns about Boston first came into being. These were intended to be of the nature of an annual report, covering the town's "financial year," and were confined exclusively to expenditures. Our neighboring town of Arlington, then known by the name of West Cambridge, issued its first printed town report in May, 1811, having voted in that year that the selectmen and town clerk cause a printed statement of the expenses of the town to be made, and to furnish each family with one of the same. The first statement of that town covers the year from May, 1810, to May, 1811. This was a broadside.

The town of Charlestown, according to a writer in the "Memorial History of Boston" (vol. iii. p. 567) ordered in 1804, a statement of the town's expenses to be printed annually and distributed among the citizens. Mr. J. F. Hunnewell in his "Bibliography of Charlestown," p. 43, does not appear to quite agree with this, when he mentions under the date of the year 1810, a statement of the expenses of the town of Charlestown from May, 1809, to May, 1810, —dated April 21, 1810,—a broadside, which, he says, was the "first printed annual report of town expenses" for that place. He also says that the broadside style of publication was continued at Charlestown till the year 1823, when a pamphlet form was adopted. The broadside style of publication was continued in Woburn as late certainly as 1831.

Still 1810 seems to be near the year when these "early and rare reports," as Mr. Hunnewell styles them, first appeared. The town records of Woburn contain the following items regarding the earliest printed Woburn town reports:

April 26, 1810. Art. 5, of warrant —"To see if the town will adopt any method to furnish the inhabitants of said town with printed copies of the expenditures and appropriations of all moneys voted in the year 1810; said copies to be delivered to each inhabitant of said town on, or before, the 25th of February, 1811, or do anything respecting the same."

May 7, 1810. Action of Meeting on Art. 5 of warrant: Art. 5.—Relative to printed copies of the expenditures of money—Voted and directed the selectmen to provide printed copies of the expenditures of money for the year 1810, and furnish each inhabitant in the town with one of said copies agreeable to the warrant.

Again, March 23, 1812, article 11, of warrant—To see if the town will take any measures to have published the expenditure of their money the last year, ending the first of April, 1812, or do anything relative to the same: and on April 6, 1812, voted to choose a committee to attend and have all the town accounts for the year 1811 up to March, 1812, printed. Voted to have the above committee consist of the three following gentlemen, viz.:—Major John Wade, Capt. Isaac Richardson, Capt. John Edgell.

All the above action was prior to the date of the copy of the first printed broadside town report before us, which was for the year 1812 and 1813, and dated Woburn, January 19, 1814, prepared, however, by the same above named committee.

A. D. 1810.

What was the state of society in a town like Woburn at the period of which we are speaking? In many respects the ways of the people were counterparts of our own. In certain directions, indeed, we might note a narrowness of range and a contraction of outlook. The community was officered by gentlemen of good family, good morals, and steady nerves. The population was chiefly of English descent. A type of manhood ruddier and more robust than we are accustomed to meet was to be seen in the streets. A few men were accepted as the leaders of the community, and lived under a wholesome conviction of responsibility for its good behavior.

Rooms in winter were made cheerful by the glow of great logs, making the flickering light of candles not objectionable. Reading or studying in the evening were difficult matters, especially for aged eyes. Society was the resort for rational recreation and solid instruction. Its standards were established, not by the young and frivolous, but by persons of years and experience, skilled in the art of conversation. The women of the farms had little of the education derived from books, but a good deal of natural capacity. Their resources were abundant for those in sickness, and their cookery excellent for those in health. Thus speaks Mr. Josiah P. Quincy, in effect, in his excellent chapter on "Social Life in Boston" in the Memorial History of Boston recently published.

Let us quote him further on another suggestive and interesting phase of his subject: Funerals were occasions of much ceremony, and all associations with the close of life were of a gloomy character. The doleful sound from the tombs, to which a favorite hymn challenged the attention, was audible in all the pauses of existence. The windows of the house which death had entered were closed for a long period. Those who lost parents wore mourning for three years, and widows never left it off. The dead were often carried by bearers, and must be borne past the town house, or through a portion of the main street. Nothing was omitted from the rites of sepulture which might add a pang to the pain of separation.

To the above might be added that wine was used universally at ordinations and funerals, and on all festive occasions. A thorough militia organization was kept up, and the town clerk of of Woburn was very particular to give to every town official his appropriate military title, and to that particularity that the same was included in a marginal line on the page of the town records.

BROADSIDE REPORTS OF WOBURN.

The broadside reports of Woburn before us are nine in number and belong to the years from 1812 to the year 1831. It is not a complete set by any means for the years it covers, but is probably as good as any that can now ever be collected. They all bear the similar title, "statement of expenses of the Town of Woburn," and all include the time from April 1 to April 1, of each of the years named. The following is a list of them, and, for convenience sake, are appended the amount of appropriations and expenditures on each.

1812-13.

This report has been already described in a previous article. This is the earliest printed report supposed to be extant.

1814-16.

The expenditures for two years on one sheet, submitted by Josiah Richardson, John Eames, and Samuel Tidd, committee, dated Woburn May 19, 1816. The items are arranged under the headings "schools," "supporting the poor," and "contingencies." Amount of appropriation for schools, $500, for both years. School committee men, Silvanus Plympton, Henry Parker, Jason Richardson, Calvin Richardson, Elijah Wyman, Bartholomew Richardson, Samuel T. Richardson, Zachariah Symmes, Jonathan Tidd, Junior, and Joseph Parker. Rowe and Hooper, 78 State street, Boston, were the printers of the report. Citizens mentioned: Jonas Munroe, John Tay, John Wade Philip Abbot, John Eames (assessor), Henry Parker (drafted soldier, in 1814), John Odin (for a gun for the use of the town), Bowen Buckman (for a cartridge box), Elijah Leathe (for poling the road), Edmund Parker, Samuel Richardson, Jr., John Edgell (assessor), Luke Reed (assessor), Jesse Convers, Jacob Pierce, Caleb Richardson, Marshall Fowle (collecting taxes and refreshments furnished the assessors), Ebenezer Lawrence, James F. Baldwin, Josiah Parker, Abel Pierce, John Scottow, and Samuel Tidd. Several of the items related to the repairing of bridges. Rowe & Hooper were paid for printing bills of expenses for 1813, $7; and for printing bills of expenses for 1814, the same amount.

John Scottow was paid for "oiling" the hearse in 1814 and 1815, the sum of $2.91.

John Wade received pay for articles furnished paupers, and cash paid for powder for the town stock.

"Oiling" the hearse shows that the town had the use of that article, and the "oiling" may refer to the painting or "dressing" given to make that sombre vehicle more inviting or presentable. In 1798 the parish used a pall. The two burying-grounds were in the charge of the parish. The town does not appear to take any interest in the public burying-grounds till 1806.

1820-21.

The next report, 1820-21, in the series before us, submitted by John Eames and Leonard Thompson, committee, is of small size, and printed by Edgar W. Davies, No. 69 Broad street, Boston. The sum voted for schools was $600. The school committee were Leonard Thompson, Charles Flagg, Asa Locke, Calvin Richardson, and Samuel Richardson, Jr. Levi Abbott seemed to have the principal charge of supporting the poor. [Jonas Munroe seemed to have the same office, 1814-16.] Calvin Richardson, Jesse Richardson, Aaron Hill, Wyman Weston, and Luke Tidd received pay in relation to repairs of bridges. Jacob Convers and Ezra W. Reed received pay for repairing the magazine. Marshall Fowle for his services as an assessor, for his services as clerk, for premium for collecting taxes, and for refreshments for the assessors, received, in all, $93.17, for the first, $10, for the second, $8, for the third, $68.17, and for the last,—the refreshments,—$7.

John Wade, for his services as treasurer, received $10.

John Edgell for his services as an assessor, received $8, and Samuel Tidd, assessor, received $10.

We postpone the further consideration of this subject to another article.—C.

Laughter as a Medicine.

A short time since, two individuals were lying in a room very sick, one with brain fever and the other with an aggravated case of the mumps. They were so low that watchers were needed every night, and it was thought doubtful if either one could recover. A gentleman was engaged to watch over night, his duty being to wake the nurse whenever it became necessary to administer medicine. In the course of the night both watcher and nurse fell asleep. The man with the mumps lay watching the clock, and saw that it was time to give the fever patient his potion. He was unable to speak aloud or to move any portion of his body except his arms, but seizing a pillow, he managed to strike the watcher in the face with it. Thus suddenly awakened the watcher sprang from his seat falling to the floor, and awoke both the nurse and fever patient. The incident struck the sick men as very ludicrous, and they laughed heartily at it for some fifteen or twenty minutes. When the doctor came in the morning he found his patients vastly improved; said he never saw so sudden a turn for the better and now both are up and well. Who says that laughter is not the best of medicines? And this reminds the writer of another case. A gentleman was suffering from an ulceration of the throat, which at length became so swollen that his life was despaired of. His household came to his bedside to bid him farewell. Each individual shook hands with the dying man and went away weeping. Last of all came a pet ape, and shaking the man's hand went away also with his hands over his eyes. It was so ludicrous a sight that the patient was forced to laugh so heartily that the ulcer broke and his life was saved.

A Chinese Luncheon.

We adjourned to the apartments of the young ladies, and had luncheon of confections, fruit, pastry, salad and tea. Only the old Tai Tai (or lady) ate with me. The young wives and daughters ate afterward. The divan on which we sat, and on which was placed a small dining table, was coverad with a magnificent wadded quilt. The centre piece was yellow silk, with crimson brocade pattern, richly mixed with gold. * * * The opposite divan was covered with a quilt of greater beauty—white satin embroidered in pink and gold and green. While at luncheon the whole household of women came in and partook of melon seeds and sweetmeats. Some of the nieces of the old Tai Tai came in with the children. There were many fine-looking women among them. * * * Just at sunset dinner was served. None but the old Tai Tai and I dined, although there was ample provision for the 30 or 40 women and girls who sat around the room talking and amusing the little ones. The viands were deliciously cooked, and as course after course was sent in I became quite bewildered. The decorations on the various dishes were highly artistic. When dinner was ended two beautifully lacquered basins were brought in, with hot water and a small napkin, which the lady wrung out and handed to me.—Old Highways in China.

Slightly in Error.

He was an Englishman, tall, blonde and short-sighted. He strolled abroad at early morn to view the lordly homes where the great and wealthy dwell. A figure in white at a top window attracted his attention. He polished his glass and critically surveyed the apparition. Ha! a lady, and a brunette. Attracted by his aristocratic appearance she was gazing on him. He lifted his hat—the figure bowed. Clearly a case of love at first sight. And the locality, too. Doubtless an heiress. Try her with another bow and a handkerchief wave. Heavens! the bow and the salute returned. Will he ring the bell and beg for an introduction to the fair flirt? He has heard of the free-and-easy manners of our San Francisco belles, but this exceeds his most extravagant expectation. His hand is on the door-bell when a voice from the garden, and a gruff one, too, said:

"What the deuce are you mashing our Chinaman for? Can't Jim clean the windows without you making eyes at him?—News-Letter.

Ready Made Journalists.

Cornell university is in the ready made journalist business. A course of lectures on journalism is given and the students are then led to believe that they are competent editors, qualified to perform any duty in a newspaper office. College students have to reconstruct a good deal of their "knowledge" and acquire much practical and useful information after graduation before they are fitted to get a living, and these ready made journalists from Cornell will find a big post-graduate course on their hands when they enter upon newspaper work. The training that "journalists" most need is a thorough study of political, social and economic science, beside the practical training that is had in actually doing newspaper work.

LITERARY NOTICES.

THE POPULAR SCIENCE MONTHLY makes no claims on its pictures; but when it comes to the reading-matter, which nourishes intelligence and makes people wiser and really better informed, this magazine is easily at the head of the list of American monthlies. It has no equal in the practical instructiveness of its pages. The June number is perhaps less brilliant than its predecessor for May, but there is a striking excellence in its contents. Henry Gannett opens with Are we to become Africanized? Professor Benedict, develops his interesting conclusions on the correlations of thought and organization. M. de Laveleye writes at much length on The State versus the Man, in answer to Spencer's Man versus the State. Spencer replies briefly but very effectively. Professor Flower expounds Whales, Past and Present, with illustrations. The Fuel of the Future, Sulphurous Disinfectants, Concerning Kerosene, and The Mediterranean of Canada, are very readable papers. The Ways of Monkeys is an entertaining study in a fascinating branch of natural history; Moths and Moth-Catchers is a timely paper by one of our first entomological authorities. Mattieu Williams closes his valuable series of papers on The Chemistry of Cookery. There are a sketch and portrait of Dr. Alfred Brehm, the distinguished German naturalist and traveler, recently deceased; and the closing departments are full of critical discussion and varied miscellaneous scientific information. New York: D. Appleton & Company. Fifty cents a number, $5 a year.

One Thing he Can't Understand.

"One thing I can't understand," said a young husband to-day, "is how quick a woman can forget some things. A year ago when I was courting my wife, I had only to say music, and she was ready to knock a spavined old piano her father owned clear off its legs; but now that she has a $600 article I bought her last fall, I can't get her to play the simplest tune. She's so out of practice, and can't remember a note.' She remembers all the fool things I used to say to her, and throws them at me pat enough when I don't happen to agree with her views of life, but when it comes to remembering the accomplishments that brought out the compliments she can't be depended on. What a pity it is that young people can't go on courting always, resting satisfied with the assurance that their respective parents were married."—Milwaukee Journal.

Three Reasons

Why every one needs, and should take, Hood's Sarsaparilla in the spring:—

1st: Because the system is now in its greatest need. Hood's Sarsaparilla gives strength.

2d: Because the blood is sluggish and impure. Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies.

3d: Because, from the above facts, Hood's Sarsaparilla will do a greater amount of good now than at any other time. Take it now.

The Taggar.

One time there was a man who had a taggar, it was a show, and the man tuk the money for to get in. The man had a big paper nailed on to the taggar's den: "The Roil Bengoil Taggar, sometimes called the monnerk of the jungle. Hands off. No techin' the taggar—"

The monnerk of the jungle it was always layin down with its nose tween its pos, and the folks which had paid for to get in was mad cos it wudont wook, and rore like distant thunder. But the show man said, "That's ol right when I get a new cage done, but this is the same cage which the ole feller broke in Oregon; time he eat up the seventeen men and their families." Then the folks would ol stand back and tok in whispers while the taggar slep.

But one day a feller who was drunk, he took to punchin' the taggar with the masthead of his umbrella, which stampeded the audience wild and wimmin folks they stood out the chairs, and hollered like it was a mouse, but the young chap he kept a jabbing the the monnerk of the jungle crewel.

Pretty soon the monnerk it bellered offle riggled but the feller kep pokin like he was a firemen to a steam engine.

Bimeby the monnerk jumped onto his hine feets and shucked itself out of its skin and rolled up its sleefs and spit onto its hands and spoke up and sed.

"I'll bed am if I can't just whollop the pea-green stuffin out o' the gumdasted goloot which has been a proddin' this ere taggar!"

And he came down out of the back door of the cage and lit on that drunk feller. And the adjince was a stonish.

"A fardel for thy fast, thou fastious fellow, thou! Thou can'st not class a kiss in list of luxuries."

"Nay, sunny siren, but that much depends upon the style and fashion of the kiss. If't be to kiss the hand that smites thee, love, or drop the portals of that mouth upon the clammy labials of an Antony, then it is dubious luxury indeed. But then, fair Psyche, if it be to taste the rosy parallelograms that marge the portals of thy tongue's rich utterance, I hold it 'mong the daintiest of tests whereby we prove our lenten self-denial."

"Here's sweet concessions to thy speech, good sir, as far as to thyself it doth pertain. But doth it not thine abnegation tinge with such unkindness as the book condemns, when thou, in practicing privation's part, do make another suffer in the act?"

"Hi! yi! there's quits for conscience in thy speech, and tho' I'd vow to quite deny myself the veriest contributors to bliss, I fear me, fairly, that I fain must hold my cold compunctions in the crypt of doubt, and put indorsement on thy sentiment with buss that blossoms at thy liplet's brink."

"Yum! yum! That yokes me youthful heart with yearns, and leaves me longing for my lusciousness. Pray, wilt thou kiss me for me mother now?"

"Aye, arch and artful maiden, so I will! And sith my energies are bent upon this species of sweet service for my friend, if thou'lt but schedule me thy relatives all, I'll kiss thee for thy num'rous kith and kin."

His Services Accepted

It was at Heidelburg that a quiet citizen, leaving the cars, said to a swaggering student:

"Sir, you are crowding me! Keep back a little bit, sir!"

The student turned fiercely, and said in a loud tone, "Do you not like it? Well, sir, I am at your service whenever you please!"

"Oh, thank you!" said the traveler. "Your offer is very kind, and you may carry my valise to the hotel for me."

The student fled amid shouts of laughter.—Heidelburg Zeitung.

Cures a Terrible Case of Gravel When Other Help Failed.

What is Gravel? what causes it, and who are most liable to it? It is frequently attended with acute pain, and unless relief can be found, produces inflammation and death. Both sexes and all ages are liable to it, although men who have reached or passed middle age are its most common victims. Nothing is more urgently needed than a reliable medicine for Gravel, as the disease seems on the increase, and we are glad to say that such a specific is now before the public in the form of DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, of Rondout, N. Y. We put in evidence the following letter, selected from many similar communications:

PITTSFIELD, MASS., March, 1884.

Dr. David Kennedy.

DEAR SIR:—You have a right to know, and I desire the public to know my experience with Gravel and my remarkable recovery through the use of your "FAVORITE REMEDY." I am a carpenter living in this place, and there are plenty of witnesses to the truth of what I say. My first comparatively slight attack of Gravel was in the year 1878. It passed away, and I had little more trouble until last July, 1883. One day when at work in my shop I was suddenly seized with a keen and terrible pain in my left side. I consulted two physicians at once. One said: "I can do nothing for you. Your case is incurable!" I was frightened and went to the second, who said little, but gave me a prescription. It did no good.

Then began a series of experiences the agony and horror of which words cannot depict. Think of it! I was sometimes taken in the street, and would fall, writhing with agony, upon the sidewalk. It was death in life. Thank Heaven, I then heard of "KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY," through Mr. P. P. Cooley. I had not used half a bottle when I passed three stones in succession, one of which was nearly one-half an inch long. I persevered with the medicine, the system gradually abated, and I have had no more trouble since. I am well, thanks to you and "FAVORITE REMEDY." Yours most gratefully, JAMES D. KENNEDY.

What "FAVORITE REMEDY" did in this case it has done in many others.

MALARIA.

As an anti-malarial medicine
DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S

has won golden opinions. No traveler should consider his outfit complete unless it includes a bottle of this medicine. If you are exposed to frequent changes of climate, food and water, Favorite Remedy should always be within your reach. It expels malarial poisons, and is the best preventative of chills and malarial fever in the world. It is especially offered as a trustworthy specific for the cure of Kidney and Liver complaints, Constipation and all disorders arising from an impure state of the blood. To women who suffer from any of the ills peculiar to their sex Favorite Remedy is constantly proving itself an unfailing friend—a real blessing. Address the proprietor, Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. $1 bottle, 6 for $5, by all druggists.

The Woburn Journal

The Last Words and Dying Speech of Levi Ames,

Who was executed at Boston, on Tuesday, the 21st day of October, 1773, for burglary. Taken from his own mouth and published at his desire, as a solemn warning to all, more particularly young people.

There is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death.—Prov. 14: 12.

I, Levi Ames, aged twenty-one years, was born in Groton, New Eng- of a credible family; my father's name was Jacob Ames, who died when I was but two years old. I am the first of the family who was ever disgraced. My prevailing sin, and that for which I am soon to suffer death, was thieving, to practice which I began early and pursued it constantly, except at certain intervals when my conscience made me uneasy, and I resolved to do so no more. My first thefts were small. I began this awful practice by stealing a couple of eggs, then a jack-knife, after that some chalk. But being detected and reproved for the crime I thought to repent and reform; but found myself powerfully urged to repeat this wretchedness by the temptation of the devil, with whom I again complied. My tender mother seeing me take such horrid courses, and dreading the consequences, often entreated and pleaded with me to turn from my evil ways, and I as often assured her that I would. Had I followed her good advice and council I never should have come to this shameful and untimely end. But I am now made to feel the anger of God against me, for my disobedience to my parent! God will not let disobedient children pass unpunished.

Having got from under my mother's eye I still went on in my old ways of stealing; and not being permitted to live with the person I chose to live with, I ran away from my master, which opened a wide door to temptation, and helped on my ruin; for being indolent in temper, and having no honest way of supporting myself, I robbed others of their property.

About this time I stole a gun at Woburn, from Josiah Richardson, and a large silver spoon from one Mr. Howard of the same town. I then broke open the shop of Mr. Edward Hammond, in the county of Plymouth, and took out a piece of broadcloth, and some money. I stole between twenty and thirty dollars from another person whose name I have forgot. I broke open the shop of Mr. Jonas Cutler, of Groton, and took from him a good piece of broadcloth, a quantity of silk mits, and several pieces of silk handkerchiefs. I also stole a lot of money from Jonathan Hammond of Waltham, and a hat from Jonas Dix, Esq. of the same place; and when in gaol at Cambridge I stole a silver spoon which was brought from Mr. Raddish's the gaol-keeper, for me to eat with. I robbed the Rev. Mr. Clark of Lexington of a tankard, twelve tea-spoons, one large dit., a pepper-box and two pair of sugar-tongs. I also stole from Mr. Keith of Natick two coats and jackets, with which I dressed myself when I came to Boston; I gave John Battlet wenty dollars to make up the matter with Mr. Keith being part of the money I stole from Mr. Hammond of Waltham. I stole ten or eleven dollars from Mr. Symonds of Lexington, whose son-in-law, Mr. Meriam, while I was in prison, informed me where the money was and how to get it, but he never received any of it. I supposed he gave me this information through envy against his father-in-law, through whose means he was then confined for debt. I stole a pair of silver buckles and a pair of turned pumps out of a pair of saddlebags at Season's tavern in Waltham; the buckles were marked I. D. which I delivered to a man in Marlborough, a blacksmith, to make up with him for some stockings I took from him: his name I do not remember. I twisted a padlock and entered the cellar of a minister's house in Marlborough; I then went up the cellar stairs, lighted a candle in order to get some victuals. I have several times taken sundry articles off of lines, hedges, fences, bushes, apple-trees, grass, &c., but cannot recollect the owners. Tho. Cook and I stole two great coats and sold them. I have left three shirts and several pair of stockings at Scipeo Burnham's at Newbury-Port; I then went by the name of Isaac Lawrence, I stole an ax out of a cart and hid it in a stone wall between Watertown and Boston (the night before I took the money from Mr. Hammond) in Little Cambridge, near to Mr. Dana's tavern. There I left it with a design to sell it when I came back. I broke open the house of Mr. Rice in Marlborough, on the Lord's day, while the people were gone to public wership having been advised to it by Daniel Cook, when we were in Concord gaol; was taken in the house and returned the things to the owner.

Some time last fall I saw Tho. Cook who told me he had seven pounds of plate lnd, viz. a tankard, a number of table spoons, and one soop ditto; these he dug up * * * him; we carried them away from that place and hid them under a stone wall near a barn, close to the sign of the bull on the Waltham road, but he never informed me where he got them, or how he came by them; he offered me half if I would dispose of them, but I was afraid to do it.

Last June an Irishman, who called himself Thomas Smith, of middle statue, much marked with the smallpox, told me he knew of a watch which was taken from his excellency some time ago, and I suspected he was the person who stole it, because he said he knew the Governor's house so well. He also assured me that his excellency had a considerable quantity of money in the house, and asked me to go with him to get it. I denied, knowing the Governor had many servants, which I urged as a reason why I could not join him. He said he had one to assist him whose name he would not tell me, unless I would be one of the party. He further declared that he should go well armed with swords and pistols. Upon this I absolutely refused, because I never thought of murdering any man amidst all my scene of thieving. He thought to prevail on me by telling me there was a chest of dollars in the house, but I would not go with them.

In the same month (June) I lodged in a tavern in Killingsly or Promfret in Connecticut government, on the Lord's day, where he eat and drank and went off with * * *. A few evenings after I returned, shoved up the * * * in my hand, stole a box with a Johannes some knee buckles and sleeve buttons for which I was apprehended, confessed the fact, returned the goods and set at liberty. The same night as above I took a horse out of Killingsley and rode him down to the county of Worcester where I broke a shop open about daylight, and took a quantity of copper and a remnant of satin. The owners have got them again. I also robbed a baker at Rhode Island of a quantity of coppers which I found in three baskets, and spent them.

As for Atwood, in company with whom I committed that theft for which I am soon to die, my acquaintance began with him in the following manner—I was standing at a countryman's cart in the market at Boston, asking the price of a turkey. Atwood came up to me and we fell into a conversation. He asked me to walk with him to Beacon Hill, which I did. We asked each other about the place of resort. I told him I lodged at Capt. Dickey's. He said his money was all spent except one copper, which he had in a snuff-box. I asked him where he belonged? He said he was born in an Island in the West Indies and that his parents lived in Rhode Island. I asked him where he had been? He told me he lately came from Portsmouth. I told him that since he had no money if he would go with me to my lodgings I would give him some dinner. I asked him what he would do with some silver plate if he had any to dispose of? He told me he knew of a goldsmith who would take it because he had sold some to him before. I told him I knew where there was some, and if he would go with me we would get it, to which he consented. We went to Menotomy (now Arlington) and found it hid in a stonewall. We kept it about us till next morning. He told me he knew of a vendue master in Boston with whom he had lived, who had a large sum of money by him, and if I would join him, we could get it. I asked him who it was and he said Mr. Bicker. We accordingly agreed to steal it. At night, after we had slept we went to a joiner's shop into which I went and took out three chisels; we then went to Mr. Bicker's house and on the way were hailed by a watchman to whom we answered "Friend." Having come to Mr. Bicker's house we found * * * pulled off our shoes, and Jos. Atwood, with my assistance, climbed to the window, and entered the house, and opened the doors for me; we then went together to the desk, which we broke open with the chizels. Atwood pulled out the first drawer and said there was small change in it, which was all he could find. As he was going away I pulled out another drawer in which I found a bag of silver coin. After that we came out and went to fox-hill near the powder house, where we had the plate which we had kept in our pockets while we were at supper, and when we entered Mr. Bicker's house. The small change in silver which Atwood took were equally divided, tho' the gold which Atwood had then secreted I knew nothing of, nor did he ever give me any of it. Before sunset I saw him at Mr. Bell's, when he informed we that a warrant was out for me. He went with me to Winisimit and advised me to go over the ferry, promising to meet me at Portsmouth the Wednesday following at the house at which he was taken. I returned again to Boston to see if any of my clothes were done which I had bespoke. On Saturday I was taken by Mr. Bicker and committed to gaol, and saw Atwood no more till I saw him in the prison-yard after he was apprehended.

Thus I have given an account of that shocking manner in which I have filled up a short life, and of which I am now ashamed. May God forgive me my dreadful wickedness, committed both against him and many worthy men of whom also I would ask forgiveness, it being not in my power to make restitution, which, if it was, I would readily do it. I also forgive from my heart Joseph Atwood, who swore on my trial that I entered the house of Mr. Bicker first and let him in, when he knows in his conscience that he entered first and let me in. I die in charity with all mankind. But though I lived such a * * life it was not without some severe checks of conscience. For after I have stolen I have been so distressed at times as to be obliged to go back and throw the stolen goods at the door, or into the yard, that the owners might have them again. And not long before I was taken for the last robbery I passed by the gallows on Boston Neck with some stolen goods under my arm, when my conscience terribly smote me, and I thought I should surely die if I did not leave off this course of life. What I then feared is now come upon me.

Having thus given an account of my dreadful life of wickedness I would also mention the manner in which I have conducted, and my mind has been exercised during my confinement in gaol, since the awful sentence of death was passed upon me.

At first I had some hope of escape; that I should by some means get out of prison. When I saw that was impossible I endeavored to reconcile myself as well as I could; my conscience made me uneasy; I thought I had been so wicked I should certainly go to Hell. And when I considered how short my time was I knew I could not do good works to go to Heaven. To Hell then I was sure I should go. And I seemed to have such an awful fright of Hell and the grave that I was very much terrified indeed. I then took to drinking strong liquor in order to drown my sorrow. But this would not do, I left that off and took to reading the Bible, my conscience became so uneasy that I could have no rest. O, a wicked conscience who can bear! I tried to pray, but it came into my mind that the prayer of the wicked would not be heard! Yet I could not help crying for mercy. I am at times ready to despair of the mercy of God. But the ministers who visited me assured me that the blood of Christ was sufficent to cleanse me from all sin, which gave me a little encouragement to go on crying to God.

I now began to understand something of that law of God which I had broken, as condemning me for the wickedness of my heart as well as life—I saw that I was undone, that my heart and life were bad beyond all account. I saw that if God should damn me a thousand times he would be just and I should have nothing to say. In this condition I was a week before the time first fixed for my execution. The loss of body and soul made me tremble; though I could not freely tell all that I felt to all that came to see me. I thought that if I should be executed in this condition, I must be dragged like a bullock to the slaughter.

But God's name be blessed forever; that on Friday evening, the 8th instant, I turned over a little book which was put into my hands, in which I saw, Ezek. 36, 26, 27. "A new heart will I give you, and a new spirit will I put upon you: and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you a heart of flesh. And I will pour out my spirit upon you," &c. This at once surprised me: I knew that I wanted this new heart; and could not help looking on this as God's gracious promise to me: and I tho't that as I knew God could not lie, if I would not believe this, I would believe nothing: my mind at once felt easy. I now saw that I had sinned against God all my life all my life with as much envy, as ever I killed a snake; which I always hated.

After this I had, and now have such a view of the way of salvation by Christ, that I felt and do feel my soul rest on him as my only hope of salvation. Since which I have found peace of mind, anger against myself for sin, and a desire to be made holy. At times the terrors of death seem to be removed; at other times I am full of fears lest I should deceive myself. Yet I cannot but hope that Christ has freely pardoned me. On him I desire to rest living and dying; and to give him all the praise.

And now as a dying man I mention the following things, viz:

1. To keep your doors and windows shut on evenings, and secured well to prevent temptation. And by no means to use small locks on the outside one of which I have twisted with ease when tempted to steal. Also not to leave linen or clothes out at night, which have often proved a snare to me. Travellers I advise to secure their saddle bags, boots, &c. in the chambers where they lodge.

2. Parents and masters I entreat who have any concern for, and connection with children, to have an eye over their actions; and to take special care for their precious and immortal souls.

3. All Persons whether old or young who may see these lines, spoke as it were by a poor, dying, sinful man, now bound in chains, and who has but a short space of time before he must launch into an endless eternity; guard against every temptation to sin. If at any time you are tempted to do any thing like the poor soul who now speaks to you, earnestly pray to God for strength to resist the temptation, as well as for repentance for your past sins.

The youth more especially I would solemnly caution against the vices to which they are most inclined. Such as bad Women, who have undone many, and by whom I also have suffered much; the unlawful intercourse with them I have found by sad experience, leading to almost every sin. I also warn them to guard against the first temptation to disobedience to parents. Had I regarded the many kind entreaties and reproofs of my tender Mother, I had never come to this shameful and untimely death.

Profane cursing and swearing I also bear my dying testimony against, as a horrid sin, and very provoking to God.

Nor must I omit to mention gaming, to which young people are much inclined and which at this day prevails to the ruin of many. For when a youth hath gamed away all his money, he will be tempted even to steal from his master or parents, in order to get at it again. Besides, this sin leads to drunkenness, another dreadful vice.

There is one sin more that I must warn all persons against, and that is, a profanation of the Lord's day, and of public worship. Oh! how many such days have I despised, and when others have been engaged in serving God, I have been employed in wickedness, which I now confess with grief of heart.

4. I have one request more to make from the borders of the grave, a compliance with which is earnestly desired by a poor dying mortal: which is, That no person, old or young, would ever reflect on my poor dear Mother, or Brother, or any of my relations, on account of my shameful and untimely death, who could not prevent my wickedness, and have trouble too much to be borne, by the life I have lived, and the death I am to die.

I desire sincerely to thank all the good ministers of the town, who have taken great pains with me ever since the sentence of death was past upon me, to convince me of my unhappy situation, of my lost and undone condition by nature, of my aggravating sins by practice, and of the infinitely free rich grace and mercy of God, only through the merits and meditation of my dear saviour Jesus Christ. I also thank all the good people both of town and country, who, I have reason to think, have offered up many prayers at the throne of grace for me. I also thank Mr. Otis, the gaol-keeper and family, who have all been very kind to me during my confinement in Gaol.

And now may Jesus Christ forgive me, the worst of sinners, as he did the thief on the cross, if he does not, I am forever undone in soul and body!

LEVI AMES.

The law of finding, says a writer, is this: The finder has the clear title against the world except the owner. The proprietor of a coach, or railroad car, or a shop has no right to demand the property or premises. Such proprietors may make regulations in regard to lost property which will bind their employes, but they cannot bind the public.

One cubic inch of gold, says the Jeweler's Circular, is worth $210; one cubic foot, $312,380, and one cubic yard, $9,796,762 (counting the ounce at $18). At the commencement of the Christian era there were altogether $127,000,000 worth of gold, but at the time of the discovery of America only $57,000,000 remained. At present the value of all the gold in the world is counted $6,900,000,000.

He Had Seen Mermaids.

"About mermaids," said the captain, as he stood upon the unfinished end of the seawall and surveyed the landlubber reporter of the San Francisco Call with an expression of pitiful condescension. "Why, I've see'd the most wonderful things in that line. Well, we were over in the China sea. One night, just after we'd passed the Formosa group, I was aroused out of my bunk by the mate, who sings out 'Mermaids aboard!' Out I jump and gets on deck in a turn of a helm. You can splice my mains' if there wasn't 'bout twenty of the biggest mermaids a floppin' around the deck I ever seed. Two of 'em had got the fellows on watch cornered and was a kissin' 'em.

"The mate had took to the riggin' after hailing me. I was a leetle s'prised, though I had seen mermaids afore, but never more'n one at a time. 'Ladies', said I, 'make yourselves at home,' says I, and you bet your hawsers they did. They quit floppin' and all got on the rail, side by side, a holdin' their tails in their hands and commenced to sing, and I jest tell you they whooped things up. They skipped through the 'Sweet By and By' and took several reefs in the 'Red, White and Blue' and slewed to port on a 'Life on the Ocean Wave' in beautiful style."

"Didn't see them again, did you?" asked a landlubber.

"Well, yes. The next day we was becalmed. There wan't a smell of a breeze, and whistlin' for it didn't do any good. I was madder'n a stuck whale, for I wanted to make a quick passage. Suddenly I sees a commotion in the water, and, shiver my binnacle lights, if them mermaids warn't swimmin' around us. One of 'em boarded us as slick as could be and ses, 'Give us a rope.' Well, I throwed 'em one, and I'll lay to on a lee shore if they didn't tow us till we struck a breeze. Got the rope right in their mouths—about fifty of 'em—and pulled us along. I was so 'bleeged to 'em that I threw 'em a mess of looking-glasses, clocks and shoe blacking out of the cargo.

"Next day we struck another calm and I 'spected the mermaids would pull us out again. They were all around a donnin' their mornin' uniform in the glasses. 'Hey!' says I, 'tow us along, will you?' Well, no sooner had I hailed 'em than every one of 'em looked at the clocks which they had slung around their necks. 'Scuse us, cap,' they said, 'we see it's just time to keep our appointment at the bottom,' and cuss me if they didn't all disappear."

Grant and the Skulker.

"General Grant is a firm believer in the mythical lucky star," an old military man said to me last night. "Like Napoleon, he believes what will be will be. I was with Grant in the days preceding the surrender at Appomattox. One afternoon, during one of the numerous skirmishes of those last eventful days, one of the drafted men, a poltroon and a notorious coward, was caught skulking among the horses in the commissary's camp.

"'Let him go,' said the general, 'let him go. A bullet can find a coward in one place as well as in another.'

"Half an hour afterward the soldier was found with a bullet in his brain within the corral of train horses and dead. The general's words had been almost a prophecy."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

All Advertisements, to insure insertion in this paper, must be handed in as early as 10 o'clock on Thursday forenoon.

☞ The Massachusetts civil service bill, including the provision excluding soldiers and sailors from its operation, was passed by a large majority by the House last Tuesday afternoon. In advocating the passage of the bill, with the clause named, Capt. J. P. Crane, the Representative from Woburn, said:

The veterans of his town favored the Stevens' substitute with a few amendments, which he sent to the speaker's desk. Woburn sent 775 men to the front, and he himself is the only one of that number holding an office under the State, and he was elected to it without his knowledge, being absent at the time. But he remembered the soldier as he saw him in Libby Prison, and he wished to do every reasonable thing to remove whatever barrier had been placed between him and the public service.

☞ Reports from the other side of the water indicate that the trouble between England and Russia is not permanently settled, but that fresh difficulties are liable to arise over the Afghanistan question at any time. Russia is far from being amiably disposed towards England, and will therefore seize almost any pretext to being on a war. It would not be at all surprising if within a few months the two nations were at swords' points again.

☞ Some weeks ago it was reported by Democratic organs that June 1st had been decided on as the date on which there would be a general turning out of the "rascals" and gathering in of the faithful. It was expected that those who had their ears close to the ground would hear something drap on that day; but it came and passed and those who were looking for unusual commotion in government offices went to bed disappointed.

☞ Gen. Grant has not been so well since the completion of his book as he was for a few weeks previous. The sore in his throat troubles him considerably, and he is growing thinner and weaker. His anxiety to finish the History of the Rebellion, or the part he took in it, was very great, and it nerved him to keep up until it was done. Its publishers pay him $250,000 for the copyright, with perhaps an added royalty on sales.

☞ It is estimated that there will be a shortage in the western wheat crop this year of 100,000,000 bushels. This is partly due to damage done the fields by the cold weather, but is principally accouted for on the basis of a less acreage sown by the produces of the west. The reason for this, in turn was the great amount of old wheat in store, and the fear of unremunerative prices.

☞ The Metropolitan Police Bill was passed to a third reading in the Senate last Wednesday, so Boston must round up and take it. The bill is all wrong in principle and dangerous in practice, but there is no telling what a modern Legislature will do. They are getting to be about as uncertain as a petit jury.

— We have not heard that Winchester has secured a halt of the Woburn lightning express at her depot yet. Winchester wants the earth, but can't always make the riffles.

— The display-windows of Copeland, Bowser & Co., are as neat and attractive as anything can be. They are large and filled with nice goods that ladies all stop to look at as they pass by.

— Mr. Simonds has put wires for electric lights into Mr. Ellis's store, McDonald's coal office, the Boston Branch, Carter's Skating Academy, and others will follow forthwith.

— Mr. N. J. Simonds has his large factory all wired for the electric lights, and in a short time the dynamos will be placed, the outside wires strung, and the light furnished to consumers.

— Gentlemen who like a first class, high-toned, low-cut summer shoe can be accommodated at Mr. J. Leathe's on demand and at figures that can't be beaten. He has all kinds and prices.

— Our population, the best authorities state, is increasing very fast at present. There is an unusual demand for houses and the supply is short. We can apply for a city charter next winter.

— J. W. and E. F. Johnson are well settled in their new suite of offices in Fox Block, and are very comfortable therein. They are the best, and best finished, rooms in town for professional business.

— When Watson's Illuminator for June hove in sight of this office last week its scintillating rays dispelled one of the densest fogs that has enveloped this section of country for a month of Sundays and produced the most beautiful sunshiney weather at the drop of the hat. The only drawback to the Illuminator is that a body is liable to burst while reading it.

— Trees around the Common that were obliged to succumb to the march improvement and Dr. Harlow's house do not cut a very pretty figure, but the question is, what are you going to do about it?

— The cases against Tenney for rumselling will come up this morning in the District Court by continuance from last Wednesday. Tenney will submit expert testimony on the character of the beer seized.

— There will be divine services with the Holy Communion at Trinity church (Episcopal) next Sunday, June 7, at 10.30 A. M. The Rev. John S. Beers of Boston will officiate. Sunday School at 12. M.

— Our Common is looking uncommonly fine this spring. Those fences, which some people, not having the fear of official dignity before their eyes, have named "Hill's Folly," don't look so very bad, after all.

— Improvements are going on all over town. Here and there new buildings are in process of erection, old ones are undergoing material alterations and repairs, and everything is full of life, push, and get-up-and-get.

— When the business men of Woburn are trying their level best to improve its condition no person will be kindly looked upon who settles into the breeching, gigs back, or craw-fishes. United, we stand; divided, we fall.

— Workmen are rattling the Hart building, lately occupied by Mr. Kenney and the Italian fruit-dealer, like everything. The two rooms are to be thrown into one and finished in good shape for Curtis's notion store.

— A large number of members of the Unitarian church in this village attended some anniversary at Carlisle last Wednesday accompanied by the pastor. The party went up in one of Mr. Jones's capacious and handsome barges.

— The circus brought a tough lot of fakirs to town yesterday. They had not been here three hours before several houses were broken into, a man or two robbed, and other crimes committed. It was the roughest set we have seen yet.

— We call attention to the card of Miss E. M. Titus in this paper. She has the reputation of being a first class dressmaker and entirely competent to teach the art of cutting. Woburn ladies will do well to patronize Miss Titus.

— Mr. P. McDevitt, tailor, 220 Main street, makes an important announcement in our advertising columns. As a fashionable tailor he is "away up in the pictures," and what he says about the business can be relied on. Please read it.

— Last Tuesday afternoon snowflakes were seen to fall in this village. Leastwise, such is the story of an esteemed and veracious gentleman whose businsss headquarters are not a thousand miles from Charlie Strout's stove store.

— Our Representative, Capt. Crane, made a speech in favor of the civil service bill authorizing the appointment of honorably discharged soldiers and sailors who have not passed the civil service examination. The bill was warmly discussed pro and con.

— We are glad to see our esteemed contemporary down by the old depot stand right up in his boots and defend the Police in their efforts to put down rum-selling here. We rejoice thereat, and are exceedingly glad. He is doing yeoman's service in the good cause of temperance.

— The Boston Baseball Club won a game the other day, and a New York paper said Gov. Robinson would appoint a Thanksgiving Day over it. It would be more to the point if the Legislature would make a circus day a legal holiday. The wonder is that they haven't done so before now.

— Stoneham and Winchester furnish considerable work for the Woburn District Court. Leave those communities out and the Clerk would show a small criminal docket. And yet, Stoneham and Winchester set themselves up for dreadful nice places.

— It is in order to remark that this has been a strange sort of a spring. There has been a little very hot weather and a good deal of cold, and on the whole it is safe to say the spring is "backward." But we have the promise of seed time and harvest, and shall probably have both.

— James McGovern, Dennis Kelley and Thomas J. Caroll have been chosen delegates to the convention of the Catholic Total Abstinance Union to be held at Charlestown on June 17, to make arrangements for the great parade of the Union, to take place in Boston, on October 10th next.

— It is reported that the high-up military authorities have decided that Co. G. 5th Regiment (Woburn Mechanic Phalanx) must have a better armory at an early day. We have not had time to trace the report to its fountain-head, and therefore reserve comments for a future occasion.

— Mr. F. W. Ruggles, proprietor of the art store on Main street, will go to Swampscott on the 15th instant to take charge of the Ocean House, which opens for the season on that day. The Ocean is the largest and finest at Swampscott, the management of which will be in the hands of Mr. Ruggles this season.

— Clarence A. Pierce, of the firm of Duren & Pierce, dealers in poultry, will start on a business trip along the banks of the Connecticut river and into Vermont on the 20th of this month. He goes in the interest of the firm, which is a sound one in every respect, square, and entirely worthy of public confidence.

— The good old town of Woburn has in the past sent many of her sons and daughters to other towns and States where they have performed the part of useful and honored citizens. We welcome this week a book by a native of Woburn, which on examination we take to be a very interesting and highly valuable production. It is entitled "Historical Sketches of the Town of Swampscott," by Waldo Thompson, Esq., a resident for fifty years in that place. The book is furnished with a number of handsome illustrations. Mr. Thompson has carefully gleaned from various sources every scrap of history he could, and the result appears in the present volume. He is a son of the late well known Colonel Leonard Thompson of this town.

— Patrick Shields is building a house at No. Woburn; John Horrigan is boss carpenter. Mr. A. M. Colby is erecting a Queen Ann cattage on Montvale Avenue. Margaret McConologue is building a house at No. Woburn, T. R. Corbett is doing the work. The Woburn Iron Foundry is about to put up a large shop, and Mr. Corbett will build it.

— Commencement Day exercises of Boston University took place in Tremont Temple last Wednesday afternoon. Among the graduates was Mr. Francis P. Curran of this place, who has chosen the legal profession as his vocation for life. He is a young man of more than ordinary parts, and bids fair, by steady application to business and books, to get well up in the world.

— The Ladies' Charitable Reading Society of the First Congregational Church held their 70th annual election in the parlors of the church last Wednesday afternoon. It was followed by the annual supper, which was well attended. There were present five members, at least, each over 80 years old, consequently were ten years of age when the society was organized. The meeting last Wednesday was a very pleasant one.

— The Police made a big and very successful raid on the premises of Madame Meehan of Highland street, last Tuesday, and scattered consternation and dismay all around there and in the barn. A big haul of rum et cetera and female curses rewarded the officers, and to say they were jubilant over the find would be drawing it milder than dove's milk. The operation, taken together, probably means durance vile for the lady proprietor of the doggery.

— The County Commissioners ought, by good rights, to build a suitable Court House here for the Fourth Middlesex District Court. The present rooms are entirely too circumscribed for the large and increasing business done, and they are not up to what the dignity of the Bench demands. There should be vaults in which to keep the records, and many other things are absolutely needed for the accommodation of the Court.

— By reference to our advertising columns it will be seen that the Ladies Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. will hold a strawberry festival in the Rooms of the Y. M. C. A. on next Tuesday evening, June 9, the admission to which is put at only 10 cents. Besides strawberries there will be other nice things offered for sale, in addition to which a real good time can be enjoyed. The proceeds will go for the benefit of the Association, for which reason the festival ought to be liberally patronized by our citizens.

— They were all here to see the circus procession and attend the show. There is nothing that we are acquainted with or ever heard of that will draw equal to a circus. Our streets were lined with human beings ranging in age from the wee infant to the octogenarian, all colors, sexes, standing, and previous condition, and they enjoyed the display. Individually, we knocked off work and attended strictly to the circus as in duty bound to do. It was a splendid day for the business.

— The Dedham Standard comes to hand this week with the Business Association's Committee's report on ways and means to benefit the town. It seems Dedham started out last spring to see what could be done in the direction of increasing business and population and at the annual Town Meeting a committee was chosen to investigate, study, conclude, and report in due time, which they have done. The report would make good reading for any community that had a disposition to better its condition.

— The interior of the Munroe & Newton skating rink looks like any thing but what it was built for. It bears no resemblance to a rink, and is growing more so every day. The Sun Electric Lamp Company have a gang of men at work on it, and already the great skating surface is cut up by sundry partitions; work-rooms, apartments for machinery, and offices have been made, and the manufacturers of the lamps will soon be busy in turning out the products, for which there is an encouraging demand.

— The good work of prosecuting liquor-sellers goes bravely on in Woburn with excellent success too. There are a plenty of people ready to enter complaints, to which the Police lend willing ears, and the result is hauls at short intervals. One thing that makes the business easy and not unpleasant for the officers is the official and moral encouragement they receive from the Police Committee and whole Board. Both heartily co-operate with the vigilant conservators of the law, and thus everything is made pleasant and easy-running.

— There has been quite a change in the public offices and rooms in Bank Block. That of the Water Board has been handsomely carpeted, the railing removed, tables placed in the centre and an air of comfort and even luxury created. Mr. Simons's room adjoins this and makes very nice quarters. The old clock is missed, but Mr. Treasurer Dow has it standing in the corner of his office, which was formerly the Collector's. Altogether the change-about is a good one, and Capt. Crane says, now that they have elegant rooms he feels, for the first time, as though he was a member of the Water Board. The Collector's office will be in College Block, where, pretty soon, Mr. Maguire will cordially welcome all those who have taxes to pay.

— We will give some idea of what the Railroad Company proposes to do in the way of building depots on the extension in this town. On Pleasant street at the Centre they expect to erect a passenger depot that will be worth $15,000, and at North Woburn, one that will cost $4,000. The Centre depot will be built to conform in some measure to the surroundings, especialy the Public Library, and probably the same architect will be employed to draw the plans that drew them for that elegant structure. The handsome Common with the soldiers' monument is nigh at hand, and it is among the possibilities that a large public building will take the place of the Armory, etc, by and by. It is proper then that there should be a handsome depot on Pleasant street, and that is what good authority has said to us is to be.

— Hon. B. F. Whittemore of this town, whose place of business is 32 Hawley street, Boston, has secured the New England agency for the sale of Gen. Grant's History of the Rebellion. Almost every dealer and publisher in the six states were active applicants for the agency, but Mr. Whittemore carried off the prize. The work is to be printed and bound by Mr. Clement (Mark Twain) and his nephew, Mr. Webster, and as Mr. Whittemore has been the New England agent for the sale of all of Mark Twain's works, we presume he stood a little better chance than his numerous competitors for getting Gen. Grant's. We do not know what his contract with the publishers is, but he takes copies to the amount of $175,000 The work will be sold by subscription only at from $6 to $18 for the set of two volumes. Securing this agency is a big feather in Mr. Whittemore's cap, we should say, and will be likely to yield him a good bunch of money.

— Rev. Michael D. Murphy, of St. Charles (Roman Catholic) Church, will leave to-morrow for his new charge at Hopkinton, this State, to which he has been recently transferred by the church authorities. He has been pastor of St. Charles nearly seven and a half years, during which period he has done good work as the fruits unmistakably prove, and it is with deep regret that his parishioners now part with him. For nearly six years he has been a member of the Woburn School Board, which position he now honorably fills, and is also a member of the Library Committee, to which he was elected last spring. These are responsible positions, and from the fact of Fr. Murphy's occupying them some idea of the esteem in which he is held here may be obtained. We understand that he goes to a very large parish at Hopkinton where he will find a plenty of work to do, and being a devoted, active, zealous man, we have no doubt he will do it well. Fr. Murphy will take with him to his new field the best wishes of this community, in which the JOURNAL heartily joins.

— One night last week there was a theological controversy with brickbats at a colored peoples' sociable here in town which was settled in the District Court on Wednesday. The sociable being held to make some money for the upbuilding of a colored Zion an insignificant admission fee was charged, and one of the brethren was elected to the office of door-keeper. He was almost too vigilant for his own good. When another brother came along and demanded admittance without presenting the necessary pasteboard and was refused by the gallant guardian at the portals of the edifice a serious unpleasantness arose which calminated in small boulders, bloody noses, and fractured skulls. The intruder was duly complained of and haled before the magistrate by whom he was fined $5 and costs. The gentleman thus mulcted immediately turned round and entered a complaint against the gentleman who preferred to be a door-keeper, etc. to dwelling in the tents, etc. on which the magistrate, not to be partial in treating his sable suitors, fined him $5 and costs, which evened the whole business up, and appeared quite satisfactory all round.

— The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Selectmen for the approval of bills and other business was held last Tuesday afternoon with all the members present.——Minutes of last meeting read and approved.—Report of Chief of Police received, discussed, accepted, and ordered placed on file. Among other things the report showed 32 arrests during the month of May: 31 search warrants served: fines imposed to the amount of $978,98. It was an interesting document.——The bond of Charles K. Conn, elected Constable was duly approved.——The applications of W. H. Curtis, A. Robie and Mrs. John Jennings to sell fireworks on the 4th of July, etc., were refered to Committee on Police.——Petition of Albert Powers for license to keep a billiard and pool tables referred to the Committee on Police.——Petition of C. H. Gooding for victualer's license was granted.——The resignation of W. C. Kenney as Chairman of the Board of Health was accepted, and on motion of Mr. Fergurson Lawrence Reade was chosen to fill his place. ——Insurance on the buildings of the Fire Department to the amount of $8,500 was ordered, and Mr. Thomas H. Hill was directed to place the insurance. Also, $4,000 additional insurance on the Public Library and contents. ——On motion of Mr. Thomas H. Hill, the clerk was directed to correspond with the District Attorney in relation to the release of Neal B en from the House of Correction.——Voted, to grant license to W. E. Carter for his rink for $100 for one year. Mr. Reede moved that the fee be amended so as to read $200, which was lost.——License was granted to F. C. Taylor to keep a pool table.——Voted to pay the keeper of the lockup $50 a year. ——Several committees asked further time.——Bills to the amount of $11,908.13 for the month allowed.—— Adjourn.

— It is always the best way to have matters and things correctly understood. Nobody ever lost anything by carrying an open hand. There was a letter in the last issue of the JOURNAL from Cummingsville which reflected rather severely on some people in that village. It described things as in a bad condition over there. There were insinuations in it against Mr. Maguire, Chairman of the Board of Selectmen, and member of the Police Committee; likewise, against the Police Officer for that section. It came to our ears a few days since that Chief Nelson and his officers knew something about the situation at Cummingsville, so we sought them out and interviewed them. We were informed that they were over on the West Side last Sunday and the Sunday before, and took soundings. They investigated. The result on both days was, that they found everything peaceful and quiet. There were no signs of drunkenness, rows, unusual gatherings, or anything of the kind. They were disappointed, having heard the reports about the goings-on. This seems to show that our correspondent erred in his statements, or else his time of observation and that of the officers was not the same, and that different works were carried on at different hours. But this is the point we were aiming at: judging from his past conduct, Mr. Maguire is a friend to law and order, and is opposed to the kind of conduct described by our correspondent. Last year he stood up in his boots like a major, with Hayden, Ferguson and Bond, in opposition to the saloon influence, and fought granting licenses to unworthy persons all the way through. That was a good record for any man to make. It is equally true that Mr. Maguire, as a member of the Police Committee, heartily approves of the course of Chief Nelson, as do all the repectable people of Woburn. The Committee and Chief are in perfect accord, and the latter is cordially sustained in his splendid crusade against rumsellers by the former. We have thought it best—indeed highly proper—to submit these few thoughts on matters at the West Side, the Committee on Police, and officers, as an elaboration of the text with which we set out, and in justice to all parties concerned. At the same time, we would say, not lowering our standard one jot or tittle, that, if our correspondent was correct in his statements, or approximately so, the offenders at the West Side should be dealt with according to the statute in such case made and provided, and we have no doubt Mr. Maguire will second the motion.

RINK NOTES: A deep and abiding interest is felt and manifested in the games of the Union League, now being played with considerable rapidity and variety of fortunes to the four clubs which compose it. The contests are attended by large and enthusiastic crowds of lovers and patrons of polo, and when ever a game is played in Carter's Academy it is filled to overflowing. Up to a certain date last week a singular feature of the contests was that each one of them had ended in three to nothing—a remarkable state of affairs. The games of the U. L. grow in interest constantly.——Last Wednesday evening the Woburns and Globes of Haverhill played at Carter's, and the Bay States and Chelsea at Chelsea. Last night the Globes and Woburns indulged in another twist at Haverhill, with what issue we have not been able to find out.——Besides polo there has been a good deal of the very best kind of amusement at Carter's Academy since our last issue. That was the case on Memorial Day when general skating held the boards.——The grand concert by the Sam Lucas Combination last Tuesday evening was from fair to middling. Some of the music was passible, and other parts—well, we are no musical critic. On the whole, though, it was well received. ——Attention is called to the programme at the Academy this week printed elsewhere. It will be seen that it is a first class one, with attractive specialties. Please read it clean through.

Memorial Day in Woburn.

At an early hour the American flag waved at half mast from the Liberty-pole, and the Soldiers' Monument on the Common was elaborately and beautifully decorated with bunting, wreathes of choice flowers, and potted plants. The weather was delightful, neither too hot nor cold, but tempered with soft winds and pleasent sunshine. Towards night a rain set in, which interfered with the picnic in Hiawatha Grove by the Celtic Association, but did not effect the decoration services as they, by that time, were well through with.

The unusual quiet, good order, and sobriety that held sway through the day was a subject of general remark. Nothing approaching it had been experienced here on Memorial Day for years, and the contrast was so marked and encouraging that it was alluded to in terms of approval and satisfaction in some of the village pulpits the next day. Through the whole of it scarcely a person was seen in an intoxicated condition, which was very uncommon.

Many of our people went visiting that day in different directions at convenient hours. Some went to see friends and relatives in neighboring towns; others set out to witness the decoration ceremonies as performed elsewhere; but it is safe to say that a majority went to the city and attended the theatres. Outside of the memorial services the going away of so many people invested the town with a Sunday appearance and atmosphere, especially as all the stores, shops and other places of business were closed in the afternoon.

Memorial services here took place as below briefly reported:—At 8.30 o'clock posts 33 and 161 formed at their respective headquarters and, headed by the Woburn band and escorted by a squad of police, marched to the cemetery on Salem street, where the soldiers' graves were decorated by post 161, while post 33 took barges and proceeded to Calvary cemetery, Montvale, to decorate graves there. At 2 o'clock both posts reassembled, and, escorted by the Woburn Mechanic Phalanx, headed by the band and a squad of police, marched to Lyceum Hall, where an oration was delivered by Comrade Gardner A. Churchill of post 26 of Boston. At the conclusion of the exercises, post 161 partook of a collation; post 33 also enjoyed a collation, furnished by the ladies' auxiliary corps. Col. W. T. Grammer acted as toastmaster, to the satisfaction of all present, and after that the post dedicated its headquarters, which have recently undergone repairs. After the exercises in post 33, Comrade John P. Crane, a member of the Legislature, asked an opinion from the assembly on the soldier civil service bill now before that body. The subject was discussed by Comrades Hill, McDonald, Barrett, and Dr. George P. Bartlett, who suggested a resolution, which was made by Comrade Hill, as follows: "While we do not indorse either of the bills, we are in favor of this action: That soldiers and sailors shall not be exempt from the civil service examination, but such examination shall be confined to questions pertaining to the duties of the office for which he seeks appointment." Comrades Thomas H. Hill, Charles A. McDonald and Dr. George P. Bartlett were appointed a committee to seek the introduction of this amendment.

The Branch Extension.

Next Monday Messrs. Brintnel & Ryan, who have been awarded the contract for building the Woburn Branch extension of the Boston and Lowell railroad, will begin the work of construction at both ends of the line, and push it to an early completion. About one hundred men, chiefly Italians, will be divided into gangs, so Mr. Thomas Ryan, brother of one of the contractors, informs us, and placed on the work, and in a few days one of the company's steam shovels will be located probably at the Centre, when those people interested in such matters can see "the gravel fly" by taking up positions along the line of extension.

Mr. Thomas Ryan and others are already on the ground preparing for the commencement of active operations next Monday. Shanties for the laborers will be built along the route, and everything put in ship-shape for a rapid prosecution of the work, of which there will be no let-up until the job is completed. Just when that will be we are unable to state, but as Superintendent Mellen has said that cars would be running regurlarly over the extension by the first of next December, it is probable that in the near neighborhood of that date we may confidently look for a fulfilment of his promise. But we are satisfied to know that the work has been tackled in earnest, and that in due time it will be finished.

MONTVALE.

Rev. I. S. Beers of Natick will officiate at All Saints Chapel at 3 o'clock on next Sunday afternoon. All are invited.

"Doctor," said a despairing patient to his physician, "I am in a dreadful state! I can neither lay nor set. What shall I do?" "I think you had better roost," was the reply.

PROBABLY NEVER

In the history of proprietary medicines has any article met success at home equal to that which has been poured upon HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA. Why, such has been the success of this article, that nearly every family in whole neighborhoods have been taking it at the same time. Every week brings new evidence of the wonderful curative properties of this medicine.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Combines the BEST Remedies of the vegetable kingdom, and in such proportion as to derive their greatest medicinal effects with the least disturbance to the whole system. In fact this preparation is so well balanced in its action upon the alimentary canal, the liver, the kidneys, the stomach, the bowels and the circulation of the blood, that it brings about a healthy action of the entire human organism, that can hardly be credited by those who have not seen the remarkable results that have followed its use. If the Sarsaparilla does not prove sufficiently laxative, take a few doses of HOOD'S VEGETABLE PILLS. It is well in all cases of biliousness to take these pills in connection with the Sarsaparilla for the first ten days. That dull, sleepy, sick feeling can be wholly overcome by the use of these remedies. Will you give them a trial and be yourself again?

An ex-alderman of this city says of Hood's Sarsaparilla, "It is the strongest Sarsaparilla I ever saw."

Each dollar bottle contains one hundred (averages) doses. Sold by all druggists.

Garland Oil Stove
1885.
THE WORLD'S BEST.

This popular Oil Stove is used and recommended by Mrs. Lincoln at the Boston Cooking School. Among its superior features is its new and novel burner, superior to any applied to other stoves and used only on the Garland. It does away with the ratchet wheels for moving the wicks which has been such a nuisance in oil stoves, and affords an even, steady flame. It has two or four-hole boiler tops. Baking, boiling and frying can be done at once.

The Garland is the most popular, convenient and powerful baker in the market to-day. We have sold a great number the last two seasons and they have given decided satisfaction, selling themselves on their own merits. The best is the cheapest.

The following gentlemen athletes compose the Winchester Baseball Club:—Wheeler, captain and c.; Herrick, p.; Cobb, s. s.; Dupee, 1st b.; E. Goddu, 2d b.; L. Goddu, 3d b.; Buxton, l. f.; Gandron, c. f.; Arnold, r. f.; Shattuck and Nichols, substitutes. The grounds are in Bacon's field.

Boston Courier: There was a sort of informal opening of the new grounds of the Wedgemere Tennis Club at Winchester last Saturday. The grounds are not yet entirely in order, but some of the courts are laid out and some of the members played until the rain put an end to the games. Plans have been drawn for a very pretty little club house which will be conveniently fitted up for the use of the members.

Mrs. L. L. Blood, Secretary, has published an able report of the year's work of the W. C. T. U. of Winchester, which embodies much valuable information. The officers for the current year are; President, Mrs. H. N. Mansfield; Vice-presidents, Madames M. A. Ward, Sarah Butters, A. M. French, M. A. Herrick; Secretary, Mrs. L. L. Blood; Treasurer, Mrs. A. A. Rowe; Executive Committee, Mrs. J. W. Adams, Mrs. H. D. Stodderd, Miss C. D. Sharon.

The genial atmosphere of Saturday, May 30th, allowed a large number of spectators to witness the first ball game of the season between the home nine and Shepard, Norwell & Co's team resulting in a victory for the visiting nine by a score of 16 to 6. The game which was interesting and exciting throughout was won from the home team by sharp fielding and hard batting on the part of the visitors. A novel feature of the game was the excellent pitching of Capt. Wheeler and the catching of Mr. Herrick. Great credit is due Mr. Pratt (the Umpire) in the remarkable manner in which he rendered his decisions.

[The score which accompanied the above was imperfect, in this, that it failed to designate what the figures represented.—Ed. Journal.

Memorial Day was observed here in due form, and the usual decorating ceremonies by A. D. Weld Post, No. 146, G. A. R., were properly performed. The weather was favorable for the occasion and everything passed off in the very best shape. The programme was carried out as follows:—A detail visited the Catholic cemetery in the forenoon and decorated the graves there. At half past 2 in the afternoon the post assmebled at headquarters, and, forming a procession led by the Maplewood band, under escort of H. K. Thatcher camp, Sons of Veterans, marched to Wildwood cemetery, where the following exercises took place: Music by the band; hymn, "America;" reading of general orders by Adjutant Snow; prayer by Rev. J. L. Marsh; music by the band; address by Rev. Joshua Coit; hymn; decoration of soldiers' graves.

At the regular meeting of the School Board, last Friday evening, the following named teachers were re-elected, viz:—High, Principal, Lewis Parkhurst; second Assistant, Miss Maria A. Hoiden; Gifford Primary, Miss Emma Mansfield; Rumford Intermediate, Miss Florence Ayer; Rumford Primary, Miss R. A. Holbrook; Washington, Miss Lizzie A. Richardson; Wyman, Miss Abby F. Johnson; Mystic, Miss Nettie Coffin; Highland, Miss Elizth E. Marston; Music Teacher, Mrs. Susan C. Baily. Miss Lord the first Assistant at the High School declined a re-election on account of ill health and the vacancy will be filled at a future meeting of the Board. The following Rule was adopted in place of Rule 19 in regard to "Out of School Lessons." "Except in the High School, lessons to be learned out of school, shall be such as a scholar of average capacity can learn in an hour's study at most, and shall be required only from pupils in the first class of the Grammar School. Grammar School pupils shall not be required to study arithmetic or grammar out of school." The graduating exercises of the High School will be in the School Building this year on Friday, June 26th.—Cor. W. Ad.

Board of Trade.

The regular weekly meeting of the Executive Committee of the Woburn Board of Trade was held last Tuesday evening at the rooms of the association in Bank Block. The attendance was uncommonly large, and the spirit and enthusiasm were in the highest degree encouraging. Chairman James Skinner called the meeting to order promptly at 8 o'clock, when all the members were in their seats ready for work

The routine business was speedily despatched by the gentlemanly Secretary, Mr. E. W. Champney, when the reports of committees were taken up and acted on. Col. William T. Grammer, in behalf of the committee on widening Main street, made a verbal report interlarded with pertinent remarks, the gist of which was, that the committee had attended to the duties assigned them and that the County Commissioners decided unanimously in favor of the scheme. A movement in the same direction had been made 35 years ago, Col. Grammer said, but was never carried out to complete fruition. The report was highly satisfactory to the meeting, and was accepted. The same committee were continued, to act until the work is accomplished.

Mr. Ware Gay, a gentleman deeply interested in the project, for his committee, reported progress on Godfrey Seamless Pocket Company. He submitted many interesting and valuable facts, a major part of which it would not be prudent to publish at this time. Mr. Jacob Brown, Chairman Skinner, Messrs. Fred Flint, George Buchanan, N. J. Simonds, Hon. B. F. Whittemore, Capt. Crane, Mr. Griffin Place, Mr. W. W. Hill, and others spoke on the subject from which much information was gleaned. One important fact was, that the Company would locate the manufacturing establishment here if the citizens would take $10,000 in stock—a much smaller amount than had been supposed necessary to secure it.

The value of this industry to Woburn and the stockholders was demonstrated beyond peradventure. It is a thing capable of being developed into vast proportions, and if it is allowed to slip through our hands it will be a matter of lasting regret. All are favorably impressed with its superior merits. The committee was continued and asked to report finally at an early day.

Mr. William G. Miller reported progress on the book soon to be issued by the Board. He has already secured some 17 illustrations for it, which will be ready for the Board's inspection in a few days. A committee, consisting of Mesrs. Fred A. Flint and W. W. Hill, were appointed to confer with the owners of leather factories in relation to securing views of their factories for the book. This important work is going ahead rapidly.

Lynn organized a Board of Trade in 1869, and to its efforts and influence is largely due the fact that that city is now the largest shoe manufacturing centre in the Union. It started with about 100 members, and its principal aim was to secure the location of shoe factories there. The result of united effort is plainly apparent in the growth of the business, and Woburn may learn valuable lessons from Lynn.

An End to Bone Scraping.

Edward Shepherd, of Harrisburg, Ill., says: "Having received so much benefit from Electric Bitters, I feel it my duty to let suffering humanity know it. Have had a running sore on my leg for eight years; my doctors told me I would have to have the bone scraped or leg amputated. I used instead, three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and my leg is now sound and well." Electric Bitters are sold at fifty cents a bottle, and Bucklen's Arnica Salve at 25c. per box by Wm. W. Hill.

KEEP IT PURE.

The Life is the Blood—Prevent Disease—Surgery the Last Resort—A Telling Letter.

Here is a fact for you to think over, viz.: Medical science proves that diseases, no matter how great a variety they seem to have, proceed from comparatively few causes. It is for this reason that some single medicines relieve or cure so wide a range of complaints—some of them appearing almost directly opposite in their natures. When a medical preparation acts at once upon the digestive and urinary organs, and also purifies the blood, the list of difficulties subject to its control is astonishing. But, while many things are said to possess this power, those which actually do exert it are very rare.

It is conceded that DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, of Rondout, N. Y., is the most effective preparation now in use for all diseases arising from a foul or impure state of the circulation. Hence it is more than likely that if the writer of the following letter had habitually taken "FAVORITE REMEDY" ten years ago, he would never have suffered from Cancer.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., March 22, 1884.

Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.

DEAR SIR:—About six years ago I was obliged to resort to external treatment for the removal of a cancerous growth on my lip. On my return home, I became sensible that my blood needed a thorough cleansing. My whole system, too, required toning up. White casting about for the best medicine to do this, your, "FAVORITE REMEDY" was so highly commended in my hearing that I resolved to try it. I did so, and the result surprised me, it was effected so quickly and completely. I soon got over the depression produced by the operation, and since the "FAVORITE REMEDY," which I have continued to take in small doses, has kept me in such health and strength as I never had before, nor expected to have. It is the best blood purifier in the world. I am sure of that. Yours, &c.,

MATTHEW FARRELL.

TOWN OF WOBURN.

Board of Health Regulations.

ISSUED JUNE, 1885.

Extracts from the Public Statutes of Massachusetts, Chapter 80:

"The Board of Health shall make such regulations as it judges necessary for the public health and safety. Whoever violates any such regulations shall forfeit a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars.

In compliance with the foregoing statutory provisions, and believing that a great amount of good may be done by timely and energetic abatement of all nuisances, the Board of Health of the town hereby issue the following regulations:—

REGULATION 1.—Ordered that all putrid or decaying vegetables or animal matter be removed forthwith from all vaults, privies, cellars and out-houses, and either buried or deposited at least ten rods from any highway, dwelling-house or public building in this town, and covered with dry earth.

REG. 2.—Ordered that the contents of all privy vaults and cess-pools in the thickly populated districts of this town shall be removed during the night time, viz: between the hours of ten o'clock, P. M., and four o'clock, A. M., and that all persons so removing night soil or refuse of any kind which emits an offensive order must have their carts tight to prevent leakage and effectually covered and not stopped more than five minutes on any street within ten rods of any dwelling-house except for loading and unloading; and no person shall empty any cess-pool or closet without the consent of the Board of Health.

REG. 3.—The Board will order the removal of all swine, goats, or other animals where their presence appears to be prejudicial to the public health and comfort.

REG. 4.—Ordered that no privy vaults be opened except for purposes of disinfection, or by consent of the Board of Health.

REG. 5.—Ordered that all tanneries, glue manufactories or other manufactories from which arise an offensive odor be kept clean, and that covered receptacles be provided by the proprietors for the deposits of filth that flow from them.

REG. 6.—Ordered that all slaughter-houses be kept clean and that all the offal therein be removed daily.

REG. 7.—Ordered that no fish, garbage, house or store offal, water or brine containing blood, refuse animal or vegetable matter, shall be thrown upon or into any street, lane, yard or gutter, and that all persons are hereby notified to desist from such practices and ordered to deposit the same in tight vessels having a tight fitting cover, and if not properly buried on the premises, the same shall be removed not less often than once every forty-eight hours at least ten rods from any house or highway and covered with dry earth.

REG. 8.—Ordered that there shall not be sold or offered for sale any decayed or unripe fruit, or decayed or unfit meat, or adulterated milk, or milk from improperly fed or diseased animals.

REG. 9.—Ordered that no sink or sewer drain or water closet shall empty into any street gutter, or upon the surface of any sidewalk, street, alley, or lane in this town.

REG. 10.—Ordered when any physician is called to attend upon a person in this town sick with small-pox, scarletina, or other contagious disease dangerous to the public health, the said physician shall immediately give notice thereof to the Board of Health. Said notice shall contain the name of the person sick, the name of the disease, the name of the householder, and the street on which the sick person resides, and all physicians are requested to immediately report fatal termination of any case.

REG. 11.—Any householder in whose family any case of contagious disease occurs shall immediately give notice to the Board of Health, and use all reasonable measures to prevent infection of others.

REG. 12.—No owner or occupant of any dwelling-house in the town of Woburn, shall keep or permit to be kept any fowl, swine, goats, or other animals, in any room or cellar of said dwelling.

REG. 13.—Parties can have the vaults and cess-pools cleaned by leaving their order and $2.00 for each with the Chief of Police; where more than one load is to be taken from each vault or cess-pool, $2.00 for each load must be left. No order will be received without the money accompanying it.

The inhabitants are earnestly requested to co-operate with the Board in carrying out the foregoing regulations, and thereby secure healthy sanitary conditions.

The Board takes the liberty to suggest further that the people avoid the unnecessary use of water, which in the absence of proper drainage will saturate the soil in the vicinity of their houses to a dangerous degree; and also to suggest the daily use of dry earth or sifted ashes to cover the contents of privies, or open receptacles of sink water, to absorb poisonous gases and prevent exhalations.

Whereas, the diseases designated as small-pox, scarlet fever, diptheria, typhus fever, and cholera are contagious and dangerous to the public health, and have been, and may easily be, contracted at funerals from dead bodies or apartments which have been infected by such diseases, it is therefore Ordered, that, from and after this date, no public funeral shall be held over the remains of any person having died of small-pox, scarlet fever, diptheria, typus fever, or cholera without the written permit of the Board of Health; and under such regulations as may prevent the spread of either of said diseases.

Ordered, further, that the remains of persons dying of either of said diseases, shall at once be placed in a tight or sealed coffin, and shall not thereafter be exposed to view or disturbed except for burial.

Ordered, that no owner, driver, or other person having charge of any hackney carriage or other closed vehicle used as a public conveyance, shall receive, or permit to be placed, or convey in any manner, in or upon said carriage or other vehicle, any person sick or infected with the small-pox or any other contagious disease, or the body of any person who has died of small-pox, or any other contagious disease.

The Board of Health directs special attention to small-pox, scarlet fever, dipththeria and typhus fever as being contagious, dangerous to the public health, and call attention to the duties of citizens and physicians as provided by Public Statutes.

The Board is fully aware that many individual cases of diptheria and other contagious diseases occur without any spread of the disease; but during epidemics at least the rule is to the contrary, and there are no means of knowing what is safe, without taking precautions which a different course might, occasionally, have proved to be unnecessary. They therefore at this time publish the sections of the law governing such cases, and hold all persons interested responsible. It is further desired that physicians should fill out the postal cards furnished by this Board.

SEC. 78. When a householder knows that a person within his family is taken sick of . . any . . disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the . . Board of Health of the town in which he dwells. If he refuses or neglects to give such notice, he shall forfeit a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars.

SEC. 79. When a physician knows that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with . . any disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the . . Board of Health of the town; and if he refuses or neglects to give such notice he shall forfeit for each offense a sum not less than fifty nor more than one hundred dollars.

Per order of the Board of Health.

Loammi Baldwin.

[The following biographical sketch of a former distinguished citizen of Woburn is taken from The Tech, a paper published by the students of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Boston.—EDITOR JOURNAL.

No man so well deserves the name of the father of civil engineering in America as Loammi Baldwin. Living, as he did, before the days of railway system, and almost before engineering was recognized as a profession, his name is known to very few at the present time; but there is no one man among the leaders in industrial work in this country to whom we owe more. There were very few works of internal improvement carried out in America during the first thirty years of the present century with which Mr. Baldwin was not concerned, and his two great works, the government dry docks at Charlestown and Norfolk, stand today unpassed among the great engineering structures of the country.

The subject of our sketch was the fourth child of Colonel Loammi Baldwin, a noted citizen of Woburn, in this State, and a distinguished soldier under Washington during the Revolutionary War; serving at the siege of Boston, at New York, and at the memorable crossing of the Delaware, on the night of Dec. 25, 1776. After the war, he was for many years high sheriff for the county of Middlesex, and he also represented Woburn in the General Court. He was one of the original corporators, and a large proprietor of the old Middlesex canal, built to connect Lowell with Boston, and the entire work was constructed under his superintendence. In a very different direction we are also indebted to the elder Loammi Baldwin, as it was through him that the well-known Baldwin apple was perfected and brought into use.

Loammi Baldwin, the younger, was born at North Woburn in 1780. He fitted for college at Westford Academy, and passed through Harvard College, graduating with the famous class of 1800, in which were Judge Lemuel Shaw, Joshua Bates, Washington Allston, Charles Lowell, Joseph S. Buckminster, and other noted men. His scholarship does not seem to have been very high while in college, but he was unequalled for telling good stories, and was a universal favorite. His inclination seems to have been towards mechanical subjects, to which very little attention was paid at that time. It was during his college life that, with his own hands, he made a clock which kept very good time, and was the wonder and admiration of his class. At the semi-annual visitation of the committee of the Overseers, preceding Commencement, we find Baldwin put down as No. 9 on the list for "an exhibition in mechanics." At Commencement, he does not seem to have had any part, but in 1806 we find him recorded as vice-president of the Phi Beta Kappa, John Thornton Kirkland being president.

Like many others, Mr. Baldwin does not seem to have found out at once for what he was intended. Upon graduating, he entered the law office of Timothy Bigelow, at Groton. But even here nature asserted her rights, and we find him constructing with his own hands a fire engine, of which the village stood in desperate need; and this small engine is still in active service after a use of over eighty years, and will throw a stream over the highest roof in town.

Having completed his legal studies, he opened an office in Cambridge in 1804; but his love for mechanical matters soon showed him where his work lay, and in 1807 he went to England to pursue the study of civil engineering. In 1812 he opened an office in Charlestown, and was employed by the State in erecting fortifications about Boston Harbor. A little later he was engaged to survey the "Falls of the Ohio" at Louisville, Ky., with a view to building a canal around the rapids; and soon after, he was employed in making surveys for canals in Virginia, and was also in charge of the Union Canal of Pennsylvania. Having, however, a disagreement with Gov. Mifflin in regard to the proper size of the canal and its locks, he left the State, and returned to Charlestown. It afterwards turned out that Mr. Baldwin's opinion was the correct one in regard to the Pennsylvania canals.

About this time he published a very able pamphlet, "Thoughts on Political Economy," and also a carefully written description of the Middlesex canal, and a memoir of his father's early friend and companion, Benjamin Thompson, better known as Count Rumford. In 1824 he spent a year in France in the study of engineering and in the collection of publications upon that subject, and laid the foundation of what was, at that time, the best engineering library in this country.

Soon after his return home he was placed in charge of surveys to ascertain the practicability of building a canal from Boston to the Hudson River, and at that early date he proposed piercing the Green Mountain Range almost exactly on the location of the present Hoosac Tunnel.

Upon the death of Uriah Cotting, who had commenced the construction of the Boston Mill Dam, now Beacon Street, Mr. Baldwin took charge of that work, and carried it to a successful completion. In 1826 he made an elaborate report to the Salem Mill Dam Corporation in regard to extensive dams at Beverly Bridge. In 1835 he made an extremely valuable report on introducing pure water into the city of Boston, in which a very full examination is made of cisterns, common and artesian wells, aqueducts, conduits and pumps; and full descriptions are given of the water works of ancient and modern Rome, Constantinople, Lyons, London, Paris, Liverpool, Manchester, Edinburgh and Glasgow, Philadelphia, Cincinati and Richmond. The various ponds west of Boston were discussed, the capacity of different forms and sizes of conduits considered, a complete plan and profile was shown from Boston to Farm and Long Ponds, and suggestions were also made for increasing the capacity of Jamaica Pond by various feeders.

In 1835 Mr. Baldwin made a very careful guaging of the Androscoggin River at Brunswick, in Maine, with a view to developing the water power for manufacturing purposes. Recent measurements have shown his work to have been done with the utmost exactness, and the results to have been entirely reliable.

In 1836 the subject of our sketch was engaged in making surveys and plans for a canal to connect the town of Darien on the Altamaha River, and twelve miles above its mouth, with the harbor of Brunswick, in Georgia, a distance of about thirteen miles. By this work the immense interior of Georgia was to find a port for shipment, instead of being obliged to rely upon Savannah or Charleston. This work was not completed, but the plans, generally and in detail, show a masterly knowledge of this branch of engineering.

Mr. Baldwin's greatest works were the two naval dry docks at Charlestown and at Norfolk. Not only were these structures unsurpassed by any works of the kind in the world at the time they were built, but they still remain as monuments of engineering skill. The dock at Charleston was commenced in 1827, and completed in 1834, the old frigate "Constitution" being the first vessel docked. The docks at Charlestown and at Norfolk were made from the same working drawings, although the former was lengthened about sixty feet in later times to accommodate the increased length of modern vessels of war. It is strange to look back now and to note the lack of engineering machinery for carrying on heavy work, even so late as 1830. The pile drivers used at the Charlestown dock were worked by a treadmill, although some objection was made to putting the free-born American into a machine which had so unsavory a reputation. A large part of the masonry was laid without the use of derricks, by means of inclined ways. The cost of the Charlestown dock was $677,000, and of the Norfolk dock $943,000, a very large sum in those days.

In addition to the above works, Mr. Baldwin was consulted in regard to almost every important work of internal improvement in his time. His great skill, wide experience, and sound judgment made his opinion sought for far and near. The impression left upon all the young men who served him as assistants, several of whom yet live, is a feeling not only of profound respect for his talent as an engineer, but of love and veneration for him as a man.

In person, Mr. Baldwin was over six feet in height, and superbly built, though inclining to be rather heavy towards the latter part of his life. His face, as shown by an admirable portrait now in possession of the family, presents one of those rare combinations of intelligence, of manliness, and of dignity, which once seen can never be forgotten; a face which shows, as Hamlet says:—

> "A combination and a form, indeed,
> Where every god did seem to set his seal,
> To give the world assurance of a man."

Barnum in an Emergency.

"Oh, yes said the old ringmaster, scratching a match on the sole of his shoe, "Barnum was always prepared for emergencies." And we thought we heard a chuckle, but it might have been the pipestem rattling against his teeth. "I remember one occasion, in particular: when we had pitched our tents at a large town in Connecticut. Barnum came around the first night as usual before the performance, and found the Sacred Bull stretched on the ground."

"'Dead, hey?' remarked Barnum.

"'As a coffin nail, sir,' replied the keeper; 'cholera, I take.'

"'Send a man for that bull we saw two miles back here. The Great and Only isn't going to fall short of sacred bulls in a cattle district like this.'

"At that moment a man came up and observed in a business like way, 'The monkeys have pulled all the fur off the rabbit; snatched 'em regular bald-headed.'

"'Put them in a separate cage and label them from the ruins of Pompeii.'

"'All right, sir,' replied the man, 'but what are we to do for dromedaries? The stock's running low, and we've advertised that lot, big.'

"Barnum tore a leaf from his diary and handed him the following memorandum, with the order, 'Put a blanket on the horse that went blind yesterday, and tack this on him in a conspicuous place.'

"The following is what the man read: 'Notice—The hump usually found on this Dromedary has been absorbed as nutriment; it is expected out in a few days.'

"Yes, Barnum had large resources," and the ringmaster solemnly contemplated the wreaths of smoke as they rose into the lambient air, and with feelings of awe we stole silently away, loth to disturb his reverie.—Judge.

LITERARY NOTICES.

THE MUSICAL RECORD for June is one of the best numbers that has fallen under our eye. The instalment of new music is larger than usual and of an uncommonly meritorious character. The literary contents are fresh and readable. This magazine is published by O. Ditson & Co., Boston.

ST. NICHOLAS FOR JUNE contains the opening chapters of Sheep or Silver? a new serial by the late W. M. Baker, author of His Majesty, Myself. The illustrations will be furnished by James C. Monks and Henry Sandham. Driven Back to Eden keeps abreast of the season with pleasant accounts of outdoor work and play; His One Fault involves the hero in still more trouble; Lieut. Schwatka gives a further account of the sports and occupations of The Children of the Cold; and Among the Law-makers informs us how senate-pages and senators have a great deal of fun in and out of hours. In addition to all this, there is a full quota of short stories and articles. Frank R. Stockton opens the number with Old Pipes and the Dryad, illustrated by a frontispiece picture by Kenyon Cox. There is a historical and practical article on The Royal Game of Tennis, with illustrations Helen's Prize Dinner will find many interested readers; A Terrible Gymnast is a thrilling tiger story; Princess Papillones is a bright butterfly story from Central America; and there are poems, stories, and pictures, by Helen Gray Cone, Walter Learned, Celia Thaxter, John R. Coryell, Margaret Eytinge, Bessie Parker, Lizzie Chase Deering, R. B. Birch, Jessie Curtis Shepherd, W. A. Rogers, Culmer Barnes, and many others.

Mr. Hassam's Frontispiece in the June WIDE AWAKE leads us into a garden of roses; but graver matters are discussed presently, for the opening story by Nora Perry, entitled Kate Oxford's One Talent, shows how one girl at least was successful in earning her living by following a strong taste for "taking photographs." This seems, indeed, a "business number," for in it open two business serial stories: A New Department, by Margaret Sidney, dealing parctically with the ever-fresh problem of how two penniless, well.bred girls shall get their daily bread; and How The Middies Set Up Shop by Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney, which promises to describe the business experience of two boys who opened a store in vacation time. The short stories of the number are delightful reading; Uncle Primus and Dog Turban, by Mrs. Jessie Benton Fremont, The Meeting-House Pattern, by Mrs. Branch, and A Worthy Nine by Arthur Gilman. Chief among the interesting papers will be found Mrs. Lucy C. Lillie's long and charming article about The Princess Beatrice, the royal English princess soon to be a bride, with portraits of herself and Prince Henry of Battenberg. Another entertaining paper is entitled A Wind-mill Pilgrimage; it is written by Amanda B. Harris, and has twelve illustration. Still another interesting paper is the chapter on Religions, in Mr. Yan Phou Lee's series, When I Was a Boy in China. The new serials The Child's Paradise, by Mrs. Champney, and The Governor's Daughter, by E. S. Brooks, open in an interesting way, and there are many delightful pictures, poems, jingels and "tangles," together with a rich entertainment in the monthly supply of Chautauqua Readings which are regularly prepared by WIDE AWAKE. $3.00 a year. D. Lothrop & Co. Publishers, Boston, Mass.

In pictorial and literary features the June CENTURY is not behind recent issues in timeliness and general interest. A finer portrait than that of Sir John Herschel has rarely been printed in THE CENTURY. Two other full-page portraits, of William, the father, and Caroline, the sister of Sir John, accompany The Three Herschels. Amusement and information are mingled in. In and Out of the New Orleans Exposition, and the illustrations are full of character and humor. A Florentine Mosaic has the grace and humor of travel stories combined with a fine historical sense. Theodore Roosevelt, after his experiences at the Chicago Convention, a year ago, went upon a hunting excursion to the Far West. In a graphic paper, entitled Still-hunting the Grizzly, he describes the present state of that dangerous sport and his own experiences. The paper on Orchids, by Mrs. Sophie Bledsoe Herrick, is profusely illustrated. Bishop Dudley contributes How Shall we Help the Negro? and John E. P. Daingerfield describes his experience in the engine-house when he was held as a hostage by "John Brown at Harper's Ferry." The short story of the number is Hilary's Husband. Rise of Silas Lapham grows absorbingly interesting. In the fifth part of The Bostonians, the friendship of Olive and Vereha is interestingly developed. In the May CENTURY McClellan's Peninsular Campaign was treated broadly by the leading commanders on both sides. In the June number special events like the disaster to the Confederates at Beaver Dam Creek and the terrible battle the next day at Gaines's Mill are particularly described by General D. H. Hill; and by General Fitz John Porter, who gained great credit for his manner of fighting two-thirds of the Confederate army with a little more than half the number, at Gaines's Mill. General Imboden contributes Stonewall Jackson in the Shenandoah. In Memoranda on the Civil War, Colonel J. W. Bissell describes the methods adopted in sawing out a channel above Island Number Ten, which led to the flanking of that Confederate stronghold on the Mississippi. Topics of the Time discusses the question of party politics and The Causes of the Law's Delay. In Open Letters there are short papers on The Law's Delay, The Death of Tecumseh, Color-Bedding, and Christianity and Popular Amusements. The poems of the number, including Bric-a-Brac verse, are by James T. McKay, Alice Ward Bailey, Robert Trowbridge, Walter Learned, Frank Dempster Sherman, and Chandler.

Washington Irving's Home.

A New York letter to the Troy Times says that "Sunnyside," Washington Irving's former residence, is frequently visited by that class which is commonly termed "pilgrims to the shrine of genius," and most of these carry away with them some memorial of the spot. The property still remains in possession of his nieces, who keep up the condition of the grounds, the latter being in charge of one who has been in this service for thirty years. The "Cottage," like its builder, is entirely without pretention. When the latter came from Europe after seventeen year's absence, he desired a home near the Hudson river, and this led to the purchase of the Acker house and sixteen acres of land. The house gave place to a picuresque cottage of the English style, where the author passed his last days surrounded by an affectionate and devoted circle. The place remains much as he left it when removed by death twenty-five years ago. His writing-desk and pen remain in the library, and his hat stands on the hall table as though waiting for use. Irving gradually attracted men of wealth and taste, and this led to the present village of Irvington. The latter now contains many stately buildings, but the memory of genius gives a higher dignity to the "cottage" than can ever be claimed by the finest display of wealth and architecture.

"Indeed?" the young lady replied. "Father has bought Guernseys at different times, but he said recently that he thought he would stick to Jerseys or Alderneys, as the latter give the richer milk and do not cost so much to feed."—Ingleside.

More Than a Million.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—A reporter of the Times-Democrat, who recently completed a tour of this and neighboring States, visiting every city, town and hamlet, states that he interviewed all the wholesale and retail druggists and storekeepers, as well as transportation companies, with a view of learning the volume of trade in certain articles. The statistics thus gathered show that during the past two years over one million two hundred thousand bottles of St. Jacobs Oil were sold in this section alone, and that this quantity largely exceeds the total combined sales of all other similar remedies during that period. He adds that dealers, as well as the public, continue unanimous in their praise of the wonderful pain-curing powers of this unapproached remedial agent.

Reminders.

The handsome young lady and the awkward man of pretended sentiment sat on a moss-covered bank. All day he had annoyed her with his attentions.

"Miss Mabel, do you like poetry?"

"Yes."

"I worship it; I live on it. See the pick-nickers, out there. They shout and romp as though the air itself were not full of sentiment—of soul breathings."

"What business are you engaged in?" she asked She knew but wanted to hear him say.

"My business is perhaps more lucrative than congenial. I operate a bone mill."

"What!"

"Yes. I grind up bones. The pulverized bone is used upon the land. It makes the flowers brighter, the corn more luxuriant. Miss Mabel, you remind me of spring."

"Why?"

"You are so gentle."

"You remind me of spring," she said.

"I do!" he leaned forward to catch her words.

"Yes; you are so green."—Arkansaw Traveler.

Quite a Surprise.

Mr. and Mrs. Peturby have been married several years. They live very peacefully, as is usual with married folks, but occasionally they have a falling out.

"That was not a nice way to treat me. To-day was my birthday and you did not surprise me with a present. Every year since we have known each other you have given me a present on my birthday, and I counted on your doing it this time."

"But, my dear, where would there have been any surprise if I had made you a present? I didn't give you anything so that you might enjoy a surprise."—Siftings.

She Should Wait.

"I tell you once for all not to bother me any more, I will never consent to be your wife," exclaimed Miss Esmeralda Longcoffin to Kosclusko Murphy, an Austin dude.

"Hold up now, and wait till I get my new dove-colored pants from the tailor. I guess you will sorter change your mind, then. Great Scott! how beautiful those pants fit, and how they match my complexion," exclaimed Murphy.—Siftings.

From "St. John Daily News," March 23, 1878. "Few remedies have acquired so much fame, and grown so universally popular in the cure of coughs and colds, and all affections of the throat and lungs as Adamson's Botanic Balsam. Many persons in this city have no hesitation in recommending it to the suffering."

Miss Fisher—"I really don't think I shall take part in theatricals again. I always feel as though I were making a fool of myself." Pilkins (who is always saying the wrong thing)—"Oh, everybody thinks that."

I was most dead with heart difficulty, can now do a good days, and sincerely recommend Dr. Graves' Heart Regulator as the remedy. Geo. Gladding, Hartsgrove, O. $1.00 per bottle at your drug store. Free pamplet of F. E. Ingalls, Cambridge, Mass.

Mamma (dining out)—"It isn't polite, Bobby, to smack your lips when eating. You never do that at home." Bobby—"Cause we never have anything worth smacking over."

"Papa, why do little pigs get so much milk?" "Because we want them to make hogs of themselves."

HER TEARS.

I knew her tender heart was bursting
With tears she longed to shed,
For sympathy her soul was thirsting,
But not a word I said.

I feared to speak lest I'd be breaking
The thread of thought she spun,
Then she, her former seat forsaking,
Her comrades seemed to shun.

Yet turned to me, face pale with sorrow,
Unto me told her grief,
As if she could some comfort borrow,
Could draw from me relief.

And from her eyes the tears were welling,
The tears she could not hide;
While she her heavy grief was telling
She quite forgot her pride.

Her smiles she unto others carried,
The friends of former years,
But not with them in grief she tarried,
To me she brought her tears.

GOOD-BY.

BY MARY PEASLEE GARDINER.

I never hear the word good-by
From those I hold most dear,
But what the heart gives back a sigh
Or speeds a silent tear.
There's something in the last fond look—
A feeling that I dare not brook—
That makes me sad, though still I try
To smile whene'er I say "good-by."

Good-by. Ah, well! It is good-by
When weary ones lay burdens down,
And when the glories of the sky
Lift up the cross and give the crown.
What joy to find the moment when
Our loved are safe beyond life's ken;
No pain or death can dim the eye,
Or fond hearts break 'neath life's good-bye.

—Boston Budget.

DOLORES.

It was getting dusk, and I could hear the church clock striking, across the water, six o'clock. There were still faint streaks of red and bars of light in the western sky, and the new moon hung like a sickle overhead. I was country born, young and strong, and I knew no fear, though the road was lonely and there had been much talk in the village of gipsies and tramps, and the passengers in the coach coming from London had been robbed not so many weeks ago. I had been a long way across the country, and Tiger and I hurried home, now thinking (at least, I thought, and Tiger was the most sympathetic of dogs) that before the clock struck the half-hour we should be sitting comfortably by the fireside.

The path ran for some little distance close to the Black Pond; the hills rose steep on either side of it; here and there was a cluster of bushes, here and there a tree hung over the deep water. In the fast fading twilight I could still see the reflections sharp and clear. I was so close to the water that I could watch the little ripples on its surface. The path was muddy in places; I picked my way cautiously from one dry spot to another. Tiger was a few yards in front of me. Suddenly he growled and dashed forward with a bound. "Tiger, Tiger!" I called, and even at the same moment I felt rather than saw that a dark figure was moving in front of me—moving swiftly, noiselessly, away from me under the shadow of the bushes. "Who is there?"

No answer, only Tiger turned suddenly and slunk back to my side. There were stories enough about the pond and its deep waters. Not so many years since, a couple of lovers had lost their lives there; it was said that the body of the girl had never been found. Something I had seen, and Tiger had seen it, too. Could it be the ghost of that luckless maid? A low moaning sound fell on my ear; horror-stricken I turned and fled up the hill as fast as my feet could carry me. But I did not run far. "What is this?" asked my better self. "Phœbe Lyncombe, will you, the daughter of a brave soldier who died for his country, the wife of as true a sailor as ever sailed in the King's fleet—will you turn coward and fly in a panic? Return, and see if you can help any fellow-creature in misery. Return and face the danger, and God be with you."

Some such thoughts ran through my brain. I was always one to act on impulse, and I retraced my steps, walking with a bold front and beeting heart straight in the direction of the shadow. I could see it now again, a tall figure—a woman's figure—in a long cloak. Once it stooped and hid itself beneath a tree—I must have passed by had not Tiger growled and shown his teeth.

"Who are you?" I called in desperation—"tell me. Are you ill? Can I help you?"

Then in the silence of the evening it crept out of the darkness and glided quickly towards the edge, the very edge, of the pond.

"Take care!" I shouted, "the water is deep."

For all answer it flung off the cloak, threw up its arms and plunged into the Black Pond with a shriek. One glance I had of a white face, the face of a beautiful woman, her black hair streaming round her; and then I rushed to the water's edge, beside myself with horror. I was more than a mile from the village. I could get no help—it was vain to scream. By good luck the dog was with me. "Seize her, Tiger! seize her!" and as I raised my hand he sprang after the woman. A tree spread its branches far over the pond at this point. I crawled along a bough as far as it would bear me, and so hanging over the water managed to gain a firm hold of her dress. By Heaven's mercy the pond was not so very deep at this spot; I do not think that she was ever fairly out of her depth, and she had not lost consciousness. How we did it I can not exactly tell you, but between us—Tiger and me—we got her out, shivering, but alive, on to the bank—moaning and wringing her hands, but alive and, as far as I could see, unhurt. There was no time to question her. I must get home—home to the warm fireside, and take her with me. "Come," I said, holding her hand tight in mine, "come." She lifted her eyes and looked at me—they were wild with terror; her lips moved, but she spoke in a strange tongue that I could not understand.

I took up the cloak that lay on the ground and wrapped it round her taking care that her face was turned away from the pond. I went my way very slowly, half dragging, her, up the hill, and ever and anon she stopped to gasp for breath and to sob and moan. Half past six struck, and seven struck before we reached the garden gate, with Tiger sniffing at our heels. Miriam, the house-keeper, was there watching for me. She is a discreet woman; I knew I could trust her. "There has been an accident; help me take the lady in," I said.

Miriam asked no more; she put her arm round the lady and carried her fainting to her own room. We got her wet clothes off; Miriam lighted the fire and made a hot posset (from my grandmother's recipe), and little by little the stranger came to herself and opened her eyes, again with the wild stare that I had seen before. How thankful I was to be so far from the terrible pond!

"Senora," she said trying to sit up, "I will intrude no more; I will depart."

I answered her that she was too weak to think of departing, that she was a welcome guest; that she must sleep now, and to-morrow we would converse further.

"As you will, senora," she replied; "I owe all to you. I kiss your hand." And so her head fell back on the pillow, and she could speak no more for very weariness. A few moments later and she was fast asleep, with her dark hair spread around her, her dark eyelashes resting on her cheek. Her hands were clasped together as if she were praying; I noticed that they were white and beautifully formed, on one of them she wore a broad gold ring. How did she come to be wandering alone by the Black Pond? Who was she? Whence did she come? I was thankful—ah! very thankful—that I had been there to help her at that awful moment. The tears sprang to my eyes as I stooped and kissed her. Miriam is my own dear nurse who was with my mother as a girl, and lived with me during my husband's absence. He had sailed many, many months ago (I write of the year 182–) for a long cruise. She persuaded me to change my wet pelisse, she combed and brushed my hair, and reassured me about the strange lady. Not till then did I know how very tired I was.

My visitor passed a restless night; for days she lay in a fever, shivering and talking fast. Now and then she burst out into broken English, asking for a certain Captain Charles Walters over and over again. He had lodgings at Plymouth, it would seem, and she could not find the house. Miriam is as clever a nurse as she is a good housekeeper, and she nursed the lady with the greatest care. By degrees our patient recovered without the aid of a doctor, who lived a good ten-miles' ride across country, and of whose skill Miriam had no high opinion. But she had many simple remedies of her own, and these she used, and she made dainty dishes and cooling draughts, and at last there came a day when the lady sat by the fireside, with a faint touch of color on her cheek, and then she told us her story. I will make it short, but I can not make it less sad. Her name was Dolores de Riano; she was a Spaniard born (as I had guessed), an orphan, and she had been wooed and won by an English officer, whose ship lay at harbor in the port of Barcelona, hard by the house where she lived with an uncle. (I too, took an interest in Barcelona, as my husband had described the place to me in his letters.) This officer had married Dolores secretly; his ship had sailed, and he left her with the wedding ring, which she dared not show, and his address written on a slip of paper—"Lieutenant Walters, 18 Melrose Terrace, Plymouth." And there she was to join him as soon as he should send for her. For a whole year she had no tidings from him, then she took her passage to Plymouth in a merchant ship. They had a miserable passage, being delayed on the voyage by adverse winds. She had finally landed at Plymouth with a few golden pieces in her purse, friendless and slone. She had asked in vain for Melrose Terrace; no one knew of such a street, or indeed of the existence of her husband, Lieutenant Charles Walters. After a few week her purse was nearly empty. She knew not where to turn for help: at last she thought to find her husband in London, and as she could not pay for coach fare she resolved to walk all those many miles. Then as she passed the Black Pond that evening, faint and suffering, she could no longer endure the misery of suspense, and had rushed into the water, filled with a frantic longing to be at rest.

Having told her story with many tears, she called upon the holy saints to bless me for my goodness (I repeat what she said). But my heart was full of anger towards the man who had so ill-treated her—this Charles Walters, as he styled himself—for neither Miriam nor I believed that he had given her his right name. I did not tell her this, of course. But I could not keep back what I felt in talking to Miriam. My face grew hot, and I clenched my hand as I cried: "He is a heartless traitor!"

"There may be a misunderstanding, madam; the lady trusts him still."

"I do not believe it," I said; "he has decieved her cruelly." You see I was young, and I spoke out what I felt.

Miriam put her fingers to her lips, but it was too late. Dolores, from her couch in the next room, had heard me and called me to her side.

"Nevertheless, senora, he is still my love and my husband. Think, madam, if your husband should—"

"My husband!" I exclaimed. "It could not be. But if it were possible that he could deceive me, I would never speak to him again, or desire to be reconciled."

She sighed, and took my hand in hers, and pressed it. How pretty she was in a gray gown of mine, adorned with a bunch of rose-colored ribbons. Day by day she grew more lovely, and day by day I discovered fresh virtues in her.

I had not any one to consult at home, so I went to our old clergyman and asked him to write letters on Dolores' behalf, making inquiries concerning her husband. This he did, and after some weeks the answers came, all with the same result. No one had heard of Lieutenant Walters, and there was no such name on the list of officers in his Majesty's Navy. By degrees we left off expecting to get any good news, only I cherished a secret hope that when Ambrose, my husband, came home—in a couple months—he would throw some light on the subject. Dolores stayed on with me, and I learned to love her very dearly. The neighbors were all pleased with her society, and no one knew besides Miriam that I had found her on that autumn evening by the Black Pond. After that there came bitter days for me, Phœbe Lyncombe. It was Easter, and the good ship "Thunderbolt" was long due at Plymouth, and there was no news of her. I had thought to have my husband with me before the primroses were out, and now the hedges were yellow with blossoms and he never came. My uncle, an old Admiral who resided at Plymouth, had long promised to send me a mounted messenger as soon as he should have tidings of the "Thunderbolt," and day after day I stood by the garden gate and looked down the road in vain. In my trouble, Dolores seemed to forget her own; she cheered me, bore with my fits of despair, and was in all ways like a loving sister during that dark season. One afternoon she had gone to the parsonage with a message, and I sat trying to sew by the parlor window. The ivy was beginning to put forth its young shoots, a delicious perfume of violets was wafted in from the garden. The room was trim and and orderly, a bowl of yellow cowslips stood on a table by the side of my inlaid work-box—it was one of Ambrose's many presents. I saw myself reflected in the mirror hanging on the wall opposite, sitting on a high-backed chair over my tambour frame, with my hair gathered high on my head, a handkerchief pinned across my neck, and the puffed sleeve of my gown ending above my elbow. Behind me was the door; even as I looked it opened quickly. There was a step I knew, the sound of a voice I loved: "Where are you? Phœbe, my wife!" No more sighing over the frame no more gazing in the mirror, no more watching for the messenger: before I could well jump from my seat he was there, his face was close to my lips—Well, it is Dolores' story that I am telling you not mine.

Safe, safe home at last, and there had been no mishap beyond contrary winds; he had outridden the messenger on the road. The time passed quickly. As we sat side by side looking out on to the landscape, the hills and dales all green with the sweet freshness of spring, he took my hand again in his, and then I noticed that he wore a ring that I had never seen before. "What a magnificent ring, Ambrose!" I said, holding his hand up to the light that I might see it better. It was of foreign workmanship, curiously chased, and in the centre was a flashing stone set in diamonds. To my surprise, Ambrose did not answer at once, but looked troubled; at last he said: "I can not tell you the whole story of the ring now, dearest Phœbe, it belongs to my brother Charlford, he is ill at Plymouth; to-morrow you shall hear all about it."

I knew that Charlford's mad freaks and misbehavior had long been a cause of anxiety to Ambrose (Charlford was his youngest and best-beloved brother), so I forbore to grieve him with another word on the subject.

"Is that our good Miraim at the door?" asked Ambrose, presently. There was certainly a step in the passage; but when I went to seek Miriam I found her in her own room at the farther end of the house. Afterward, I remembered that some one had passed along the hedge and gone out at the garden-gate, but at that time I took no notice of the occurrence. When the supper-bell rang I began to wonder where Dolores could be. It was long past her usual hour for returning. At last I sent a maid to the parsonage bidding her hasten home. Alas! she had left an hour ago. We searched all through the house, in the garden and the paddock; it grew dark, and I could no longer conceal my distress. Ambrose, too, looked grave. He went with the coachman, and they made inquiries in the village; they even walked as far as the Black Pond, but they found no trace of Dolores.

There was nothing more to be done, we could but wait for the morning, when my husband said that he would himself ride to Plymouth, and send out mounted messengers to scour the country; she could not be far off.

Very early the next day a little piece of paper was brought to me. With difficulty I deciphered the words that were written in pencil: "Dear and honored Senora—Do not seek to find me. I shall never return. I have left with my free will. Ever and ever will pray for you your devoted and grateful servant. I kiss your hands and your feet. Dolores de Riano Walters."

Ambrose was always a man of few words. He made no comment on the letter. Very shortly he bade me a loving farewell, and set forth on his journey. I spent the day alone, hoping for the return of Dolores. Surely, I said to myself, Ambrose, or one of the men, must find her soon—she could not walk far, and there was no coach to be hired hired in the village even if she had the means to engage one; and I knew how slender were the contents of her purse. Why had she left me? Was her brain unhinged by trouble? Would she again seek to put an end to her life? Late in the afternoon I wrapped a mantle round me and went out to breath the air. Perhaps I should meet one of the party and hear the news that I dreaded, and yet longed to hear. The gorse-hedge at the end of the garden gleamed golden in the sunlight as I passed; the bed by the sundial was red and blue with flowering hyacinths; the ferns in every ditch and in every stone wall were putting forth their brown and green fronds; the air was full of the sounds of Spring. Tiger was basking in the sunshine by the gate. "Tiger!" I cried, struck with a new idea, "find her, good dog. Seek Dolores!" He seemed to understand at once when I fetched a scarf of hers and held it up to him. Without more ado he set off down the lane, and took a short cut across a field to a neighboring wood. Every now and then he stopped and licked my hand as I followed close behind him. It was warm and sheltered in the pine wood; the ground was slippery with fir-needles. The dog went on steadily toward a pile of fagots that were stacked against a low stone wall. On the other side ran the high road to Plymouth. Here the earth was carpeted with green moss. I stepped noiselessly across the open space, thinking to climb the wall and make my way home by the road. Tiger had pricked up his ears—there was a sound of horses' hoofs; perhaps it was Ambrose. For the moment I forgot that I was seeking Dolores; but as I neared the wood-stack I saw her. Her head was turned away from me, and she was leaning over the wall with clasped hands, straining her eyes in the direction of the riders. The clatter of the hoofs drew nearer. "Dolores!" I cried, running forward, "why did you leave me? I have been so unhappy about you. Come home with me now?"

She turned, and I saw that her dark eyes were flashing with a strange light; she grasped my arm and pointed down the road. "So alike," she murmured; "child, forgive me! So alike, and I saw my ring on his finger. Look, look! who is it?"

I looked. Ambrose had seen me already, he was waving his hand; by his side rode a man whose face I seemed to know—a man who looked weary and dusty. Younger, yes, handsomer than my husband, but careworn and ill. He wore a slouched hat. I could not well distinguish his features, and yet as he sat there in the sunlight I knew that they were familiar to me.

"Who is it?" asked Dolores, more eagerly than before.

"My husband."

"Which is your husband? For the love of Heaven!"

"Ambrose Lyncombe," I answered, fairly bewildered, "the man who is waving his hand—the one nearest to the wall."

"Thank God! thank God!"

Her beautiful face was radiant with joy. Then I saw my husband speak a few low words to his companion, who drew rein and dismounted from his horse. He was very lame; he could hardly walk, but there was no need for him to take many steps. Dolores had swung herself over the low wall, and was running to meet him with outstretched hands. "Carlos, my beloved, welcome!" she cried, "querido marido mio!"

"Forgive me Dolores, forgive me," was all he said, and her loving arms were around his neck, her head resting on his shoulder. Then, as he looked down upon her, his face glowing with emotion—then I saw the likeness again, stronger than before, and I knew that Charles Walters was the same man as Charlford Lyncombe, my husband's younger brother.

. . . .

We feared a return of fever for Dolores, but she recovered speedily from her fatigue. Charlford indeed has always been an invalid since, partly in consequence of an accident that he met with abroad. The illness that followed first led him to remember his deserted wife, and make an effort to—however, he is Ambrose's brother, and through all her trouble, Dolores still clings to him.—Mary E. Hullah, in Belgravia.

DISGUSTED.

The President's course respecting the incumbents of Federal offices is not in accord with the general drift of Democratic sentiment. It has been a sore and aggravating disappointment from the beginning and although the organs have done some lusty whistling to keep their courage up they have failed to deceive any one as to their true feelings and well-grounded disgust at Mr. Cleveland's milk-and-water way of carrying on a Democratic administration. The Democrats expected, as they had a right to, that, as soon as possible after the inauguration, a complete and thorough change of office-holders, from top to bottom, would take place in pursuance of the only doctrine on which political parties can hope to exist for any length of time, namely, "to the victors belong the spoils;" but instead of that the removals of Republican office-holders have been comparatively few, the great bulk of them still keeping warm the same chair-seats they have occupied for the last twenty-five years, and the worst of it is they seem likely to do so for all time to come.

This is not business, or any part of it, as understood and practiced by all parties in times gone by. The only way political organizations can hope to perpetuate themselves is by promptly taking all that belongs to them and keeping it just as long as they can. That is the idea of the Boston Post, one of the ablest and best Democratic journals in New England. For nearly four months it has participated somewhat in the whistling alluded to above and taken its "crow" with as few grimaces as possible; but last Tuesday morning it came out with a leader that contained more good, horse sense to the square inch than anything we have seen in any of their organs since the unfortunate change of administrations. It arraigns Mr. Cleveland for his course in regard to the offices and general disregard for the vital interests of the party and informs him that, if he wishes to hold the party together, a different policy must prevail. Of course the Post's censure of the President is couched in respectful language, but the meat and marrow are there and also a restrained, but unmistakable, gnashing of teeth which is likely to grow more pronounced and inimical to the Chief Magistrate unless his official behavior is speedily reformed.

But the whole trouble is, as the Post will find out sooner or later, the President is more of a mugwump than Democrat, and an exceedingly small pattern of a man at the best.

THE LEGISLATURE.

The Legislature of this State has been in session nearly six months, which is at least three months longer than there was any call for. All the necessary work that has been done during the session, if indeed there was any to begin with, might just as well have been finished by the last of March as to have been dilly-dallied over and strung out to the 4th of July. The session is the butt of all the newspaper jokers in the state, and a bye-word and reproach out of it; but that does not seem to have any effect on the members, a good many of whom can't tell a joke from a verse out of the psalter. There are so many ambitious "limbs of the law" and fledgling politicians who want to give free exhibitions of their "gift of gab" and get reported that the real business of the session, when there is any, has been retarded and the term lengthened out beyond all sense and reason.

The members fling back: "What concern is it to the people how long we stay here? Our pay is only $500 (if that is the figure) for the session, whether it holds three months or six." It is the peoples' lookout. They have more law now—good, bad, and indifferent—than they know what to do with, and as Satan finds mischief for idle hands to do the danger is that the longer the members stay around the State House the more of the same kind of law will be crowded into the statute book. And that isn't all either. In late years Massachusetts Legislatures have learned to do the "salary-grab" trick pretty dexterously and it is not a difficult task at all for them to make themselves believe that they deserve extra pay for such protracted and disinterested devotion to the interests of the "dear people," and so—vote it. Take the bad law out of what has been enacted by the Legislature this session and there wouldn't be enough left to swear by.

— Work began on the railroad at North Woburn on Wednesday last. We have not heard how it is but our suspicion is that the North Village is in a state of rejoicing.

— It is rumored that the price of gas will experience considerable of a drop soon, and if it does, lively times on the light question may be expected with much confidence.

— There was quite a heavy thunderstorm about 5 o'clock on Monday morning which was succeeded by a tolerable heavy rain-fall during the day, and much oppressive heat.

— A subscriber, in renewing his subscription, says of the JOURNAL: "It is a welcome weekly visitor, pressing close upon the train of these progressive years." Thanks.

— The Baptist Sabbath school will observe next Sunday as Children's Day and anniversary of the schools. Exercises will take place in the church morning and evening, to which the public are invited.

— A. W. Feltis's broken wrist is getting on well. He receives $20 a week from the Travelers Accident, and $15 from the Massachusetts. The "Accident" is his pride of an insurance company.

— Representative Crane's name does not appear in the list of protesting members of the House against the high-handed usurpation of Speaker Brackett. Perhaps he did not attend the indignation meeting.

— A gentleman in town proposes to put a dynamo in his house and run it with a water-motor of his invention. He will light his own house with electricity, and probably some others in the neighborhood.

— Miss Alice Bryant, daughter of Mr. Charles B. Bryant, graduated at Vassar College this week. Mr. Bryant went to Poughkeepsie to attend the commencement of the college and see his daughter through.

— The JOURNAL begins to talk about the old depot. It may be some time before we shall see a new one.—Advertiser. There it is again! But then, the world will never be free from "doubting Thomases."

— And, then again, the weather on Tuesday was better fitted for the last of September or the middle of October then for June. We never experienced such meteorological changes before since we were born into the world.

— The poll-taxes of the town will be put into the Collector's hands for collection next Monday. The Assessors have got pretty nearly through with them, and Mr. Maguire will open business on them early next week — The trees around the Common that were mangled somewhat by moving buildings have been doctored and put into such excellent and presentable shape that the loss of a few limbs would not be noticed without critical examination.

— During the fore part of the week the gangs of Italian laborers on the new railroad attracted many people to the scene of their operations—or rather, their work did, for the making of a beginning was indeed a pleasant thing to behold.

— We have not been informed that any preparations have been made for the observance of the 17th of June here. It is probable that a good many people will go to Charlestown where the day is to be celebrated with much pomp and splendor.

— At Trinity Church services will be held next Sunday at 10.30 A. M. and 7.30 P. M. Sunday School at noon. The Rev. John S. Beers of Natick, General Missionary, will officiate. Baptism of children at the morning service.

— It is a surprise to every one that this village does not organize a first-class baseball club. There is no better material on the face of the earth than we have here, and why the boys don't go into it, and join a league is a profound and painful mystery.

— Mr. Peter Kenney is still improving his residence premises on Pleasant street. The particular job now in hand is a new stable, which he will build on the back end of the lot. There is some talk of Mr. Robert Duncan leasing the place for a number of years.

— There are not a million of hawkers of strawberrries in town, but they are pretty numerous. Their clarion notes ring out on the ambient air from daylight to darkness on all the streets, lanes and by-ways in the village, and great is the sale of the fruit.

— The following are the officers for the current year of the Ladies' Aid Society elected last Monday evening: President, Mrs. W. A. Colgate; Vice-President, Mrs. Henry U. Dean; Secretary, Mrs. Thomas I. Brown; Treasurer, Mrs. Rufus R. Whitten.

— The stock-holders of the Sun Electric Illuminating Company will hold a special meeting on the 18th. to choose two more Directors and change the name to The Sun Electric Light Company. The manufacture of lamps will begin as soon as the middle of next week.

— Since the 1st of May the absence of intoxicated people on our streets has been a theme for general comment. Our police officers couldn't have a higher compliment paid them than this improved condition of things. Every decent man in town hopes it will last.

— The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. gave a very nice festival last Tuesday evening, which, we hear, was satisfactory to the projectors in all respects. The Auxiliary is a very helpful coadjutor of the Association, and therefore deserves to be well sustained.

— Dr. Elbridge Trull, as will be seen by his card in this paper, offers to rent his store and dwelling on Main street to a good, responsible party. The premises are well known to the public and need no comment from us. They will be rented at a reasonable figure.

— Not being a weather bureau it is difficult for this office to determine with absolute certainty whether there was a slight frost on Tuesday night or not. If there was none it came very close to it. The testimony is too conflicting to warrant an unconditional statement either way.

— The June number of the Musical Herald, Boston, contains an extended notice of the memorial concert lately given by Mr. F. H. Lewis, of this place, at Manchester, N. H. It says: "Mr. Lewis is certainly doing a good work at Manchester." The entire programme of the concert is given.

— The house of George Johnson at Montvale was raided by Chief Nelson, Deputy Chief Walsh and Officer Tidd last Saturday night, and a nice mess of intoxicating liquors seized. We hope the officers will go for the violators of the law and give them no peace or comfort until they get out of the miserable business.

— Mt. Horeb Lodge, A. F. and A. M., have voted to introduce the new electric light into their rooms. They will wire the Lodge, hall and smoking room, and light their Masonic candles, which will be the first electric candles in the State. The current will be supplied from the electric plant of Mr. N. J. Simonds.

— Next Sunday will be Children's Day in all the Methodist Churches. In Woburn, the pastor, N. B. Fisk, will preach a sermon to the children at 10.30 A. M. And there will be a grand concert and children's day service at 6.30 P. M. At the morning service several children are to be christened.

— Mr. Lewis Chadbourne, of Central Square, who started on a sea voyage for his health last November, returned home on Monday very much improved. While away he went up the Mediterranean and visited many of its islands and bordering countries, and also tarried elsewhere for health-bearing breezes and sunshine.

— It is to be hoped that our wealthy citizens will not allow the Seamless Pocket Company to locate at Plymouth, but retain it here. All good judges pronounce it a big thing and say there are lots of money in it. A question of just what shall be done with the stock ought not to keep the company away from Woburn.

— Mr. Charles M. Munroe, the well-known and esteemed dealer in clothing, gents, furnishing goods and underwear, hats, caps, etc., makes a fresh announcement in this paper which should be read. There is one thing about Mr. Munroe's dealings that can always be relied on, to wit: he never fails to come up to his manifesto.

— Last Monday Officer McSweeney arrested a 13-year old colored boy by the name of Frederick Reed for abstracting a ten-dollar check sent by Mr. Thompson, of "Thompson's Liniment," to his wife last week in a letter, which letter was delivered to a little colored girl by mistake, from whom it was taken by young Reed, who opened and destroyed it after pocketing the check. He tried to get the paper cashed at the First National Bank, but failed, which operation led to his detection. After the arrest the lad informed Officer McSweeney where the check was, and it was found there and delivered to Mr. Thompson. The boy was sentenced to the Reform School during his minority.

— If the old teachers felt any anxiety concerning their reappointments this year, relief came in the shape of notes from Mr. John Warren Johnson, Secretary of the School Board, sent out by him a few days since. There are about a dozen of said teachers on the anxious-seats, out of which number some half dozen appointments are to be made.

— Mr. S. A. Grammer has been adding some improvements to his salesroom in the Fox Block, which make it more pleasant and convenient. New drawers and shelves for shoes have been put in; painting, whitewashing and tinting make the store brighter, and the show windows have been improved. Mr. Grammer's customers will find quite a change for the better in the appearance of his store.

— Last Saturday, Mr. L. W. Perham, Chairman of the Board of Fish Commissioners, obtained at Winchester and placed in Horn Pond 5000 land-locked salmon, which, one of these days, will make good fishing. The close on black bass, with which the Commissioners stocked the Pond three years ago, will expire next season. Only citizens of Woburn will allowed to angle for them, or any other kind of fish.

— In the Superior criminal Court now in session at East Cambridge, last Tuesday George Bellew of this place was sent to the House of Correction for five months for larceny. The sentence of Stephen M. McCall, who committed the felonious assault on a school girl at Reading, on March 11, 1885, was deferred. He pleaded guilty to the indictment. On Wednesday he was sentenced to 20 years in the penitentiary.

— Probably the editor of the Advertiser will go off on another racket tomorrow, for we see by the papers that the S. P. A. will leave Boston in a special car for Fitswilliam, N. H., at half past 11 o'clock, "where a quiet Sunday will be enjoyed" (not if Editor Allen's aboard,) and on Monday proceed to Winchendon, etc., etc., As near as we can learn this galavanting spree is to be the biggest thing out of jail.

— John Moore of Ossipee, N. H., at one time Chief of Police at Peabody, and whilom resident of Woburn, in arrest by the Woburn Police for selling mortgaged property, escaped from his keeper on East street last Tuesday afternoon and got away. Chief Nelson received a telephone message from him in the evening at Boston saying he would come and pay all damages and make things lovely all round. He is bordering on the tough.

— By some means or other an erroneous idea respecting fishing in Horn Pond is abroad. The close for black bass does not expire until next year, and no person has a right to drop bob-and-sinker into that piece of water for fish for a twelvemonth yet. Mr. L. W. Perham, of the Fish Commissioners, declares that any and every person caught angling in Horn Pond this season will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

— The town has provided an excellent office in College Block for Collector Maguire. Counters, with bronzed iron trellis-work guards, tables, chairs, and a very large new safe, are among the furniture put in, and the office is not only handy and well arranged for the Collector's business, but is a very neat and pleasant one. Mr. Maguire's law quarters are in the rear of the Collector's office, just across the hallway, which are commodious, light and convenient.

— Farmers and gardeners say vegtation is on the boom. We can't hardly see where it gets the time to do it. And another thing, it has been a current belief for ages past that vegetation, at least some kinds, require considerable of the warmest kind of sunshine to enable it to get right up and push ahead, and it is a fact that it has'nt been oppressed by that commodity this season. Vegetation must be tough if it can flourish on such weather as we have had for some months past.

— Hon. B. F. Whittemore is going to have an individual, or private, electric light plant put into his fine residence at Montvale with which to do the illuminating. Like Mr. Slattery, electrician of the Sun Electric Light Company of this place, Mr. Whittemore will drive his dynamo with a water motor, by which mode he thinks his light will come considerably cheaper than gas. Several others are looking into this thing and it would not be surprising if there were a good many private electric plants in town before long.

— It is about time for people to be meditating on their vacation and saving up pennies with which to defray expenses. After July 1 a great and strange languor seizes folks which nothing can help but a vacation at the seaside or mountains. It is singular that mortals should be taken that way, and we have noticed that those who have no money, and can't borrow any, are hardly ever afflicted with the complaint. But it won't be a great while now before a good many will begin to pack their portmanteaus preparatory for a start seaward.

— The Woburn Globe reporter is enjoying some of the sweets of a newspaper career this week. It is only at odd times that a man has such experiences, and this happens to be one of them for our busy local news-gatherer. Briefly, he has been hauled over the coals for wielding too loose a pen, a habit which he will get bravely over in time. Such castigations are wholesome for young people, like the reporter under treatment, and they will have a tendency to increase his wisdom as he grows older, and render him more indifferent to life here below than he now is.

— Mr. T. Marvin Parker, who now counts himself among the "hardy yeomanry" of Maine, his time and talents being devoted exclusively to agricultural pursuits, has concluded to give a star course of entertainments here next autumn, for which has already engaged Lyceum Hall for the first three weeks in October. The course will consist of dramatic, musical, elocutionary and other entertainments, two a week, for which the best talent in the country will be engaged, and will be first class in every particular. Mr. Parker never fails to give the entire programme, and those who patronize his course will be sure of the full number of exhibitions, and their money's worth every time.

— The Advertiser has at last grasped the fact that the Woburn Branch is to be extended to Wilmington, and that it is to be the main line of the B. & L. R. R. It still has doubts about depots and things. The JOURNAL has been doing its level best to beat it into the head of the Advertiser for the last six months that this thing was to be done, and that it would be good policy for it to accept the situation and jump on while the ark was passing by. But not until now have we been able to make any impression on that head. Seeing 100 men at work the Advertiser don't know, really, but what there is something in it after all. It is in the highest degree annoying to deal with such slow, moping contemporaries.

— Mr. Allen's leader in the Advertiser this week treats of drugstore licenses. It is a very good subject and very well handled. It is a theme that, unlike most others, has but one right side to it. Which side is the right one we forbear to say. But Mr. Allen's article is liable to create a coolness between himself and the Board—to produce rupture perhaps. To avoid such unhappy consequences is the reason for the JOURNAL's silence on the subject. How true it is that often times "fools rush in where angels fear to tread." We admire Mr. Allen's pluck, but are less favorably impressed with his judgment. To have the whole Board of Selectmen turn on a fellow would be no joking affair. For ourselves we beg to be excused.

— Mr. C. R. Rosenquist says there are a great many of his fellow-countrymen who would come to Woburn and settle if they could find houses in which to live. Because of this serious drawback they will stay away, and the town loses just so much population. There are not only no empty houses, but applicants for them are turned away every day. This seems to be a pity when there is so much money in Woburn pockets for which there is no particular use. Individually, we care nothing about it one way or the other. It is no business of ours what use capitalists put their money to—in fact, it is a matter of supreme indifference to us—and we give this item merely as a matter of news, without the least interest, feeling or desire concerning the subject.

— We print the following blast from somebody who hasn't the courage to give his name and address, but whose "local habitation" it would not be hard to fix. The postal was post-marked "Boston, June 8, 2 p. m." but the writer, who is evidently nearly all eaten up by the "green-eyed monster," doesn't live in the City by about eight miles. Here is his squib: "Why can't you give us some news as to the B. & L. R. R.? All that about the depots is a very old chestnut. When does the scratching gravel begin? When will the grading make any show, say between Woburn and Winchester? Can't you give us something new?" The growl is peppered all over with Italics, and is meant to be cutting, but isn't—not a bit. If the writer will run up to Woburn he can see about the grading and gravel, and many other things which are good for sore eyes—not his sore eyes, but Woburn's.

— Money is necessary to carry on the good work of the Woburn Y. M. C. A., and for some time back an annual fair and sale has been resorted to as the means of raising a part of it. This year the Association concluded to omit the fair and resort to private subscriptions, and we hear that the town is now being canvassed for names and amounts. There ought to be no hanging back on the part of the people in this matter. Liberal subscriptions should be the rule, and we have no doubt but that they will be, because good Christian people, and others having the well-being of our community at heart, will esteem it a privilege to contribute to the maintenance and success of the very worthy work of the Y. M. C. A. Nobody questions the value of that work. The good influence of it is quietly, silently, but surely, bearing fruit, and it ought to be regarded as a high privilege to aid the cause in every justifiable way, even if sacrifices are demanded in doing so.

— From an article on the fruit business of Boston published in the Post last Saturday morning, we clip the following complimentary notice of an old firm of which Mr. Jacob Brown of this place is a member: In every northern and interior market where oranges and lemons are sold the firm name of A. S. & J. Brown & Co., doing business on "Brown's corner," junction of State and Broad streets, Boston, is as familiar as household words. This old and substantial firm, largely concerned as direct importers and jobbers in the Mediterranean fruit trade, probably handle and distribute much more of the products of that trade, in all its branches, than any other Boston mercantile house. They are also large receivers of banannas and Florida oranges and the first shippers of this latter fruit to the English markets. They have an immense New England and western trade both in green and dry fruits and are the only Eastern house who have as yet ventured to bring oranges from California in any quantity.

— In spite of the severe storm on Friday last twenty-seven enthusiastic members of the Woburn Woman's Club bravely turned their steps toward the parlor of the Congregational church. Mrs. Kate Gannet Wells, who had been announced at the previous meeting as the lecturer for june 5, was detained by illness in her family, and all efforts to procure another speaker had proved unavailing. Nevertheless the Club spent a very enjoyable and profitable afternoon in listening to and discussing papers prepared by home talent. The question "To what extent has Industrial Education been introduced into our Public Schools?" was ably answered by a member of the Club. Another member, with only a few hours notice, had prepared a very practical and suggestive paper on "Drainage of Country Homes," a subject having an especially important bearing in a town so abundantly supplied with water as our own. A lively discussion was called forth by both these papers. "What are some of the most prominent causes for near sightedness?" was answered, which, together with the reading of the annual report of "Old and New" of the Woman's Club of Malden, concluded the work of the afternoon. This being the last session of the season, the Club adjourned to October 16, when, it is expected Mrs. Wells will give her promised lecture.

RINK NOTES: Interest in the Union League Polo contests is at white heat and growing. Grand playing is the rule all along the line, and great crowds to witness the games. The Woburns, for which we cannot feel half grateful enough, is away up among the pictures—in other words, very near the top of the heap. The Woburns are a team that the town is proud of—there is no stronger or likelier one that wields a shinney stick in this glorious old Commonwealth. Every post is occupied by an expert, and the playing of the boys is admirable. They "down" all ordinary clubs as easily, to employ a hackneyed and not very elegant phrase, as rolling off a log, or eating custard pie. The prizes of the tournament are within their grasp without an extra effort. Boys do your level best: Woburn's eyes are intently fixed on you!——Last Friday night the Woburns chewed the Bay States all to pieces at the Academy, and it is said the vanquished had to be taken out of the rink with a knife and fork.——The Bay States tremble in their boots when contemplating the result of the League contest. Well they may, for the Woburns are after their hair, and will capture it.——On Tuesday evening the Woburns went down to Haverhill and cleared out the Globes so effectually that they'll stay cleared out for some time to come. That relegates the Globes to a back seat.——On Wednesday evening the Stonehams came to Woburn and played the home team. There was an immense audience at Carter's Academy to witness it, and great excitement prevailed. The contests was won by the Woburns——Mr. Carter publishes an attractive programme for the next six days in this paper. Read it carefully.

School Meeting.

A special meeting of the School Board was held on last Tuesday evening at which considerable business of importance was transacted. The resignation of Miss Hannah R. Hudson, of the Hudson school, was received and accepted, and a complimentary vote was given expressive of the high appreciation in which she is held as a teacher by the Board, and also of thanks for the good work she has done in the Woburn public schools. A change of text books in some particulars was made, the same it is unnecessary to particularize here.

A committee, consisting of H. M. Aldrich, S. Franksford Trull and Dr. C. T. Lang, was appointed to report on the credentials of candidates for the position in the Cummings school made vacant by the election of Mr. Frank B. Richardson to the office of Supervisor.

The following teachers were appointed for the next school year: James I. Hanson, A. R. Linscott, E. Maria Blodgett, Emma J. Sherburne, Ida A. C. Jacobs, Elizabeth H. Boyd, Alice M. Grammer, Mary A. Richardson, Florence E. Barrett, Emma F. Hovey, Susan A. Russell, Jennie E. Skinner, Amanda Sevrens, Mary E. Briggs, Dora T. Fuller, Lillie G. Walker, Mary E. Doyle, Mary M. Eaton, Alice S. Hartshorn, Marietta H. Bowers, Fannie S. Jones, Mary E. Hevey, Nellie L. Sheehan, Annie A. Byrne, Augusta M. Fellows, Annie M. Henshaw, Emma F. Fowle, Lizzie P. Ingalls, Lucretia K. Tidd, Josie A. Randall, Elfie I. Parker, Jessie A. Day, Abbie T. Blake, Mary J. Wakeford, Julia A. Murphy, Martha A. Russell, Jessie I. Cushing, Susan M. Frye.

There are about six more appointments which will probably be made at the next meeting of the Board to be held on Thursday evening June 18, at which meeting also the assignments of teachers will doubtless be made.

There will be twelve less schools next year than last, owing to the transfer of nearly 500 pupils to the St. Charles parochial school, which will necessitate the closing of the Hudson and Centre schoolhouses.

A Common Sense Idea.

Farmers and other out door workers, have long suffered from the too rapid wearing out of the soles of their Rubber Boots. Dirt and gravel when wet, offer the best possible tools for cutting and grinding away the rubber sole, and to this destructive agency Rubber Boots are continually exposed from the very nature of their uses. Some two years ago, however, the "CANDEE" RUBBER Co. of New Haven, Conn., hit upon the idea of making their boot soles double thick in that part which undergoes the greatest amount of wear. By their invention the extra rubber is added on the ball just where it is needed, and no where else. So that while the boot is increased one hundred fold in durability, the weight is but very slightly increased. This improvement known as the Double Thick Balls, is advertised in our columns by Messrs. SAGE & Co. of Boston, the "Candee" Co.'s Distributing Agents, and those readers who are interested in the matter can investigate for themselves by examining the goods on sale at those of our stores which deal in Rubber Boots.

A Great Discovery.

Mr. Wm. Thomas, of Newton, Ia., says: "My wife has been seriously affected with a cough for twenty-five years, and this spring more severely than ever before. She had used many remedies without relief, and being urged to try Dr. Kings's New Discovery, did so, with most gratifying results. The first bottle relieved her very much, and the second bottle has absolutely cured her. She has not had so good health for thirty years." Trial Bottles Free at W. W. Hill's Drug Store. Prohibition Meeting.

More than a dozen women, representatives of the Mass. Woman's Christian Prohibition League, came to our town and held a meeting on Thursday, June 4th, in the M. E. Church. Mrs. E. M. H. Richards of Charlestown made an address in the forenoon explaining why this band of women had gathered in this organization. Mrs. Hall of Watertown, and Mrs. James H. Earle of Newton, led most powerful devotional sessions. The Secretary, Mrs. M. O. Stevens, spoke earnestly in the afternoon urging women to do the utmost in their power to protest against drinking habits, and antagonize all laws and customs that make the sale of intoxicants legal. Mr. Dee, of the Lewis Street Mission in Boston, a number of ladies, and Mr. Whitford of this town were of the speakers. The following resolution was unanimously adopted: Resolved, That the temperance women, gathered on this day, desire to extend hearty thanks and earnest sympathy to the Selectmen and police of Woburn for so vigorously enforcing the prohibition law against illegal liquor selling.

A vote of thanks was given the Woburn ladies for their hospitality.

Who Wants A Reliable Relic?

The keeper of the Ba'r-Traps and Sacred Relics, reported that he had received from Delaware another of the goose-quill pens used by John Hancock in signing the Declaration of Independence—making the seventh now in possession of the museum.

The president instructed the secretary to return thanks to the donor, but to drop a gentle hint at the same time that there was such a thing as being too good. John couldn't have written with over five or six pens at once, and the club will divide up on the goose-quill business with any respectable society short of relics.—Lime-Kiln Club.

If it were possible

to get the testimony of the multitude who have used HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA for debility, languor, lassitude, and that general feeling of stupidity, weariness and exhaustion which every one feels during this season, we should be able to present to our readers such an overwhelming mass of commendatory messages, that the few who have not tried it would do so at once. It is a positive fact, and has been so effectually demonstrated that no one to-day denies it, that Hood's Sarsaparilla contains more real medicinal value than any article before the people.

What a Man Did with Kidney Complaint

DRACUT, MASS.
MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO.,
Lowell, Mass.:

Dear Sirs—I have suffered from kidney complaint and biliousness for fifteen years. Have tried everything and never got any good. Last January, before I commenced taking HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, everything I ate bloated me all up, pain in my chest and arms, headache and dizzy. I could not get up without feeling weary and all fagged out. Many mornings I was obliged to lie down on the lounge. To do any work seemed almost impossible. Have taken two bottles. The backache, dizziness, pain in my chest and arms, and that feeling of intense weariness are all gone. I can eat anything and it does not press me at all. Feel just like work; in fact, like a new man. Can heartily recommend HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, and hope all who desire to know anything about it will come to me and ask what I think of it. Very truly yours,
JONATHAN J. COBURN.

WINCHESTER, June 8, 1885.

EDITOR WOBURN JOURNAL:

Independence Day in Winchester is getting to be altogether too independent. I have waited for some decided action on the part of the authorities of our peaceful town in opposition to the disgraceful and destructive rowdyism with which we have been cursed for some years past, but as nothing has been done I feel constrained to make this earnest and solemn protest against the apathy and indifference of the said authorities. It is bad enough to have to endure the unearthly din that is kept up the whole night preceeding the 4th, but that might be borne with, perhaps, at least by sound and healthy persons, once in the year; but when there is added to that the disgraceful rowdyism and drunkness, and above all the reckless destruction of property in which the boys have begun to indulge, it appears to me, and to my peaceful, order-loving neighbors, that it is time to call a halt. If necessary, let an extra force of police be put on duty on the night of the 3d and kept on all night, and let Winchester, which is justly proud of its character and position in society of rural towns of the State, beware of acquiring the unenviable notoriety of a rowdy town even for one night in the year.—A. SUFFERER.

Last Tuesday a horse belonging to Mr. C. A. Tripp, the undertaker, became frightened on the Bedford road and started, breaking Mr. Tripp's wagon. He was obliged to borrow a team to reach home.

A female shepherd dog, belonging to Mr. H. W. Pearsons disappeared from her home on Monday of last week. It was thought that she had been stolen but on Sunday morning she was found in the hearse house, in the old burying ground. She had followed some one into the building and had been accidentally imprisoned there. She was in very good condition, considering that she had subsisted, nearly a week, without food or water.

Obituary.

Mr. Bradford Skelton died at his home in Burlington last Sunday evening, after a painful illness. Always suffering from asthmatic and consumptive tendencies, for the past two months he has been severely afflicted and death came at last as a merciful release from pain. Mr. Skelton possessed rare mental powers and culture. Being largely excluded from the outer world by his deafness, he withdrew more and more into the inner intellectual life where alone he could find solace and enjoyment. His children found in him an able and willing instructor and his quiet home teachings can never be forgotten by them. Mr. Skelton was one of the early travellers to California and made two journeys to that state spending some time there and also in Kansas. His reminiscences of travel were always entertaining. Mr. Skelton was a person of the highest morality, justice and honesty. The "blessing of his quiet life" can never wholly pass away.

The New Railroad.

Last Monday morning large gangs of Italian laborers, under the direction of competent overseers, began work in right down sober earnest on the construction of the Woburn Branch extension to Wilmington. After near next Christmas time there will no longer be such a piece of railroad as the "Woburn Branch" in existence, for about that time of year the extension, or, as the Boston papers call it, the "Woburn loop," will be completed, and our growing town will be the largest and altogether the most important in every conceivable light between Boston and Lowell. This is a pleasant prospect. To be taken up from the terminus of, in some respects, an insignificant branch and set squarely down on the main line of a great railroad is not a small thing for a town to have done for it, and that is what is now being done for this place, the job to be finished at the earliest practicable period. Not only is the stigma of being nothing but a "branch" institution to be removed from Woburn but all the privileges and appurtenances belonging and appertaining to a trunk line are to be granted and enjoyed by her from henceforth forever.

To begin at the beginning: Employes of the Railroad Company have taken away the southerly corner of what will hereafter be known as the "old depot," with all the pipes and appendages thereunto attached, to make room for the double-tracks of the new road, which is business. Farther up along, on the site of the Dr. Harlow house, now removed, and near Mr. Fosdick's, gangs are shoving ahead so rapidly that the sight of a temporary track and gravel train at that locality within a couple of weeks or so would not be in the least surprising. Still farther along towards Central Square and North Woburn other big bunches of men are busy with pick and shovel, where, if our postal-card correspondent is anxious to see the gravel fly, he can be accommodated any day during business hours.

The railroad is going! "Look out for the engine when the bell rings!" Woburn's dream, that she has been dreaming for years, is about to become a genuine reality—a living, breathing, moving thing, and a big one. Two years ago not many people in this town thought the present condition of our railroad affairs possible. Some croakers believed and said the talk about extending the Branch was all gammon, and that Woburn would continue to growl in summer and hibernate in winter at the end of a two-mile spur from the main line as long as she lived. Others took a more hopeful view of the matter and their hopes have ended, or will soon, in fruition. The building of the road is going to be of vast benefit to the town, unmistakable signs of which are already plainly descernable in the air.

The Board of Trade.

There was a fair attendance of the Executive Committee of the Board of Trade at last Tuesday evening's regular meeting, and although there was not much business of importance to dispose of it was an excellent session. Chairman Skinner called the meeting to order at the customary hour and announced that the only business to be transacted, that he had any knowledge of, was to take action on the report of a committee on the selection of Standing Committees of the Board. The report was taken up and acted on seriatim, and finally adopted as a whole. It goes to the full Board at its regular meeting next Tuesday evening for final disposition.

Many things of importance to the town were talked over by the members, each of whom dwelt on its revived and flattering business prospects. The Sun Electric Light's affairs have a bright outlook, the statement being made by Mr. Whittemore, its Treasurer, that there would be no lack of orders for its lamps, and that the Company would have all it could possibly do to fill them. The manufacture of lamps will begin next week, work on the factory being about completed. A meeting of the Company will be held on the 18 instant to change its name from "The Sun Electric Light and Illuminating Company" to "The Sun Electric Light Company," and to elect two more Directors, which will give four to Woburn and three to Boston.

The Seamless Pocket Company matter is not yet decided, although it can be stated that the prospect for its location here is not flattering. The hitch is the capitalization of the stock, and not with the product or its manufacture, for every one that has looked into it is entirely satisfied that there is money in the enterprise. The pocket is patented by Mr. Godfrey, which virtually secures the loom, even if he had not done that in a direct and legal way. This important manufacturing concern ought to be brought here, and it is possible it may yet be, although the prospect is not good for it.

The active members of the Executive Committee have not been idle since the last meeting. As fruits of their industry it is almost certain that within a short time The Novelty Company of Chardon street, Boston, will locate their factory here, and it is equally sure that a dynamo and other electrical machinery manufactory, now on Portland street, Boston, will soon come here too. They have been negotiating with the Sun Electric Company for the basement of its factory, and both Chairman Skinner and Mr. Whittemore stated that the early location of these two companies here hardly admitted of a doubt. The immense lower room of the Sun factory will be divided lengthwise which will afford sufficient room and splendid light for each concern. The Novelty is chiefly employed in the manufacture of shoe fastenings, in which it does an immense business, and the other turns out various kinds of electrical machinery in large quantities. Both employ many skilled mechanics which is what Woburn most needs.

There are other manufactures to which the Committee will turn their attention in due season. They do not intend to rush or overdo things, but there will be a constant reaching out for, investigating, and securing important manufacturing and other business for the town. The drift of remarks on the comparative merits, cheapness, etc. of electricity and gas, and the sentiment that prevailed at the meeting, indicated that something might be undertaken by the Board at an early day of a revolutionary character as respects light. Indeed, the Executive Committee are alive and wide awake, and the fact grows clearer and clearer every day that the Board of Trade, so far as the interests and business of Woburn are concerned, is the best and most practical institution the town ever had.

It must be that the Russian soldier fights for glory rather than gold, considering the emolument he receives for commanding the forces of the czar. A full general gets from $1500 to $2000 a year in our money, according to length of service; a lieutenant general from $1172 to $1950; a major general from $780 to $1390, and a colonel commanding a three battalion regiment, 2400 strong, gets $594.

Angular writing is now the thing among Chicago ladies. No one is admitted into what Chicago calls good society unless she can write a tall, early English, antediluvian, pointed Gothic hand that it takes a couple of persons to read. As many Chicago people cannot write at all, a woman on Wabash avenue makes a good living writing angular-hand letters for Chicago's best people.

LONDON, June 9.—A dispatch from Cairo says: Some excitement has been created here among the English officials and residents by the arrival of a Coptic merchant from Khartoum. He states that he witnessed the capture of Khartoum, and that immediately after the massacre of the garrison the Mahdi demanded the head of Gen Gordon for a trophy, but his warriors produced the head of the Austrian consul, M. Hansal. When the mistake was discovered a second search was made for Gen. Gordon, but the Mahdi's followers were unable to find any trace of the hero of Khartoum. They found several other Europeans, but no documents were found in their clothes to show that either of them was Gen. Gordon. The Copt says that it is possible that Gen. Gordon, seeing that all was lost, may have escaped south.

The Life is the Blood—Prevent Disease—Surgery the Last Resort—A Telling Letter.

Here is a fact for you to think over, viz.: Medical science proves that diseases, no matter how great a variety they seem to have, proceed from comparatively few causes. It is for this reason that some single medicines relieve or cure so wide a range of complaints—some of them appearing almost directly opposite in their natures. When a medical preparation acts at once upon the digestive and urinary organs, and also purifies the blood, the list of difficulties subject to its control is astonishing. But, while many things are said to possess this power, those which actually do exert it are very rare.

It is conceded that DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, of Rondout, N. Y., is the most effective preparation now in use for all diseases arising from a foul or impure state of the circulation. Hence it is more than likely that if the writer of the following letter had habitually taken "FAVORITE REMEDY" ten years ago, he would never have suffered from Cancer.

PITTSFIELD, MASS., March 22, 1884.

Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.

DEAR SIR:—About six years ago I was obliged to resort to external treatment for the removal of a cancerous growth on my lip. On my return home, I became sensible that my blood needed a thorough cleansing. My whole system, too, required toning up. While casting about for the best medicine to do this, your, "FAVORITE REMEDY" was so highly commended in my hearing that I resolved to try it. I did so, and the result surprised me, it was effected so quickly and completely. I soon got over the depression produced by the operation, and since the "FAVORITE REMEDY," which I have continued to take in small doses, has kept me in such health and strength as I never had before, nor expected to have. It is the best blood purifier in the world. I am sure of that.

Yours, &c.,
MATTHEW FARRELL.

If you are exposed to frequent changes of climate, food and water, Favorite Remedy should always be within your reach. It expels malarial poisons, and is the best preventative of chills and malarial fever in the world. It is especially offered as a trustworthy specific for the cure of Kidney and Liver complaints, Constipation and all disorders arising from an impure state of the blood. To women who suffer from any of the ills peculiar to their sex Favorite Remedy is constantly proving itself an unfailing friend—a real blessing. Address the proprietor, Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. A SUMMER NIGHT.

Yonder sleep the lilies white
Through the starlit summer night:
Fitful breezes rise and fall;
Fire-flies flashes and wild birds call.

Here the river winds along,
Deep and silent swift and strong:
Mighty river—toward the sea
Float my fancies forth with thee!

On the sea the white ships go,
Noiseless, winged, to and fro:
To and fro, and o'er and o'er,
Fancies float from shore to shore.

Happy fancies they, to know
Stars that shine and winds that blow,
Ships that sail, and seas that lie
Silent 'neath a silent sky.

"Enoch Arden" in Woburn.

To Dr. William P. Defriez the JOURNAL is indebted for the use of the following very curious and interesting document. It is such tales as the one told in the paper before us that excite the pen of the facile and gifted novelist; yet plain and matter-of-fact Woburn of a century ago had its tale, equal in interest to any elsewhere, of a husband leaving his young wife and child, and enlisting himself during the Revolutionary War on board a provincial privateer, but the voyage proving unfortunate, he was captured by the British and carried a prisoner to England and thence to the East Indies, —still farther from home. An absence of six or seven years ensued with no tidings of his being alive. The desolate wife courted by a widower, and relative of her former husband, marries the latter suitor—the first husband being still absent. Active hostilities between England and America being over, the missing husband returns to find his wife the wife of another. The following paper tells what they did afterwards, and how the parties concerned settled the matter between them.

Mr. Hobbs has requested me to examine this paper and see if I can shed any light or furnish any comments of an historical nature on the subject. I am fortunately able to say that I think I can. But I defer these explanations and comments to the end of this article, for our readers must be anxious to peruse the document itself.

I recognize it as in the curious crabbed hand of Josiah Johnson, Esq., a magistrate, and singular public character in Woburn in the last century. There are many old and remarkable documents in his handwriting preserved in the Public Library. He is one of the signers of this document.

The document is dated Febuary 15, 1783, and is as follows;

[ENDORSEMENT:]

Ichabod Richardson and Josiah Richardson, Stipulation.

[DOCUMENT:]

Whereas Ichabod Richardson of Woburn in the County of Middlesex and Commonwealth of the Massachussetts, Shopjoiner, about six or seven years since (during the unhappy Difference between Great Brittian and America) the Colonies Inlisted him on board one of the American Privetteers, leaving behind his wife Sarah by which [whom] he had Issue one son, in which unlucky voyage he was taken Prisoner by the Brittians and was carried to great Brittian and from thence to the East Indies, which occasioned him six or seven years absence, without any the least notice to his said wife Sarah of his being in the land of the living. During this uncertain interim, the said Sarah in a dessolate state, Josiah Richardson of said Woburn, blacksmith, being left a widower, married the Sarah: But so it happens at this present time the said Ichabod is now returned and puts in his claim to his said wife Sarah, which by reason of their said Issue, she chuses to cohabit with her former husband, the said Ichabod, as she hath had, nor is like to have any, by the said Josiah; and they, the said Ichabod and Josiah, for the amicable settlement of the unhappy affair between them, Stipulate as follows, namely:

The said Ichabod on his part, on the penalty of one hundred pounds lawfull money, Stipulates with the said Josiah, his heirs and executors to pay, discharge and Indemnify him and them from all demands of what nature soever against the said Sarah, at and untill the time of her intermarriage with the said Josiah, and from all for the future, and that he the said Josiah shall Retain all the goods by him, the said Josiah, and the said Sarah, Procured since the time of their intermarriage during life.

And he, the said Josiah, on his part Stipulates with the said Ichabod, his heirs and executors, on the penalty of one hundred pounds like money, to discharge the said Sarah from the obligations of such marriage, and to Restore all the goods she brought with her at that time.

In confirmation of all above written, they have hereunto interchangably set their hands and seals, this fifteenth day of February, one thousand seven hundred eighty-three.

[Signed:]
ICHABOD RICHARDSON. [Seal.]
JOSIAH RICHARDSON, [Seal.]

Signed, sealed, and Delivered in the presence of:
WILLIAM FOX,
JOSIAH JOHNSON.

EXPLANATIONS.

A "shopjoiner" is synonymous with our term "carpenter." William Fox, one of the witnesses to the above instrument, was a citizen of Woburn. Josiah Johnson, Esquire, the other witness, and the writer of it, was a native of Woburn, and died in this town, Dec. 24, 1784, aged 74. Josiah Richardson (son of David), born in Woburn, Feb. 22, 1746, died in Woburn, Nov. 12, 1801 (buried the 18th.)

The original has no points of punctuation in accordance with the old rule of manuscript legal documents. We have thought best to furnish our readers with a few such points, which we have done, we think, without detriment to the original meaning. We have not followed a few immaterial peculiarities of the original spelling, but in other respects have taken pains to show those peculiarities, to illustrate the treatment of certain words at that period. It seems now to be the generally accepted rule that old manuscripts should not be spelt out in print after the precise manner of their written form, but more after the style they would appear if presented in the contemporary printed page. Abbreviations and skipping of letters in written words were not used in the printed words of the times. Editorial revision was allowed, and the same liberty is ours, being sure not to alter the meaning of any phrase.

COMMENTS.

It was my good fortune about twelve years ago to find in my late father's house in this town, a manuscript journal which he had preserved, written during the Revolution, and kept by the American sailors confined in one of the jails in England. This journal was published in the New England Historical and Genealogical Register, appearing in the four volumes of that periodical, covering the years from 1876 to 1879, a hundred years after the original was written.

We find Ichabod Richardson named in this invaluable manuscript as one of the prisoners confined in that place!

The journal begins with the date of Sunday, June 15, 1777, the day following that of the author's committal to the prison at Forton, England, with his comrades, thirty-eight in all, the first prisoners confined in that place. The location of "Forton Gaol" was about one mile out of town, near Portsmouth, England, or, more strictly, one mile northwest of Gosport, which is opposite to, and separated about a mile from Portsmouth by the narrow gut at the entrance of this famous harbor. Here the writer of the journal was confined with many others from 1777 to 1779, and his writings furnish an almost daily record, penned on the spot, of the doings of the prisoners and their keepers, and of the news of the day. How interesting these details are the published journal will show. From the prison, where the journal must have been preserved with care for two years, three months and seven days, it was carried by its author to France, where he was set at liberty by exchange, July 22, 1779.

The journal then came into the possession of a fellow prisoner and shipmate of the author's, Reuben Locke, of Lexington, by whom it was brought to America. In it Locke kept his pecuniary accounts, at Lexington, from 1793 to 1798. It was afterwards preserved in the attics of his descendants, till it came into the possession of my father, the late Dr. Benjamin Cutter of Woburn. What became of the author I do not know.

Appended to the journal was a roll of American prisoners at Forton Prison, England, from 1777 to 1779. This contained the men's names, their ship, and stations, from what State, and remarks entitled, "Run, Dead, etc." Run, signified escaped. In the first column of this roll we find the name of our missing Woburn sailor and "husband," Ichabod Richardson. It is there beyond mistake. He belonged to the second batch of prisoners confined in Forton Prison. He is from Massachusetts. The roll says he was committed to the prison the 26th of June, 1777. He was one of six men belonging to the crew of a prize of which one John Hammon was the prize master, and this lot are entered in the roll as a "Prize of the Warren—taken Nov. the 19th, 1776." He must have been at sea before this date. And the above item means that while he was manning some prize of an American privateer, the craft was captured by a British man-of-war, and he with the crew carried prisoners to England. As the word "Run" is placed in the roll after his name, and also again after the name of his prizemaster Hammon, the inference is that Ichabod Richardson, and he, effected their escape from Forton Prison in England, and were not recaptured in the course of the war. The document of 1783 says he went thence to the East Indies.

This privateering was an adventurous business. A swift sailing vessel fitted out in our ports, and with a complement of men from all our towns, would sail for the English Channel, and boldly cruise for valuable prizes, until they themselves were overpowered and captured by some big seventy-four gun ship of the British, watching for the purpose. The place of refuge for the American privateers and their prizes was the coast of France. The British landed their sailor prisoners in England, and they had two celebrated prisons for Americans, one, the Forton Prison near Portsmouth, and the other the Mill Prison near Plymouth. One James Richardson, of Woburn, was a prisoner in the Mill Prison in 1777, but he was afterwards exchanged.

The genealogical portion of our subject is less difficult. The story of our document is told in part by Vinton in his Vinton Memorial, p. 388, and again in his Richardson Memorial, pp. 247, 267. All of the parties named belong to Woburn and all are descendants of our earliest families. Briefly the facts are these: Ichabod Richardson, son of Asa, was born in Woburn, March 3, 1747, and died here on February 5, 1792. He married Sarah Wyman, of this town, June 6, 1770, by whom he had a son named Ichabod, who was born January 17, 1771. His wife Sarah, during the absence of her first husband, married a second husband Josiah Richardson, March 19, 1782. Vinton's story is based on the version given in the well known Book of the Lockes (p. 56), and Vinton in his miscellaneous index to the Richardson Memorial (p. 942) uses the expression "Ichabod Richardson, another Enoch Arden;" but it has remained for the "stipulation," now the property of Dr. Defriez, to discover the true narrative.

Ichabod Richardson was a soldier in the Continental Army for eight months in 1774, per the State House Rolls (see Sewall's Woburn, p. 575). The commonly received story has been that he was made a prisoner by the British while he was serving as a "soldier," and not after his voluntary enlistment as a "sailor," as is shown in the "stipulation," before given.

Samuel Thompson, Esq., of Woburn, in his diary, says, "Ichabod Richardson's wife died June 18, 1786; buried 20th." This was the Sarah, before named. In another place in his diary, he says, Feb. 6, 1792, "Ichabod Richardson" died; 7th, "Ichabod Richardson buried."

Old Matthew Johnson, Constable for Woburn in 1770-73, and Ensign of Major Johnson's company of militia, died in Woburn, Dec. 11, 1775. He left a series of accounts which he styled "his book." His style is a greater "jaw-breaker" than the "Wonder-working Providence" of his ancestor Captain Edward Johnson, the leader of the first settlement of Woburn. We give specimens:

"Woburn March ye 7d, 1772, Ichabod Richardson is det to Mathew Johnson for saruen a writ for him on Deauid Richardson the 3d—£0—1—10." [U is used for v.]

This means that on the date given our Ichabod Richardson was debtor to constable Matthew Johnson for serving a writ for debt for him on David Richardson, the 3d, etc., 1s. 10d.

Again, Woburn, June 1, 1772, Nathan Beard, "of Willmonton," meaning "Wilmington,"—"is Det to Saruen a writ on Echebod Richardson, shopginer," 1s. 6d. Again, Woburn, June 5, 1772, "Echebod Richardson, shop-giner" is debtor to Matthew Johnson, for serving a writ for him on Jonathan Haywood. Here is another hard specimen;

"Woburn nouember 18, 1772, Jaack ston"—meaning Isaac Stone—"Det to Mathew Johnson to saruen a writ for him on Jachabod Richardson, shopginer," 1s. 6d. This was our Ichabod—one more quotation from Johnson will suffice: Feb. 8, 1773, Samuel Richardson was debtor to serving a writ on "Eichabod Richardson, shop-giner," 2s. 4d. No further mention of Richardson by Johnson occurs.

Preserved in our Public Library are the following papers relating to Ichabod Richardson:

Ichabod Richardson to James Fowle, a bond, dated Dec. 18, 1772.

Ichabod Richardson, an account, in 1773.

Same to James Fowle, Jr., a bill of sale, dated March 10, 1783. In this, Ichabod Richardson, of Woburn, carpenter, sells to the said James Fowle, gentleman, certain household articles. The enumeration is interesting, viz., one case of maple drawers, one brass warming pan, five pewter platters, twelve pewter plates, one brass kettle, one iron dish-kettle, two iron pots, one looking glass, one brass skillet, one pair andirons, one pair tongs, one large fire peal (or shovel), one small ditto, one copper tea-kettle, one round table, one square table, one pair of flat-irons, one box iron (a "sad" or hollow smoothing iron, heated by a hot iron within), two feather beds with coverlids, pillows, and bolsters, six pairs of sheets, two rugs, so called, and two candlesticks with brass "nubs" (or knobs). Note that the date of this paper is within thirty days after the date of the "stipulation" given at the commencement of this article.

Lastly, Ichabod Richardson to James Fowle, Jr., a deed, dated Jan. 30, 1787. In this he releases his interest in that part of the real estate of his father, Asa Richardson, late of Woburn, deceased, that was set to his mother, Hannah Richardson, for her thirds. This paper was executed after the decease of his wife, and five years afterward his own death occurred. His only son married in Woburn, in 1791, and removed elsewhere.

THREE EFFECTS.—The thousands of remarkable cures which have been accomplished by Hood's Sarsaparilla are due simply to three effects which this great medicine has upon those who take it:

First: It purifies the blood.
Second: It strengthens the system.
Third: It gives healthy action to the digestive organs.

With these three effects no disease can long retain its hold. It is forced to leave the system, giving place to health and strength, through the potent influence of Hood's Sarsaparilla. Sold by all druggists. Try it.

It is a curious fact that 325 years ago the king of Spain proposed a canal across the isthmus and had the same route surveyed that is now under discussion. He tried to raise money enough to do the work, and negotiated with Amsterdam bankers for a loan, but failed. A company was afterward formed in Holland for the purpose of constructing the canal, but the scheme fell through because of the belligerent attitude of England.

A New Story of Arthemus Ward.

It was back in the fifties; we were all rooming in "old 21," our bachelor barracks, in the upper story of a business block on Superior street, in Cleveland. A gay party we were—Sam and George, Alf and Harry—and our third-story den became headquarters for lots of witty and jovial boys, who made it almost a club-room in their nightly visits. Among the most welcome was Charley Brown, "Artemus Ward," as he was then just earning the sobriquet from his quaint series of humorous articles in the Plain-dealer, on which he was local editor. Brown, or Artemus, as we already began to call him, was excessively fond of practical jokes, and the fun they made among the circle of his friends will long be remembered.

One night, among the small hours, Artemus burst into our room—the door was always on the latch—rushed to the window, threw it up and, leaning out, screamed in the shrillest feminine voice:

"Help! Help! Murder! Help! Murder!"

A rush up the stair-case followed, while Artemus slipped into the nearest bed, and half a score of police dashed into the room and summoned us to account for the screams.

Artemus sleepily assured the blue-coated gentry that no woman was secreted in our premises, and so well enacted the sleepy astonishment of awakened virtue that, after prowling in vain about the room, the guardians of the peace withdrew, and we heard them ransacking the building for quite a while seeking for the cause of the alarm.

When all was quiet Artemus explained the rumpus he had made. Some three or four printers, who worked on the Plaindealer, had been imbibing too freely, and Charlie Brown coming up, found them in the hands of the police, being conducted to the calaboose. Anxious to rescue them he conceived and executed the ruse. The piercing screams of the female in distress, and the eager hope of unearthing a tragedy, drew away the attention of the night-hawks, and they let the birds in the hand loose to pursue the one in the bush.

The liberated printers made their shortest way home, while we denizens of room 21 enjoyed the joke as Artemus' last."—"Nestor," in the Ingleside.

Had the Republican party remained in power it would have gained no credit by the retention of Pearson, because his retention would have been a matter of course. There is always more joy over signs reformation in one black sheep than in the unbroken virtue of ninety and nine white ones. There could be no finer tribute to the Republican party and its 24 years of administration than the general relief and expressed because the new Democratic government goes "slow" in departing from the Republican pattern. But more than this. Nearly two months in power, the books in their hands, and yet the Democracy find no frauds, no negligences, only one postmaster—at Rome, N. Y.,—mixed in his accounts, with no loss even there, and are actually compelled to testify to the excellence of the departments to which they succeed.—Ex-Governor Long.

The other day over 50,000,000 Russian peasants assembled in all the churches of the empire, offered thanksgiving to God for their liberation from serdom. March 3, or Feb. 19 O. S., 1861, the late czar, in his famous ukase, used these words: "Cross yourselves, othodox people, and ask God's blessing for a new life." And that day a new era was inaugurated in Russia. Chattels became freemen.

On the anniversary of this day the freed serfs of Russia voluntarily abstain from work and dedicate the day to thanksgiving and prayers. In the last year of his reign the czar liberator ordered, and the holy synod sanctioned the decree, that henceforth the 19th day of February (March 3) should be observed throughout Russia as a legal and church holiday. In Russia they have about two-score church holidays and about a dozen czar's holidays, but this is the only holiday of the peasants.

TOWN OF WOBURN.

Board of Health Regulations.

ISSUED JUNE, 1885.

Extracts from the Public Statutes of Massachusetts, Chapter 80:

"The Board of Health shall make such regulations as it judges necessary for the public health and safety. Whoever violates any such regulations shall forfeit a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars.

In compliance with the foregoing statutory provisions, and believing that a great amount of good may be done by timely and energetic abatement of all nuisances, the Board of Health of the town hereby issue the following regulations:—

REGULATION 1.—Ordered that all putrid or decaying vegetables or animal matter be removed forthwith from all vaults, privies, cellars and out-houses, and either buried or deposited at least ten rods from any highway, dwelling-house or public building in this town, and covered with dry earth.

REG. 2.—Ordered that the contents of all privy vaults and cess-pools in the thickly populated districts of this town shall be removed during the night time, viz: between the hours of ten o'clock, P. M., and four o'clock, A. M., and that all persons so removing night soil or refuse of any kind which emits an offensive order must have their carts tight to prevent leakage and effectually covered and not stopped more than five minutes on any street within ten rods of any dwelling-house except for loading and unloading; and no person shall empty any cess-pool or closet without the consent of the Board of Health.

REG. 3.—The Board will order the removal of all swine, goats, or other animals where their presence appears to be prejudicial to the public health and comfort.

REG. 4.—Ordered that no privy vaults be opened except for purposes of disinfection, or by consent of the Board of Health.

REG. 5.—Ordered that all tanneries, glue manufactories or other manufactories from which arise an offensive odor be kept clean, and that covered receptacles be provided by the proprietors for the deposits of filth that flow from them.

REG. 6.—Ordered that all slaughter-houses be kept clean and that all the offal therein be removed daily.

REG. 7.—Ordered that no fish, garbage, house or store offal, water or brine containing blood, refuse animal or vegetable matter, shall be thrown upon or into any street, lane, yard or gutter, and that all persons are hereby notified to desist from such practices and ordered to deposit the same in tight vessels having a tight fitting cover, and if not properly buried on the premises, the same shall be removed not less often than once every forty-eight hours at least ten rods from any house or highway and covered with dry earth.

REG. 8.—Ordered that there shall not be sold or offered for sale any decayed or unripe fruit, or decayed or unfit meat, or adulterated milk, or milk from improperly fed or diseased animals.

REG. 9.—Ordered that no sink or sewer drain or water closet shall empty into any street gutter, or upon the surface of any sidewalk, street, alley, or lane in this town.

REG. 10.—Ordered when any physician is called to attend upon a person in this town sick with small-pox, scarletina, or other contagious disease dangerous to the public health, the said physician shall immediately give notice thereof to the Board of Health. Said notice shall contain the name of the person sick, the name of the disease, the name of the householder, and the street on which the sick person resides, and all physicians are requested to immediately report fatal termination of any case.

REG. 11.—Any householder in whose family any case of contagious disease occurs shall immediately give notice to the Board of Health, and use all reasonable measures to prevent infection of others.

REG. 12.—No owner or occupant of any dwelling-house in the town of Woburn, shall keep or permit to be kept any fowl, swine, goats, or other animals, in any room or cellar of said dwelling.

REG. 13.—Parties can have the vaults and cess-pools cleaned by leaving their order and $2.00 for each with the Chief of Police, where more than one load is to be taken from each vault or cess-pool, $2.00 for each load must be left. No order will be received without the money accompanying it.

The inhabitants are earnestly requested to co-operate with the Board in carrying out the foregoing regulations, and thereby secure healthy sanitary conditions.

The Board takes the liberty to suggest further that the people avoid the unnecessary use of water, which in the absence of proper drainage will saturate the soil in the vicinity of their houses to a dangerous degree; and also to suggest the daily use of dry earth or sifted ashes to cover the contents of privies, or open receptacles of sink water, to absorb poisonous gases and prevent exhalations.

Whereas, the diseases designated as small-pox, scarlet fever, diptheria, typhus fever, and cholera are contagious and dangerous to the public health, and have been, and may easily be, contracted at funerals from dead bodies or apartments which have been infected by such diseases, it is therefore Ordered, that, from and after this date, no public funeral shall be held over the remains of any person having died of small-pox, scarlet fever, diptheria, typus fever, or cholera without the written permit of the Board of Health; and under such regulations as may prevent the spread of either of said diseases.

Ordered, further, that the remains of persons dying of either of said diseases, shall at once be placed in a tight or sealed coffin, and shall not thereafter be exposed to view or disturbed except for burial.

Ordered, that no owner, driver, or other person having charge of any hackney carriage or other closed vehicle used as a public conveyance, shall receive, or permit to be placed, or convey in any manner, in or upon said carriage or other vehicle, any person sick or infected with the small-pox or any other contagious disease, or the body of any person who has died of small-pox, or any other contagious disease.

The Board of Health directs special attention to small-pox, scarlet fever, dipththeria and typhus fever as being contagious, dangerous to the public health, and call attention to the duties of citizens and physicians as provided by Public Statutes.

The Board is fully aware that many individual cases of diptheria and other contagious diseases occur without any spread of the disease; but during epidemics at least the rule is to the contrary, and there are no means of knowing what is safe, without taking precautions which a different course might, occasionally, have proved to be unnecessary. They therefore at this time publish the sections of the law governing such cases, and hold all persons interested responsible. It is further desired that physicians should fill out the postal cards furnished by this Board.

SEC. 78. When a householder knows that a person within his family is taken sick of . . any . . disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the . . Board of Health of the town in which he dwells. If he refuses or neglects to give such notice, he shall forfeit a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars.

SEC. 79. When a physician knows that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with . . any disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the . . Board of Health of the town; and if he refuses or neglects to give such notice he shall forfeit for each offense a sum not less than fifty nor more than one hundred dollars.

Per order of the Board of Health.
JOHN FERGUSON, Clerk.

A VIGIL.

BY EDMUND CLARENCE STEDMAN.

I walk the lane's dim hollow,
Past is the twilight our,
But stealthy shadows follow
And Night withholds her power,
For somewhere in the eastern sky
The shrouded moon is high.

Dews from the wild rose dip unheard,—
Their unforgotten scent
With that of woods and grasses blent;
No muffled flight of bird,
No whispering voice, my footfall stops;
No breeze amid the poplar-tops
The smallest leaf has stirred.

Yet round me, here and there,
A little fluttering wind
Plays now,—these senses have divined
A breath across my hair,—
A touch,—that on my forehead lies,
And presses long
These lips mute of song,
And now, with kisses cool, my half-shut eyes.

This night? O what is here!
What viewless aura clings
So fitfully, so near,
On this returning even tide
On this returning even-tide
When Memory will not be denied
Unfettered wings?

My arms reach out,—in vain,—
They fold the air:
And yet—that wondering breath again!
Too vague to make her phantom plain,
Too tender for despair.

A PERILOUS VOYAGE.

John Allen was a well-to-do farmer of Woodstock, on the St. John's river, and, besides the income derived from his land and dairy, he owned in connection with his son, a tract of wild timber, some dozen miles up the river.

Beginning to turn its advantage to account in a small way, the two had erected a small shingle-mill near the shore and kept a half a dozen men at work during the winter. The result the first year was so satisfactory that it was resolved to increase the facilities of the manufacture, and, that it might be done understandingly, they determined to visit the mill for a personal examination.

They were to have one of the farm hands drive them up as far as they could get with a team and from that point it was hardly more than a mile to the mill.

More than half the way the road was merely a rough cart-track through the woods, making the journey rather a tedious one; but they started very early in the morning they calculated to make all the necessary investigations and get back early in the afternoon.

This was the plan agreed upon, and the time set was the following Saturday.

As soon as it became known in the house, the two youngest boys, Harry and Jack, were wild with excitement.

"Mayn't we go, too?" they shouted in concert. "Please let us go. We never saw a shingle-mill."

"A shinge-mill isn't much to see," answered their father. "And besides, you'll be getting into all sorts of danger."

"Oh! no, we won't! We'll be so careful, if you'll let us go. It would be such a nice ride!"

"Why don't you let them go, father?" said Mrs. Allen.—"They won't take up much room, and they'll enjoy it so much."

"Well, well," said the farmer, good-naturedly, "let 'em go, then; let 'em go; I shall have to take a double wagon, if they do, though; and that's big enough for the whole family."

"Why not take the whole family then?" asked Mrs. Allen, half in earnest. "I've hardly been out of doors the whole winter and spring, and I should enjoy the ride as well as the boys."

Farmer Allen laughed.

"Any more of you want to go? What would you do with the baby?"

"Take her! Of course. You don't suppose weather like this would hurt her? She needs the air as much as anybody."

"Are you really in earnest, mother?"

"Certainly. I don't see why you can't make a pleasure jaunt out of it as well as a business one. I haven't been so far away from home for five years, and I guess the house could get along without me for half a day. Becky can get dinner for the men at noon, and we should get home by two or three o'clock, at the latest."

"Well, just as you say, then. I'm sure I've no objections. We'll have to start pretty early, and, instead of having one of the men go with us, I shall have to drive."

So the matter was settled.

At seven o'clock the next Saturday morning the party set out, all in the highest possible spirits.

Innumerable charges were left with Becky as to what to do about dinner, and how to dispose of other household duties, if they should not return at the time expected. A huge basket of lunch was placed under the seat, much to the satisfaction of Harry and Jack, who had been too excited in regard to the journey to care for breakfast.

It was a splendid April morning, and but for the brown look of the fields and the thinly-leaved trees would have seemed like June. The sun shone and the birds sang, and everything seemed delightful.

The two boys were constantly finding something new to admire in the things about them, and their merry shouts often occasioned a sympathetic "coo" on the part of the baby, who stared with her big round eyes at the commonest objects as if they were the most wonderful things in the world.

It was after eleven o'clock when they reached the mill. The wagon had been left at the end of the road, a mile back, the horses taken out, and a bag of oats emptied upon the ground for them. They were both steady-going old veterans, used to the harrow and plow, and would stand just where they were left hours at a time. The farmer, however, had taken the precaution, after putting the bridles in the wagon, to tie the halter to one of the wheels.

The mill stood close down to the water's edge, and in front and all round it were heaps of blocks, refuse timber logs, and shavings. It was not a very romantic looking place, but the children were delighted with it.

The long ride had given them all a good appetite. A rough table was made out of some boards laid across a couple of stumps, and the contents of the big basket were soon placed upon it.

Lunch finished, the farmer, and his son began their investigation, while Mrs. Allen and the children wandered about, looking for arbutus and gathering pine-cones. There was more to be looked after about the mill than was expected, and it was two o'clock before the job was finished.

So busy had they been, that the gradual clouding up of the sky had not been noticed, and it was not until the sudden pattering of rain began upon the leaves, that the little party began to look about them.

"It's nothing but an April shower," said Tom. "We shall have to get under the shelter of the mill till it passes over."

"Don't you believe it," returned the farmer. "We've had rain hanging round for a week past, and we've got it now, sure enough. Do the best we can, we shall be drenched. You run on ahead, Tom, and put the horses in, so as to be ready by the time we get there. We'll be right after you."

Obedient to his father's advice, Tom hurried rapidly along the path leading to the spot where the team had been left, while the remainder of the party followed after, as fast as they could. The place was reached at last. The wagon was there, the two bridles lay just where they were thrown, but the horses were gone.

For a moment the farmer stood dumbfounded. Then he began to examine their tracks.

"It's plain enough," at last he hurriedly said. "They've slipped the halter and started back home. You'll have to see if you can't overtake 'em, Tom. I'll take your mother and the children back to the mill. The wind is rising, and it is setting in for a cold, raw storm."

The rain came faster and faster, and by the time they had regained the shelter of the mill they were thoroughly wet through.

A fire was soon kindled in the little cracked stove used by the shingle-makers the winter before, and the time in waiting for Tom's return was employed in drying their clothes.

An hour passed away. The storm grew more and more furious. The rain poured down in torrents, and the great tops of the pine trees bent and writhed in the terrible gusts. The river, always rapid and strong, was now a fierce, turbulent stream, whose middle current nothing could cross in safety.

At last Tom burst into the mill.

"It's of no use," he exclaimed. "We've got to stay here or swim home. I went clear to the main road, more than five miles from here, and found that the horses have turned the wrong way, instead of going home. If they had gone straight back, the men would have known that something had happened and come for us; but there's no chance for that now."

At this Harry and Jack began to cry, and even Mrs. Allen looked dismayed.

"Staying here to-night is out of the question," said Mr. Allen. "We haven't a morsel to eat and every hour we stay makes it worse. We're in for a long storm and the road half the way from here to the turnpike will be under water within twelve hours."

"What shall we do then?" asked Tom, who was holding his dripping coat before the blaze.

"If it were fair weather, I should know what to do quick enough; and I don't know but we shall be obliged to come to it anyway."

"Why what do you mean, father?" asked Mrs. Allen, anxiously.

He pointed to the river.

"I should take the shingle-raft lying there by the landing. It is staunch and strong, and just as safe as any boat that ever floated on the St. John river."

Mrs. Allen had all a woman's dread of the water, and her heart sank at once. But the idea of being compelled to remain for two or three days in that desolate spot, without food or a chance to sleep, was more dreadful yet, and she felt almost like urging her husband to carry out the desperate idea he had announced.

"We've got to decide upon something very quick," continued the farmer. It'll be dark in an hour, and then we shall have no choice."

He went to the window and looked out for a moment at the river. Then he came back to the stove.

"It storms fearfully; but then we're pretty nigh as wet as we can be now. I believe we can keep in shore without much trouble, and at the rate the steam is running now, we should reach Woodstock in less than an hour. 'Ive done it in worse weather than this.

"I shouldn't be afraid myself," said Tom, "put then there's mother, and the children to think of."

"I'm not a fraid, Tom," said Mrs. Allen. "And even if I were, I believe it is the only thing we can do."

"We'll try it, then," said Mr. Allen decidely. "Come, Tom, we've no time to lose. See if there is rope enough in the corner there for a coil to throw ashore when we get to the landing at Woodstock, and put the paddles aboard. Let me take the baby, mother. Now, boys, jump on. There's room enough for a regement. You'll have to make up your minds to stand a good deal of water the next hour. Push her off!"

The raft swung slowly round from its fastenings, and in another minute struck the shore current, which, though less swift than the middle of the river, was yet so strong as to make safe navigation a difficult task. The rain came with such blinding force that it was almost impossible to see the shore, and the increasing dusk threatened to grow into total darkness before the end of their perilous journey was reached.

It was barely three-quarters of an hour from the time they left their starting point when the raft touched the landing-place at Woodstock, and Tom, rope in hand, jumped on shore, to throw the loop over the post which had always stood there.

To his dismay the post was gone, and as the raft swept along he felt the rope slip through his fingers, in spite of his endeavors to hold it. There was another point, lower down, where the raft might strike, if his father could keep it out of the current by his single arm. Beyond that the river made a sudden bend, and if the landing should be missed there, no power could keep them from going down the river.

He hurried to the nearest houses of the village and gave the alarm, and then flew down the street, which ran parallel with the river, to the lower landing.

He was just in time to see his father spring from the raft, holding the rope, and rushing in the water up to his waist, caught hold of it to assist. Their united strength bade fair to bring the raft into the eddy, and the shouts of rapidly-advancing men, who had been roused py Tom's brief warning, gave them additional energy.

Two minutes later half a dozen strong arms were aiding them, and the raft was slowly drawing to the shore, when the rope suddenly parted.

With a wild scream the mother rose, with her babe in her arms, as if to plunge in the river. Then, seeming to remember the children who clung to her garments, she sank down again, and the next moment the fierce current had swept them away in the darkness.

There was but one hope more. If the ferry, five miles lower down, could be reached in time, they might be saved; and the almost distracted father and son, mounted on horses provided by sympathing friends, galloped there. Too late! the ferry-keeper had seen some black object rush by in the darkness, and heard cries for help which he was unable to give. They were in the hands of God, and He only could help them.

All that night Farmer Allen paced the floor of his desolate home. The friends who came to comfort him found their endeavors vain. He wished to be alone with his sorrows. Tom had remained at the ferry, determined to take a boat at early daylight and follow down the river.

There was little sleep that night in Woodstock, and long before the usual time for the village to be astir, little groups were about in the rain, discussing the sad event of the preceding evening. Suddenly there was a stir in the direction of the telegraph office, and the operator, who slept there, came rushing out with a sealed envelope in his hand, in a state of great excitement.

"Who'll carry this over to Farmer Allen?" he shouted.

"What is it? Any news? Is it about his folks?"

"He'll tell you. It's his news. I've no right to tell you. I wish I had. Who'll take it?"

"I will! I will! exclaimed half a dozen, eager to be the bearer of the news.

The message was entrusted to one of the fleetest-footed boys of the villiage, who sped over the mile which lay between the office and Farmer Allen's like a greyhound.

"Here's something for you," he panted, as he burst into the house without knocking.

The farmer took it mechanically, without a thought that it concerned those whom he already looked upon as in heaven. Breaking the seal, he opened the folded slip of paper, and glanced at its contents. Then with a fervent "Thank God!" he fell upon his knees, and the feelings so long, pent up found vent in tears of thankfulness.

The message was a brief one. It ran:

FREDRICTON, N. B., April 19.

John Allen:—Your wife and children were picked up at light this morning on a shingle-raft, three miles above this city. All safe. Answer."

Swift as were the feet of the messenger, they had hard work to keep pace with John Allen's on the return. The news sped like wild-fire, and within half an hour everybody in Woodstock knew the contents of the dispatch.

Little more need be said. Farmer Allen followed the message he sent, without the loss of an hour. That was Sunday morning, and it was Thursday night before the parted household met beneath the roof whose hours' desolation made it yet the more sacred and precious to all.—[Independent.

"She Jist Glorified."

You didn't heed the funeral procession the other day. Indeed, you could hardly have realized that it was one. A wagon with a coffin in it—another carrying an old man and a weeping daughters.

In the village it might have been different, no matter how poor and lowly the dead, but in the city the rush of business makes us selfish and hard-hearted. If we cannot lose an hour on a legal holiday, our neighbors cannot expect us to follow their dead to the narrow home.

"Wasn't sick werry long," said the old man as he turned from the grave to make his way homewards. "She had dun got too old to stay wid us any longer."

"Did she crave to live on?"

"'Deed she didn't, boss. It war jist like de sun gwine down arter a long summer day. She sunk away, an' sunk away, an' de Lawd he dun took her at de las' an' we didn't know it."

"How did she die?"

"She jist glorified. We war chillen together back in de ole times. We growed up on de same plantashun, an' we'd bin mar'd ober fifty y'ars. She believed in de Lawd an' in Heaben. I'ze hearn folks mock her an' scorn her bekase ob dat belief, but she nebber let go. Fiah nor flood nor sickness nor hunger could shake dat belief. Sometimes, when the fiar went out an' we crept clus up to each odder to keep de cold away, I'd whisper to her:—

"'Linda, do you still believe dar' am a Lawd who watches ober sich poor creeters as us?'

"An' she would answer me:—

"'Moses, he eben notes de sparrows which fall to the gronnd.'"

"And she died believing?"

"Beliebin'! Why, boss, she jist glorified! When de summons come an' she felt she'd got to go her old face lighted up wid de sunbeams of Heaben till I didn't know it. We gathered 'round her and sung of de beautiful sho' an' den she prayed. She axed Him to bring me an' de little one safe frew de dark valley, an' den her face lit up some mo', an' her eyes sparkled wid joy, an' a crown of glory was laid on her brow. Good cider vinegar is recommended for diarrhœa, two ounces for an adult and one teaspoonful, moderately diluted, for a child of one year. An excellent remedy for hiccough for young and old is granulated sugar moistened with pure vinegar. For an infant give from a few grains to a teaspoonful. Bear in mind that lemons are the most useful fruit in domestic economy. The juice of half a lemon in a teacup of strong black coffee, without sugar, will often cure a sick headache. Lemon juice and salt will often remove ordinary iron rust. If the hands are stained there is nothing that will remove the stains so well as lemon. Cut a lemon in half and apply the cut surface as if it were soap. Lemon juice is also a remedy for rheumatism and for the so-called biliousness of Spring. In the latter case, take the juice of a lemon before breakfast; the pulp may also be eaten, avoiding every particle of skin. Lemon juice with sugar, mixed very thick, and taken at intervals, relieves coughs. It must be very acid as well as sweet.

A police sergeant boasted of the honesty that prevailed in his precinct. "Why," he said, "you might hang your gold watch on a lamp post in the evening, and find it still there in the morning." Bill Nye's Appearance.

He is a tall, angular sort of man, who looks like a granger. He has a smooth face, with the exception of a base ball mustache. The top of his head, where some of his hair used to be, is also smooth and somewhat shiny, but it is not as bright as his intellect. How such a solemn-looking man can write such an unceasing flow of fun is a mystery even to himself. I asked him for an explanation, but he could not give me any. The cast of his countenance suggests that he might be a preacher, but nevertheless he does write. He writes some of the best articles going the rounds.

When quite young William was an infant. He showed great partially for pretzels, but he has weaned himself gradually of the pretzels, being now satisfied with the beer.

Later in life he became a schoolboy, and was noted for the pensiveness which has since become chronic with him. No cherry tree within five miles of his father's residence was safe from the inroads of his little hatchet, and many and many quiet talks did he have with his father on the subject. On such occasions old Mr. Nye would say: "Come to my arms, my darling boy. I'd rather warm you up for cutting cherry trees than to sit down to fried oysters and champagne." And placing William over his knee, the truth-loving parent would keep on talking to William about the sinfulness of lying, at the same time wielding a board with the regularity and force of a steam-wielded mush paddle.

William grew up to be one of the most promising young men in the settlement, and at last undertook to study law. He became such an expert that he was always appointed by the court to defend pauper criminals, and most of his clients are alive to-day and doing well in the various penitentiaries of the states in which he practiced his profession.—*Alex. What They Fried the Steak In.

My editor and I once started to walk to St. Albans with a valued friend, who was by profession a pedestrian and a piano-forte tuner. Midway we put up at a snug hostelry, and ordered, for the comfort of the inner man, a dish of rump steaks. While this was being prepared we sat in pleasant converse, which was interrupted by a peculiar hissing and frizzling sound that unmistakably came from the kitchen. "Why hang me," suddenly exclaimed Pendragon, with his hair almost on end with horror, "hang me, if they're not frying it!"—the "it" of course having reference to the stake. Our lamented friend thereupon drew from his pocket a tuning-fork, struck it upon the table, and quietly remarked, as he applied it to his ear, "Yes, and hang me if they're not frying it in G!"

A Costly Little Painting.

"My, but these art works do run into money," remarked a passenger whose breath smelled like the south side of the Ohio river; "it beats all what fools some folks make over pictures. When I was in Chicago I saw a little painting about a foot square that was held at $500. 'Spect some simpleton will come along and buy it. If I had a million of money you'd never catch me paying $500 for a little painting like that."

"That's the way you talk," spoke up a bashful drummer, "but I'll bet that you've paid four times as much money for a painting not a tenth part as big."

"What, me?"

"Yes, you."

"What kind of a painting?"

"The one at the end of your nose."

SOLDIERS' CIVIL SERVICE BILL LOST.

Last Monday the bill to exempt soldiers and sailors from civil service examinations come up in the Massachusetts Senate for enactment and when the vote was finally taken it resulted in a tie—16 for the bill and 16 against it. President Pillsbury announced that if he had voted it would have been in the negative. Senator Harlow of Woburn voted nay. Thus the bill was lost and soldiers and sailors must take their chances with civilians in an examintion for public places.

Some time has elapsed since the bill was introduced in the Legislature, durwhich considerable new light has been thrown upon it. It appears, so far as we have been able to see into it, that the opposition to the bill originated with, and has been chiefly maintained by, a lot of political nondescripts calling themselves civil service reformers, which fact alone was a sufficient reason why it should have become a law. It is always safe to oppose any measure which these superfine gentry advocate, and vice versa. This civil service exemption bill was a strong case in proof of the point.

Then again, it appears that the soldiers, as a rule, favored the bill and wanted it enacted. To be sure, the civil service gentlemen at first made considerable of a showing of opposition to it from the soldiers, but later developments changed all that and with it public opinion to a great extent. Before anybody had got much of an understanding as to the nature of the proposed legislation and interest in it was yet undeveloped the champions of a visionary political reform scoured the State for written and printed protests against the measure and succeeded in gathering together quite a formidable batch of them, which, when presented to the Legislature, produced the impression on the intellects of that august body that the soldiers and sailors were nearly unanimous against the bill.

Later on these questionable ways of the civil service reformers to get up a showing of opposition from the soldiers were exposed and the truth of the business came to light. This changed the complexion of affairs; but the matter had gone too far to be remedied and the civil service champions won the game as against their betters, the soldiers and sailors.

On Tuesday the Senate, by a vote of 18 to 16, refused to reconsider the bill, and the measure is dead for this session at least.

☞ It is a matter of some surprise that the President should be so both to remove the present Collector of the Port of Boston and Postmaster, both of whom are rank Republicans and "offensive partisans" in the worst sense of the term. It is something of a mystery certainly. The delay in removing them is exceedingly exasperating to the Democrats, a fact which the President understands and yet he takes no steps towards making a change. It may be that the mugwumps are to blame for this. It looks as though their fingers were in the pie, for on no other grounds can the President's procrastination be rationally accounted for than a desire to curry favor with them. The conditions are ripe for a change in those important offices and have been for several months, and yet it does not come. Is it any wonder the Democrats chafe and fret under the delay, and are growing disgusted with the namby-pamby ways of their head man in Washington?

☞ At the weekly meeting of the Congregational ministers of Boston last Monday morning resolutions were adopted in favor of allowing preaching on the Common. Lately there has been trouble in the city government about it, and the ministers have very properly come to the rescue of the clergyman who was fined, a week or two ago, for a technical violation of an old and unjust law. Boston really ought to be ashamed of herself for interposing legal obstacles to the free spread of religion; but, then, she is peculiar, and always was, and celebrated for "notions." But her clergymen should insist on it that the gospel shall be preached in her public places without being followed by fines and imprisonment.

☞ The Roxbury Advocate had the good sense to oppose the passage of the Metropolitan Police Bill, by which the city of Boston is to be robbed of the right of self-government. It was a miserable piece of partisan legislation, which is bound to return to plague its inventors one of these days and make them sorry they did it. And besides that, it is a strain on constitutional rights against which it is refreshing to see a staunch Republican paper, like the Advocate, stand up and be counted.

— The Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. Church will give an entertainment and supper on Thursday evening, June 25, to raise funds for society purposes. The ladies are making preparations for a nice affair which no doubt they will have. No pains will be spared to please and satisfy all who attend. Bear in mind the date.

— If reports are true there were radical disagreements of opinion respecting the physical condition of Mr. John C. Higgins on last Monday. Who were in the right it would be difficult to say, but it proves this, that doctors can't almost always tell whether a creature is sick or whether he isn't any more than other people can.

— At the ordination services by Bishop Paddock, in Grace Church, Newton, last week, among others, Henry W. Winkley, son of J. Frank Winkley of this place, was ordained to the priesthood. At the close of the services he was united in the holy bonds of wedlock to Miss Jennie Cain of Williamstown, by his father, assisted by the Bishop.

— Dr. Bartlett has moved into his Pleasant street home and got tolerably well settled. The change and improvements have made as good as a new house of it, and the interior would hardly be recognized as the late residence of Hon. A. E. Thompson. The alterations have been made with a view to comfort and convenience as well as the improvement in looks, in which respect there is probably no house in town that approaches nearer the complete thing. Mr. C. E. Gooday was master carpenter; Mr. W. S. York did the mason work; Mr. W. H. Slater, the painting, and and Mr. Thomas J. Harney did the plumbing—all first class workmen.

— Mr. David F. Moreland and family returned to this place last Monday to remain permanently. They did not tarry very long in the southwest where, it was said, they intended to make their future home. The return of Mr. Moreland renders possible a serious fuss in the School Board, his place on which was filled although he had not resigned.

— Thomas H. Hill & Co. have removed their insurance headquarters from Lyceum Hall building to the office formerly occupied by the Johnson brothers, lawyers, in College Block, where they will be happy to welcome their numerous old customers and as many new ones as may be pleased to give them a call. Insurance in all its branches is carried on by Hill & Co. in the best of style.

— The following are the officers of Division No. 3. A. O. of H., chosen last week:—President, James McMahon; Vice President, James Meehan; Recording Secretary, Dennis F. Meehan; Financial Secretary, Francis McPartlin; Treasurer, John H. Murphy; Asst. Secretary, Patrick Greean; Steward, Edward Madden. The members will take their annual excursion and holiday on July 18.

— Work is progressing in lively style on the construction of the "Woburn loop." Gangs of laborers are stationed at intervals from near Winchester to Wilmington, who are beginning to make the land look like a railroad. A gravel train will be put on in a few days, if it is not already at work, and the whole thing wears a lively business aspect. Push is the word, and an early completion of the job may be looked for.

— Last Saturday, as Mr. Joseph E. Hiller, a gentleman very well known here as an agent for the Massachusetts Temperance Society, was turning a corner of the new passenger depot at West Medford he ran against a staging and came within an ace of ruining one of his eyes. The plank was of just the right height to hit Mr. Hiller square in the eye which it did hard, and the wonder was that he escaped with no worse injury.

— Last week the Advertiser gave 22 good reasons why Woburn is a desirable place for people to locate in, but, for some cause or other, failed to give one of the most important, namely, the existance of a live, wideawake, working Board of Trade. This reason should have been placed at the head of the list, but the Advertiser did'nt put it there, nor even mention it. We trust our contemporary will embrace the earliest opportunity to correct this very serious error.

— Mr. N. J. Simonds has received the dynamos for the electric plant in his factory and hopes to have the lights running by the first of July. There is a good deal of work in getting ready to start up an establishment of the kind, and Mr. Simonds has found the wiring a long job. But he is getting everything ready for an early start, and in the course of a couple of weeks the business houses on Main street will be lighted with the best of Edison's electric lamps.

— It was reported that Feeney, who was sent to the House of Correction a week or two since, paid the fine and was released from confinement last Tuesday. After Feeney went down a big fuss was raised and a subscription paper was circulated to get money enough to pay for his release from prison; but finding that nobody cared enough about him to pay for his freedom he and the old woman scratched round and soon the money was forthcoming. That is the story as we heard it.

— Chief Nelson shows good sense. In this: In making raids and seizures and prosecuting rumsellers his only aim is to break up the nefarious traffic. He holds no enmity against anyone, but despises the business, to put a stop to which he is employed by the town. He pursues no man with malice: would not unnecessarily imprison any: but the sale of intoxicating drinks must be dried up here. Without animosity or ill-will towards violators he means that the laws shall be executed. He means simply business, and that is exactly what an officer should mean.

— Mr. Lucius Tuttle, head of the Passenger Department of the Boston & Lowell Railroad, has just published "Summer Saunterings," a beautifully illustrated Guide-book for summer travel in northern New England, in which we find these lines among the descriptions of towns along the route: "And Woburn on the left, a few miles distant, and now reached by a branch track, over which it is proposed to locate the main line, thus bringing one of the oldest, richest and most thriving towns of 'Old Middlesex' on the to the main thoroughfare." Good enough!

— Children's Day was observed in the major part of our churches last Sunday with appropriate exercises. Music especially selected and rehearsed for the day was rendered at the different Sunday School concerts, and flowers in rich profusion adorned the Churches in which the services were held. The concerts, for which due preparations had been made, were of more than ordinary interest and pleasing. Besides singing by the pupils there were recitations, declamations, dialogues, etc.,—all very pretty and nice. There is a general observance of Children's, or Flower, Day throughout the country.

— Mr. John F. Wilkinson, who was foreman of the JOURNAL office in 1881-2, died at Saco, Maine, last Friday, aged 27 years, deeply lamented by a large circle of friends and acquaintences. He had not been strong for some years previous to his death, and was forced to leave the JOURNAL office on account of poor health. The following is taken from a full and kindly written notice of the deceased which appeared in the Biddeford (Me.) Daily Journal last Monday:—

During his recent illness he has been a terrible sufferer, and his end at last drew nigh in agony. He bore his illness and pain manfully, and was perfectly reconciled to meet his end. Mr. Wilkinson was a young man of more than ordinary ability. He possessed a true and firm character, and a noble heart. He was a kind husband, a loving father, a good citizen, and a man respected by those with whom he was acquainted. He leaves a wife, a daughter of the late Theodore Stevens, of Saco, and a child aged three years.

— Messrs. Martin and Jacob Ellis are engaged in moving the great mansion house of Robert Treat Paine, Jr., in Waltham to a site several hundred feet away where the millionaire owner intends to add to it a rustic stone edifice, the whole to make one of the largest private residences in the county. Mr. Paine will expend a great many thousand dollars on this scheme, and when it is completed he will have a residence imposing, big and lordly enough to meet the wants and fancy of a British nobleman. The Ellises are also engaged in moving the Congregational church at Newton. They are famous building-movers, and always have their hands full of work.

— Our esteemed postal-card correspondent of last week, who failed, through lack of courage, from forgetfulness, or some other reason, to affix his sign manuel to his criticism, or growl, came up this week, all smiling and just like a little man, and says his name is Jones. That is perfectly satisfactory to this office, so Jones let it be. The only thing about his latest p. c. deserving reproof from us occurs in this passage: "if the court knows himself:" instead of *him*self he should have written *her*self. With this exception and just the least flush of envy of Woburn an account of the new railroad, Mr. Jones's p. c. is a very fine and meritorious literary production.

— The public schools of this town, preceded by the customary examinations, will close next week for the summer. A large class will graduate from the High School, the members of which are now actively preparing for the interesting and important event. Considering everything the schools are in a fair state of advancement, having made tolerable progress in the teeth of of unfavorable conditions during the year. For these conditions the teachers have been in no way responsible. Under a new and more efficient management it is confidently expected that they will win back their former reputation and do work more satisfactory to all concerned. At the close of the long summer vacation we hope to see teachers and scholars return to their duties fully determined to make up for the backsets of the past year.

— On Tuesday afternoon Mr. John C. Higgins went to Cambridge and in the Superior Court pleaded guilty on one count for selling liquor, and was sentenced to pay a fine of $100 and imprisonment in the House of Correction three months. He was grievously disappointed at the last half of the sentence, because arrangements had been made by means of which he had a right to expect different treatment. It was agreed that if he pleaded guilty and gave good and sufficient sureties that he would abandon rum-selling here, there should be no going to the House of Correction, but only a fine and costs. This arrangement, however, the Court declined in toto to carry out, and Mr. Higgins was a sufferer to an unexpected extent. Chief Nelson of this place did all in his power to have the agreement lived up to; but it was no go, and Johny went down.

— Our idea of Fourth of July celebrations is to have them occasionally, or at least, not oftener than semi-occasionally. Indulged in too frequently they become flat, stale and unprofitable, and it is hard, very hard, to arouse the kind of a spirit and interest necessary to make them go off with eclat. As a general rule once in four years is as frequent as any well regulated community can afford the pleasing, patriotic indulgence. With an interval of that duration patriotism has a chance to rest and grow fat, and then when it comes out to show itself on parade it is an article that no American can't help being pleased with. The spirit of celebration is then at home in her bosom, and things are done in a way to excite pride and love of country. Patriotism needs an occasional rest as much as anybody, and it is only fair and right that rest should be given her. Harping on one string all the time, even if the string is a sweetly musical one, becomes tiresome; and just so it is about getting up Fourth of July celebrations every year—too frequent they become irksome, insipid, unprofitable. We don't know how this will meet the views of the Permanent Committee, but if they are wise they will give Woburn a rest this year of Our Lord.

— The case of People versus John C. Higgins for selling rum contrary to law was called for trial in the Supreme Court Criminal Term, now in session at East Cambridge, on last Monday, but the respondent was non est, etc. In default of a personal appearance Mr. Higgins's Attorney presented a certificate from Dr. Conway, Town Physician, setting for that his physical condition was such as to warrant his absence in body although ever present in spirit, and it would not do at all for the officers to take him to Court. The officers were not altogether satisfied that Mr. Higgins was as badly off as all that came to and so they procured an examination of him by another doctor, who pronounced him sufficiently well to go down and personally plead to the indictment. Thereupon a mittimus was procured, and towards evening Mr. Higgins was arrested and lodged in the town jail. About midnight he was taken very seriously ill with a chill, and so alarming was his case thought to be that a third doctor was summoned to his bedside, and attendants secured. He was taken to his home on Winn street and properly attended to. The cause of the illness was a fall which Mr. Higgins received a few days before, and which, it was feared, produced serious internal injuries.

— The midmonthly meeting of the Board of Selectmen was held last Tuesday, all the members being present except Chairman Maguire.——Applications of E. Prior, M. W. & C. M. Strout, S. E. Wyman, Mrs. John Jennings, W. H. Curtis, and A. Robie to sell fireworks on the 4th of July were granted. Application for exemption of jury service by Company G, 5th Mass. Regt., and other military, received and filed.——Matter of ringing bells, firing cannon, &c., on the 4th, referred to Military Committee. ——Application of John Hagan for release of his son from House of Correction referred to Committee on Police.——Renovation of lockup referred to Police Committee and Chairman of Board of Health.——License to run billiard and pool tables granted to Albert Parsons of North Woburn. Messrs. Hill, Cottle and Eaton were appointed a committee on purchasing wood and coal, to act in conjunction with a committee of the School Board. ——Voted, that a notice embodying sections 1 to 5 inclusive of Chap. 90 of the Public Laws, concerning horses and cattle having infectious diseases, be published in the Woburn JOURNAL and Advertiser. —— Applications of Thomas Deery to have his son released from the Lowell Reform School referred to Police Committee.——Adjourned.

— Last Friday evening was lighted the first electric lamp in Woburn. Two or three weeks since Mr. Slattery, the electrician of the Sun Electric Light Company of this place, said to some of his friends here that it was his intention to introduce electric light into his residence on the corner of Highland and Glenwood streets at the Highlands. Since then he had gone to work and put in a dynamo and water motor, wired the house, and got everything in readiness for the introduction of the light. On Friday evening he put the machinery in motion and four lamps were set to burning which illuminated the rooms in grand style. Everything worked admirably and the experiment was a gratifying success. The plant is comparatively inexpensive and with water at a fair price the light will be cheap. Mr. Slattery was highly pleased with the operations of the motor and dynamo and concludes that, in large houses where a good deal of illumination is required, this method of providing it will soon become general. For striking the first electric light in Woburn Mr. Slattery must have the credit, but his will soon be followed by a general illumination of business houses from Mr. N. J. Simonds's plant. On Wednesday evening last a large company of ladies and gentlemen met at Mr. Slattery's home to congratulate him on the successful introduction of lights into the house and to witness the operations of the water motor, electrical machine, etc. When the reporter arrived several rooms were brilliantly illuminated, the effect of the light coming through various colored glass shades being very pleasing indeed. Swinging in the hall was a large burner within a red shade, and on tables in the parlor and other rooms red, blue, orange and other colored lights produced a novel and very pleasant effect. In all there were some seven or eight lamps burning of different candle-power. Mr. Slattery kindly conducted the reporter to the basement where the water motor and dynamo were stationed and running. The machinery is simple and does the work well, but Mr. Slattery will keep at it until he brings the entire plant to as near perfection as possible. He has got the light, and his aim now is to produce it cheap.

RINK NOTES.—The Stonehams are gradually divesting themselves of the "style" they put on early in the League series of polo games and no longer arrogate to themselves the title of brevet champions. They are descending from the stilts on which they lately paraded their noble forms, while the force of circumstances, the superiority of the Woburn skill in playing, and the victories of other teams, have taken a good deal of starch out of them and produced an humility strongly in contrast to their former spirit, and much more becoming. We do not say that the Stonehams are not a fairly good body of polo players, but it has been demonstrated that they cannot hold a candle to the Woburns, and ought not in justice to be mentioned on the same day with that splendid and victorious team. Why, even the Globes of Haverhill, who are the puniest pigmies in the hands of the stalwart Woburns, can handle the Stonehams with an ease and grace truly surprising.——At the same time there hasn't been a single hitch in the grand triumphal march of the Woburns. They pass on from victory to victory, colors nailed to the mast-head, every stitch of canvass spread to the breeze, winning games on every hand, and filling with dismay the hearts of their opponents.——Mr. Carter, proprietor of the Academy, very sensibly proposes to keep the doors of his fine rink closed except when there is something to open them for. Every evening in the week is too much of a good thing, and he will make money by closing up except on special occasions. —— For the week's programme at the Academy see Mr. Carter's card in this paper.

For Gas Commissioner.

Last Tuesday a party of gentlemen waited on Governor Robinson at the State House and respectfully but earnestly urged the appointment of Hon. Joseph G. Pollard of Woburn to the office of Gas Commissioner for which place there are several prominent candidates. Whatever the Governor may think about the matter—and of course the party of Mr. Pollard's friends who went to the Executive headquarters in his behalf last Tuesday do not know—he would make no mistake in appointing our townsman, for he is a gentleman amply competent to a proper discharge of the duties of the position and would fill it with credit. Mr. Pollard has hosts of friends here, in the county, and all over the State who would like to see him Gas Commissioner, and to appoint him would be a very popular thing for the Governer to do.

The Reason Why.

EDITOR JOURNAL: In your paper yesterday you called it a surprise and a profound and painful mystery why a good base ball club was not organized here. We know the chief, and perhaps the only, cause. In all towns around here where there are good ball clubs, the town furnishes a field for the game to be played on, and the mystery to the base-ball players of this town, is why this town does not do the same.—C. C.

Woburn, June 13, 1885.

Board of Trade.

Last Tuesday evening was a hot one and consequently the meeting of the Board of Trade was light in numbers. The President, Secretary and a few others gathered in the rooms of the Executive Committee, where many matters of interest were discussed, but no regular business transacted. The benefits of this organization of the foremost men of the place become more and more apparent every day. Its influence on business is plainly advantageous, and as it goes on in its work it will become still more conspicuous. In the way of securing the location of outside manufacturing establishments the work and influence of the Board are all good. Results are easily discernable all along the line. The spirit of internal improvements has been aroused, and many schemes are in contemplation which will prove of great benefit to Woburn. No public step has been taken here for years of so much importance to the best interests of the place as the formation of this live, active, energetic Board of Trade.

The Shoes

That are bought at Stetson's establishment corner of Hanover and Blackstone streets, Boston, can be depended on for real downright wear. Also, they can be purchased at prices which bring them within the reach of all. For instance, a lady can buy at this store a very nice Kid Button Boot for $2, while gentlemen can procure a high lace Congress or Button Boot at prices from $2 to $3 a pair that cannot fail to give satisfaction. The store also carries a full line of durable shoes for children. Stetson's old established stand, 158 Hanover, corner of Blackstone streets, Boston. Convenient to northern depots.

Says the Detroit Free Press: Four ounces oil of cloves, two ounces oil of peppermint, eight ounces Persian powder, four ounces gum camphor, mix. The preparation is warranted to drive a mosquito out of the room. If it fails, hit him with a wet towel.

HOOD'S
SARSAPARILLA

Has "decided" claims upon the public. This is positively proven by the immense good it has done to those who have been cured of diseases from which they have suffered intensely for years, as verified by the published testimonials, every one of which is a positive fact.

CHELSEA, VT., Feb. 24, 1879.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.: The 6th day of last June I was taken sick with a swelling on my right foot, and with an awful pain. The swelling went all over me. My face was swelled so that I could with difficulty see out of my eyes, and I broke out over the whole surface of my body; my right foot up to my knee was one raw, itching mass, and my ankle and foot so lame and sore I could not step on it, and it would run so as to wet a bandage through in an hour. In this condition Mr. W. F. Hood (of the firm of A. R. Hood & Son, druggists, of this town), handed me a bottle of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, and told me to take it. I did so, and by the time I had taken one bottle I found that it was doing me good. I have since taken five bottles more. After I had taken three bottles my soreness began to leave me, and I have been growing better every day, so that to-day I can walk without going lame. I have no soreness in my ankle and it has healed all up, and does not run at all. I owe my recovery to your Sarsaparilla. I write this to let you know that I think it deserves the confidence of the public, especially those who are troubled with humors.

Yours most truly,
JOSIAH PITKIN.

P. S. Every person that saw me said that I never would get over my lameness without having a running sore on my ankle; but thank God I have. J. P.

No other Sarsaparilla has such a sharpening effect upon the appetite. No other preparation tones and strengthens the digestive organs like HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.

Price one dollar, or six bottles for five dollars. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

Re-appointed.

It is with pleasure that we note the reappointment of Rufus R. Wade, Esq. Chief of the District Police Force. He has for some time filled the post with great acceptance and credit, and a better or more judicious appointment could not have been made. Mr. Wade is a faithful public servant—earnest, honest and capable, and it is highly gratifying to know that he is to be retained in the public service.

Rev. John W. Scudder of Minneapolis, in preaching to young ladies on Sunday last, said: "The daughters of America are as fair as any on the globe, and in my opinion some of them are too fair. A milk-white complexion may be artistic, but it is also a sign of weak blood. None of your white-faced damsels for me, nor one whose face is red with a consumptive or hectic flush. Give me the nut-brown girl who abandons her sunbonnet, who can climb a tree with any boy, who prefers good bread to chocolate caramels, and baked beans to angel cake. The kind an of angel for me weighs 140 pounds."

LITERARY NOTICES.

Few things are more fascinating in their way than a study of the subterranean history of man, whether in caves or in mounds, whether it be to corrobate written history, or to take testimony that ante-dates all writing. President Bartlett, of Dartmouth, contributes an interesting article on this topic to the July number of the NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW. From the men of unknown ages and their works underground, to men grappling with the latest questions of our own day and discussing the parceling out of the earth's surface is a long step; but in the same number of the REVIEW appears a conversation between David Dudley Field and Henry George, on land and taxation. Another urgent question, which may soon make a very serious issue, the extradition of dynamite criminals is debated by President Angell, of Michigan University, George Ticknor Curtis, and Justice T. M. Cooley, Dorman B. Eaton, chief of the Civil Service Commission gives his views of the results of that reform. William Clarke shows the futile character of any scheme for British imperial federation, and Thomas W. Knox gives a brief but interesting sketch of the progress of European influence in Asia. The other articles are one by Gail Hamilton on Prohibition in Practice, and one by Rev. Dr. C. H. Parkhurst on the decline of Christianity. These, with the batch of free-hand Comments, make up a number of unusual interest. If the allotted age of man were sufficient for a magazine, we might have to part here with an old friend; for the REVIEW has just completed its seventieth year. But outwardly it renews its youth with a new cover, and inwardly it seems more vigorous than ever.

The eight tons of cherries shipped from California to Chicago a few days ago sold at an average of 15 cents per pound. The cost of placing them in Chicago is put at 9 or 10 cents a pound. This leaves the grower a profit of 5 or 6 cents per pound, or $100 a ton. The San Francisco Bulletin remarks: "While this profit is not a large one when the cost of cultivation and the value of the land are taken into account, it is still a better profit than is ever derived from wheat farming. On a thrifty cherry orchard in full bearing the returns would range from $500 to $1000 an acre." The orchardists of Alameda county say that were the freight on this fruit reduced from $600 to $400 they could send three carloads of fruit daily for 60 days, and that next year the fruit growers of the state would be able to make up a daily fruit train for not less than 60 days.

An old lady over 80 years of age, and who was once a great beauty, died recently in Paris, leaving after her a diary in which she endeavors to show up the alleged vanity of women. From the age of 20 to 30 she spent three hours a day at her toilet, which foot up for the period 1 year 91 days and 6 hours employed in dressing her hair, powdering her cheeks and painting her lips. From 30 to 50 the toilet labors amounted to five hours a day, the extra hours being consecrated to the covering of the tracks of time, including the obliteration of crows' feet and other necessary filling in and grading. Time, 4 years and 40 days. After 50, her efforts had to be redoubled. To the last she resisted the effects of time.

A countryman took home with him as memento of his visit to the city a gilt-edged card upon which was written a few lines of poetry. The Life is the Blood—Prevent Disease—Surgery the Last Resort—A Telling Letter.

Here is a fact for you to think over, viz.: Medical science proves that diseases, no matter how great a variety they seem to have, proceed from comparatively few causes. It is for this reason that some single medicines relieve or cure so wide a range of complaints—some of them appearing almost directly opposite in their natures. When a medical preparation acts at once upon the digestive and urinary organs, and also purifies the blood, the list of difficulties subject to its control is astonishing. But, while many things are said to possess this power, those which actually do exert it are very rare.

It is conceded that DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, of Rondout, N. Y., is the most effective preparation now in use for all diseases arising from a foul or impure state of the circulation. Hence it is more than likely that if the writer of the following letter had habitually taken "FAVORITE REMEDY" ten years ago, he would never have suffered from Cancer.

PITTSFIELD, MASS., March 22, 1884.

Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.

DEAR SIR:—About six years ago I was obliged to resort to external treatment for the removal of a cancerous growth on my lip. On my return home, I became sensible that my blood needed a thorough cleansing. My whole system, too, required toning up. While casting about for the best medicine to do this, your, "FAVORITE REMEDY" was so highly commended in my hearing that I resolved to try it. I did so, and the result surprised me, it was effected so quickly and completely. I soon got over the depression produced by the operation, and since the "FAVORITE REMEDY,' which I have continued to take in small doses, has kept me in such health and strength as I never had before, nor expected to have. It is the best blood purifier in the world. I am sure of that.

Yours, &c.,
MATTHEW FARRELL.

It expels malarial poisons, and is the best preventative of chills and malarial fever in the world. It is especially offered as a trustworthy specific for the cure of Kidney and Liver complaints, Constipation and all disorders arising from an impure state of the blood. To women who suffer from any of the ills peculiar to their sex Favorite Remedy is constantly proving itself an unfailing friend—a real blessing. Address the proprietor, Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. CATCH ON!

KNOW ALL MEN by these presents, and fail not to "tumble" to the following statements which I am ever ready to prove:—

I do not TRY ON and CUT AFTERWARD after the manner of dressmakers. My patrons, after leaving their order, are not compelled to try on a suit in each stage of its development in order to insure a good fit.

My work is ALWAYS SATISFACTORY. If any gentleman doubts my statements, if he will call at my place of business, I can easily convince him that this is not "all talk," and that if he wishes to wear stylish and fashionable custom clothing, it will be for his interest to "catch on."

TOO LATE.

What silences we keep year after year
With those who are most near to us and dear!
We live beside each other day by day,
And speak of myriad things, but seldom say
The full, sweet word that lies just in our reach
Beneath the commonplace of common speech.

Then out of sight and out of reach they go—
These close, familiar friends who loved us so;
And, sitting in the shadow they have left,
Alone with lonliness and sore bereft,
We think, with vain regret, of some fond word
That once we might have said and they have heard.

For weak and poor the love that we expressed
Now seems beside the vast, sweet unexpressed;
And slight the deeds we did to those undone,
And small the service spent to treasures won,
An undeserved the praise for word and deed
That soon have overflowed the simple need.

This is the cruel cross of life, to be Full-visioned only when the ministry
Of death has been fulfilled, and in the place
Of some dear presence is but empty space.
What recollection services can then
Give consolation for the might have been?

Health Hints.

A liniment of equal parts of oil of wintergreen and olive oil, or soap liniment, is said to afford almost instant relief from pain in acute rheumatism.

Warts can be remedied by painting them with a mixture of twelve parts of iodine, forty-eight parts crystals of carbolic acid and five parts alcohol. A glass rod should be used.

A good liniment or wash to be used for burns is made of one part of linseed oil and two parts of lime water. This should be applied on the surface of the burn, and covered with fine linen or lint.

A simple remedy for neuralgia is to apply grated horseradish, prepared the same as for table use, to the temple, when the head or face is affected, or the wrist when the pain is in the arm or shoulder.

Typhus fever is marked by short, delirious, broken dreams. Remittant fever by long, delirious, painful dreams. Scarlet fever by realistic dreams, excited by surroundings. Herein are suggested some suitable points in diagnosis.

If medicine is mixed with very cold water and a few swallows of the water be taken as a preparatory dose, the nerves of the organs of taste become sufficiently benumbed to make the medicine nearly tasteless. The method will not disguise bitter tastes but acts well in oils and salines.

A prompt remedy for fetid feet is found in washing the feet with a solution of chloral (one part of chloral in one hundred parts of water), and keeping them enveloped in compresses wet with the same. Another efficacious method is to powder the interior of the socks with a powder composed of one part salicylic acid and five of starch.

Tea should not be taken with fresh meat; the tannin interferes with its digestion, and irritates the stomach; it does not interfere with dried meat, such as tongue or ham, as the fibres of these have already become toughened and shrunken in the curing. Afternoon tea is very injurious, and a fruitful source of dyspepsia, gastralgia and irritable heart. Tea should not be drunk very strong nor very hot.

The Straw Braid Trade of Japan.

Within the last three years quite a new industry for Japan has sprung into existence—the manufacture of straw plait or braid for men's hats and women's bonnets for use abroad. The first year the export consisted of some 5,000 pieces only, the next it increased to 60,000, and the last of nearly 1,000,000 pieces of sixty yards each. The price, of course, varies according to the season and quality of the article, ranging we believe, from 80 sen down to as low as 25 sen per piece, the latter being, we understand, the price just now, owing to the fact of the season being over, for it has to reach America in time to be made up by the hatmakers for the summer's trade. There is also an immense production in China of the same article, which has existed for many years past; the price there, however, mostly rules considerably lower than here, owing to the cost of Chinese manufactures being generally less than the Japanese ask for their wares.

The Japanese plait ordinarily commands a better price abroad, as the straw of which it is made is brighter and whiter in color; it is also mostly very neatly made, owing to the deft fingers of the Japanese being admirably suited to the work. This industry, which bids fair to develop into larger and larger proportions, is an especial benefit to the farming class, the raw material costing nothing and the making of the plait furnishing occupation to the female branches of the family during leisure hours and winter nights, when work outside can not be followed. The money earned being so much clear gain, it is a welcome supplement to the income of thousands of poor and industrious families. We observe that the workers at the village of Omori, near Tokio, are about holding a competitive exposition, to test the dexterity of the plaiters and the quality of the article turned out by them.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle.

Reports say that Ohio Democratic politicians are congregating at Washington in force with a view of compelling the President to "stop foolin," and go ahead and "turn the rascals out." How true it is that "uneasy lies the head that wears a crown."

The Flower Medicine Co., is conferring a great boon upon the public by introducing the remedies of that celebrated physician, Dr. R. C. Flower, whose practice has been so phenominally successful, that without doubt these remedies will be much sought after.

A California physician claims, in the Indiana Medical Journal, that the bruised pulp of eucalyptus leaves, which he had been in the habit of applying to his very bald head for the cure of headache, had brought out a new and abundant crop of hair.

LITERARY NOTICES.

One of the cutest of A B C books is the "HOUSEHOLD PRIMER." Each large letter has an amusing picture and a pretty verse. The whole is daintily printed in brown; and, best of all, is mailed free by D. Lothrop & Co., Boston, on receipt of a 2-cent stamp.

OUTING for July is a splendid number. Its pictorial attractions are numerous and superb, while is't frontispiece, "Harvard-Yale race at New London," is spirited and fine. Many other papers are illustrated in the highest style of pictorial art and make a prominent and very pleasing feature of this sterling magazine. Among the large number of able and highly enjoyable articles which OUTING for July contains are: The Harvard-Yale Race, Annie M. Carroll, Across America on a Bicycle, IV, Love or a Name, In the Afternoon, a poem, Catamaran Trip on the river St. John, Antelopes on the Uplands of New Mexico, A Modern Tramp (continued), The Study of Whist, Summer, The Emerald Set, and many others. The number is one of the best issued.

PETERSON'S MAGAZINE comes to us for July, an unusually brilliant number, even for it. There is a beautiful steel-plate; a double-size colored pattern in embroidery; and about fifty other engravings mostly of fashions, work-table and things interesting to ladies. The literary contents are even better than usual. They lead off with an illustrated article on the Moated Mansions of the Olden Time, suggested by Tennyson's well-known poem, Marianna. Then comes a powerful novelet, The Passway of Peril, by Mrs. M. Sheffey Peters; a weird tale by Adelaide Merriam; one of Frank Benedict's best love-stories; Mrs. Stephen's pathetic novel; other tales, poetry, etc., etc. We know no lady's-book that affords so much, and of such high merit, for so little money. The price is but two dollars a year, with great deductions to clubs, and elegant premiums to persons getting up clubs. Everybody ought to take PETERSON. Now is a good time to subscribe, a new volume beginning with this number. Specimens are sent, gratis, if written for in good faith. Address Charles J. Peterson, 306 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

The handsomest and most comprehensive Guide-Book for summer travel in the grand and picturesque mountain region of New England that has ever been given the public is SUMMER SAUNTERINGS, recently issued by Mr. Lucius Tuttle, General Passenger and Ticket Agent of the Boston and Lowell Railroad. It contains about 170 pages of historical and descriptive letter-press beautifully illustrated with nearly forty views on the line of that great railroad system, which include all of the most popular mountain resorts—majestic hills, quiet valleys, clear streams, placid lakes, peaceful villages, forests, farms, and hostelries where thousands of health and pleasure-seekers and summer loungers annually spend the hot months in dreamy, luxurious repose. The book is admirably written and very interesting to the general reader, and to the tourist it is of the highest value as a guide to and among the sublimest and most beautiful scenery anywhere to be found east of the Rocky Mountains. Each town along the various lines of road is mentioned and its attractive features pointed out in the book, while the scenery of the mountain regions and all the information which the visitor would be likely to desire are elaborately and plainly set forth. The mechanical execution of SUMMER SAUNTERINGS fits it for a prominent place on the parlor centre-table.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE for July is an unusually strong number. The frontispiece is an engraving by King from F. S. Church's beautiful painting, Pandora. The opening article, is about the Mohammadans in India, illustrated by representations of some of the most remarkable specimens of Moslem architecture. Midsummer on Mount Desert is a noble poem, beautifully illustrated. R. F. Zoghaum, the artist, gives a sketch of A Day's Drive with Montana Cow-boys, with graphic pictures from his own pencil. The city of Buffalo is the subject of an article by Jane M. Welch, profusely and effectively illustrated. Dr. Henry J. Van Dyke, Jr. contributes an Adirondack sketch full of the charm which holds all lovers of wild country life and sports. A Silk Dress, is a full and interesting exposition, with abundant pictorial illustrations, of silk culture and manufacture in the United States. But the reader will probably give his attention first of all to the opening chapters of Mr. Howell's new novel, Indian Summer, which promises to be a powerful delineation of American character. The story of that champion yacht, as told in this Number by its owner, General Benjamin F. Butler, will command universal attention. There is a very clever short story, His Royal Highness's Love Affair, by E. C. Grenville Murray, illustrated by C. S. Reinhart and a humorous sketch by Robert J. Burdette. Besides Mrs. Mace's Midsummer at Mount Desert, there is but one poem in the Number—a good one, though brief, entitled High Days and Holidays, by Harriet Prescott Spofford. Mr. George William Curtis in the Easy Chair refers to the novel feature of authors' readings recently introduced in New York, and in this connection discusses the prospects of international copyright. Mr. Charles Dudley Warner finds in an old drummer (Old Jordan) at the New Orleans Exposition the text for a very entertaining introduction to the Editor's Drawer. The other editorial departments are crowded with timely and interesting matter.

Tired Languid Dull

Exactly expresses the condition of thousands of people at this season. The depressive effects of warm weather, and the weak condition of the body, can only be corrected by the use of a reliable tonic and blood purifier like Hood's Sarsaparilla. Why suffer longer when a remedy is so close at hand? Take Hood's Sarsaparilla now. It will give you untold wealth in health, strength, and energy.

A gentleman came home in the "wee sma' hours ayout the twal," at the South End recently, and was surprised to find his wife clad in black. "Why are you wearing these mourning garments?" he said, somewhat unsteadily. "For my late husband," was the significant reply. He has been in the house at 10 ever since.

Short Rules for Long Comfort at Home.

Put self last.

Be prompt at every meal.

Take little annoyances out of the way.

When any good happens to any one, rejoice.

When others are suffering, drop a word of sympathy.

Tell of your own faults rather than those of others.

A place for everything and everthing in its place.

Hide your own troubles, but watch to help others out of theirs.

Take hold of the knob, and shut every door behind you without slamming it.

Never interrupt any conversation but wait patiently your turn to speak.

Look for beauty in everything, and take a cheerful view of every event.

If from any cause you feel irritable, try the harder to do little pleasant things.

Do not keep your good manners for company, but be equally polite at home and abroad.

When inclined to give an angry answer, close your lips together, and say the alphabet.

Always speak politely and kindly to your help, if you would have them do the same to you.

When pained by any unkind word or act, ask ourselves, "Have I not done as badly, and desired forgiveness?"—[Canada Presbyterian.

A Good Cup of Coffee.

"It is one of the simplest things in the world," said Miss Corson, in her lecture yesterday afternoon, "to make a good cup of coffee, and this can easily be accomplished by using a little common sense. If you put boiling water on coffee and not let it boil," she continued, "you have all the good qualities preserved. One reason why dyspeptics cannot drink coffee is because it is boiled. The style of coffee-pot is just a matter of fancy. I have made as good coffee in an old tomato can as I have ever sipped from a cup filled from the finest Frence coffee-urn. We should take lessons in this matter from the Turks and Arabians, who grind their coffee to a fine powder.

"When the coffee is ground as fine as possible put in a little bag of unbleached muslin, which should be tied tightly enough to prevent the escape of the grounds. If you use a cup of unground coffee you can make over a quart of very strong, black coffee. In making coffee many people sacrifice flavor for strength. Bitterness comes from boiling. When boiling water is placed on the bag of ground coffee it should stand at least three minutes before serving. Remember the longer it stands the stronger it becomes. Be careful not to allow the watered coffee to boil."—Philadelphia Daily News.

A Wedding Unexpectedly Postponed.

A prominent young farmer living near Canisteo, N. Y., went to that village to be married to a young woman of that place. The ceremony was to be performed in the Methodist church. The couple arrived at the church before the preacher had put in an appearance. A number of boys were playing baseball in a lot near the church. While waiting for the preacher the expectant bridegroom joined the boys and took a hand in the game. A few minutes later the preacher drove up to the church. The young man left the game of ball and returned to the side of his intended in the church. When they stood up before the preacher, the latter, instead of speaking the words that made them one, delivered a vigorous lecture to the bridegroom on the sin he had been guilty of in playing ball on Sunday, and refused to marry the couple. The young lady was so affected by the unexpected denouement that she could not be prevailed upon by her intended to go elsewhere and have the ceremony performed, and the wedding has been indefinitely postponed.

He Was Accommodated.

He stood in the door of a passenger coach about to leave the Central depot the other day and called out in a loud voice:

"Is there a railroad hog on this car?"

Many turned to look at him, but no one replied.

"Because, if there isn't I'll take the other coach," continued the man, with a bar of iron in his tones.

"Oh, well, nobody wants to drive you out," replied a man in the centre of the car. "If that's all you are looking for, here goes to accommodate you!"

And he turned the next seat over, put his baggage on it and got himself in shape to occupy two seats without an inch of room to spare.

A Hint That Didn't Take.

Boy working in the garden with his father, straightens up every few minutes, leans on his hoe, rubs his back and looks wishfully toward the creek.

"Come, Tommy; come, Tommy," says the old man, "keep at it; there's lots to be done."

"I bet the fish would bite to-day, pa," says the boy, with another longing look towards the water.

"Well, you keep right on with your hoeing, my laverick, and they won't bite you," says the old man, as he aims at a big clod and makes the dust fly.

A Hotel Man's Discovery.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.—Mr. George H. Arnold, proprietor of the Occidental Hotel, says that as the air is purer as we ascend, a man should not object to being assigned to a room on the uppermost floor; that he shouldn't mind taking a room-attic, as it were, in view of the fact that St. Jacobs Oil so promptly cures the rheumatic. He states that throughout California it is regarded as the great pain-cure of the age.

A little girl has an uncle who has taught her to open and shut his crush hat. The other evening, however, he appeared with an ordinary silk one. Suddenly he saw the child coming with his new silk hat wrinkled like an accordion. "Oh, uncle," she said, "this one is very hard! I've had to sit on it, but can't get it more than half shut."

A Clever School Girl.

A certain seminary for young ladies in New England was presided over by Professor M——, who had walked a chalk line himself, and expected all his pupils to do the same. It was one of the rules of the school that each young lady should recite at the opening exercises not less than four nor more than sixteen lines of poetry.

One morning Miss Blank got up and recited from beginning to end, and with much expression, Hood's "Bridge of Sighs."

The professor made no interruption, but at the close he remarked quietly, "That was very well done, Miss Blank, but you have transgressed a rule. Please see that it is corrected to-morrow."

The next morning, when it was Miss Blank's turn to recite, she arose and repeated:

"Alas! for the rarity
Of Christian charity
Under the sun!
Oh, itwas pitiful!—" and took her seat, amid the applause of her school-mates.

The Docks of Liverpool.

There is probably nothing of the kind in the world equal in extent to the line of docks in Liverpool, presenting, as they do, quayage to wet docks and tidal basins alone of twenty-two and one-half miles, and a water space of 333 acres, which—lands, sheds, yards, quays, and warehouses—cover an area of 1,040 acres. But these figures only apply to the Lancashire side of the Mersey dock and harbor's estate. On the Cheshire shore at Birkenhead there are docks with a water area of 164 acres with nearly ten miles of quayage; thus making in all a water area of nearly 500 acres and a total quayage of nearly thirty-two miles, in addition to twenty-two graving docks for repairing vessels, with an aggregate length of floor of 14,000 feet, the whole estate being studded with more or less imposing dwellings, such as dockmasters' residences, customs and police depots clock towers, dock yard offices, and so on, and on the Lancashire side traversed by a double line of railway five miles in length.—Foreign Letter.

The End of Socialism.

The Manchester, England, Times says:

A draper's assistant in London, who was in the habit, with his master's cognizance, of attending a workmen's Socialistic meeting, neglected for a week or two to attend the meetings, and the following dialogue took place between master and man.

Master—"Well, John, and how is it that you have not kept up your attendance at the Socialistic meetings?"

John (rather confusedly)—"Well, sir, I don't think I shall go any more."

Master—"But how is that, John?"

John—"I have found out, sir, that the scheme is not quite so fair as I thought it was. At the last meeting I attended we calculated how much there would be for every one when everything was divided up, and we found it would only be one hundred and five pounds each, and you know, sir, I have one hundred and fifty pounds in the bank"

A Vulnerable British Port.

The harbor of Esquimault, the only British naval station on the Pacific coast of America, is one of the safest and most picturesque harbors in the world. It is about three miles in length, with a depth of water upon which the largest ironclad ship-of-war can safely float, surrounded by low wooded hills, with a narrow but deep entrance from Fuca straits. Esquimault, is, after San Francisco, the best harbor on the west coast of North America. A large naval graving-dock is well advanced toward completion at the upper end of the harbor, and a small dock yard is near the entrance. Yet, strange to say, this important naval station has never been fortified In the absence of British war ships from the harbor there is literally nothing to prevent an ordinary steamer, armed with one rifle gun, from steaming in and destroying the dock yard buildings, the graving-dock, and the village of Esquimault.

Good and Bad Newspapers.

Happily there are few American communities which will not, in the long run, support a good newspaper at least as cheerfully as a bad one. It is true that sensationalism of the lower type is often pecuniarily profitable, and that journals which make a specialty of that sort of thing sometimes achieve a large circulation. But this circumstance reflects quite as much upon the morals and good taste of the community as upon those of the editor. Few people who are not upon the inside of secular journalism have an adequate idea of the amount of conscience and right purpose which are put into that work. The crucial test of the editor is not so much what he prints as what he does not print. The reader is aware of what goes into the paper; he has no idea of what is kept out—and kept out with a steady moral purpose, and sometimes at a heavy cost.—Boston Journal.

The Minister's Morals.

"Well," said old Mrs. Spriggins, "I do think it is shameful. Only last Sunday Mr. Fourteenthly preached the strongest kind of a sermon against theatres, and circuses, and play-actors, and sich, and the very next day when I went to call on him he was in his study pouring over a big book with 'Platonis Opera' on the back of it. I'd never have believed it if I hadn't seen it with my own eyes. I do think of all the people in this world that a minister ought to be consistent!"

Writing to the New York World, a gentleman says: "Pneumonia can be cured if the person will apply over the lungs a poultice or draft made of mustard and flax seed meal, keeping quiet and warm in bed. Prompt action is of vital importance, and there is no occasion for waiting for the arrival of an 'old fashioned' or 'new fashioned' practitioner when so simple a remedy may be applied by any one, and if taken in season will, I think, always be effective. In my first personal experience my determination not to give up business, even for a day, came near costing me my life. The case was neglected till an eminent physician said that my right lung would be of just as much use to be out on the table as in the condition it then was, a fact of which I was already pretty well aware, but the mustard and flax seed poultice mastered the disease and restored my lung to its normal condition as good as new. In the second attack, a year later, the case was taken in hand promptly, the poultice applied, quiet and warmth maintained, and speedy recovery ensued without a physician being called.

They had been sitting down for some time far from the madding crowd and had been talking of this and that and this and that, but at last a desire seized him to waltz, and, as the faint perfume ladened zephyrs wafted the strains of a Strauss to their ears, he suggested: "Ah, Miss Ethel, I should so much like a dawnce." "Oh please don't; I'm so tired," was the entreating response. "But, Miss Ethel, you ought not to be tired; here I have been sitting and talking to you for nearly an hour." "Yes," she answered, "that was what I meant," and somehow the perfume-ladened zephyrs didn't zeph as deliciously as they did before.

There is not a single State of the American Union today in which the people do not as a whole believe the liquor question to be the most important one which politically concerns the public weal. Progress is but the successive decision of issues as they present themselves to the minds of men; and this temperance issue which has stalked unbidden to the front, will not be stayed or turned back. The state of mind which give 320,000 votes to prohibition in Ohio is ripening in Alabama, Massachusetts, Arkansas, Oregon, and Illinois—everywhere in the national domain.—Senator Blair.

"So you were out riding last night?" said one bright girl to another.

"Yes," was the reply in a somewhat dissatisfied tone.

"Did you have a nice time?"

"Oh, yes, nice enough; but the horse was so wild that John had to use both hands all the time to hold him, and I just hate wild horses, because they are so dangerous you know."

The other girl said she knew, but didn't say what she thought.—[Merchant Traveler.

A little boy discovered a bee crawling upon his hand. Finally the bee stopped for a moment, and, after remaining stationary for an instant, stung the little fellow. When the cry of pain was over, the little child said to his mamma that he didn't care for the bee's walking about on him, but he didn't like his sitting down on him.

This is the season when the small boy in the country takes off his shoes and gets more fun tramping over sharp stones than his mother could on a velvet carpet.

A bright story in grammar is told of a little school girl: "Quarrel," she parsed, "is plural." "Why?" "Because it takes two to make one."

TOWN OF WOBURN.

Board of Health Regulations.

ISSUED JUNE, 1885.

Extracts from the Public Statutes of Massachusetts, Chapter 80:

"The Board of Health shall make such regulations as it judges necessary for the public health and safety. Whoever violates any such regulations shall forfeit a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars.

In compliance with the foregoing statutory provisions, and believing that a great amount of good may be done by timely and energetic abatement of all nuisances, the Board of Health of the town hereby issue the following regulations:—

REGULATION 1.—Ordered that all putrid or decaying vegetables or animal matter be removed forthwith from all vaults, privies, cellars and out-houses, and either buried or deposited at least ten rods from any highway, dwelling-house or public building in this town, and covered with dry earth.

REG. 2.—Ordered that the contents of all privy vaults and cess-pools in the thickly populated districts of this town shall be removed during the night time, viz: between the hours of ten o'clock, P. M., and four o'clock, A. M., and that all persons so removing night soil or refuse of any kind which emits an offensive order must have their carts tight to prevent leakage and effectually covered and not stopped more than five minutes on any street within ten rods of any dwelling-house except for loading and unloading; and no person shall empty any cess-pool or closet without the consent of the Board of Health.

REG. 3.—The Board will order the removal of all swine, goats, or other animals where their presence appears to be prejudicial to the public health and comfort

REG. 4.—Ordered that no privy vaults be opened except for purposes of disinfection, or by consent of the Board of Health.

REG. 5.—Ordered that all tanneries, glue manufactories or other manufactories from which arise an offensive odor be kept clean, and that covered receptacles be provided by the proprietors for the deposits of filth that flow from them.

REG. 6.—Ordered that all slaughter-houses be kept clean and that all the offal therein be removed daily.

REG. 7.—Ordered that no fish, garbage, house or store offal, water or brine containing blood, refuse animal or vegetable matter, shall be thrown upon or into any street, lane, yard or gutter, and that all persons are hereby notified to desist from such practices and ordered to deposit the same in tight vessels having a tight fitting cover, and if not properly buried on the premises, the same shall be removed not less often than once every forty-eight hours at least ten rods from any house or highway and covered with dry earth.

REG. 8.—Ordered that there shall not be sold or offered for sale any decayed or unripe fruit, or decayed or unfit meat, or adulterated milk, or milk from improperly fed or diseased animals.

REG. 9.—Ordered that no sink or sewer drain or water closet shall empty into any street gutter, or upon the surface of any sidewalk, street, alley, or lane in this town.

REG. 10.—Ordered when any physician is called to attend upon a person in this town sick with small-pox, scarletina, or other contagious disease dangerous to the public health, the said physician shall immediately give notice thereof to the Board of Health. Said notice shall contain the name of the person sick, the name of the disease, the name of the householder, and the street on which the sick person resides, and all physicians are requested to immediately report fatal termination of any case.

REG. 11.—Any householder in whose family any case of contagious disease occurs shall immediately give notice to the Board of Health, and use all reasonable measures to prevent infection of others.

REG. 12.—No owner or occupant of any dwelling-house in the town of Woburn, shall keep or permit to be kept any fowl, swine, goats, or other animals, in any room or cellar of said dwelling.

REG. 13.—Parties can have the vaults and cess-pools cleaned by leaving their order and $2.00 for each with the Chief of Police, where more than one load is to be taken from each vault or cess-pool, $2.00 for each load must be left. No order will be received without the money accompanying it.

The inhabitants are earnestly requested to co-operate with the Board in carrying out the foregoing regulations, and thereby secure healthy sanitary conditions.

The Board takes the liberty to suggest further that the people avoid the unnecessary use of water, which in the absence of proper drainage will saturate the soil in the vicinity of their houses to a dangerous degree; and also to suggest the daily use of dry earth or sifted ashes to cover the contents of privies, or open receptacles of sink water, to absorb poisonous gases and prevent exhalations.

Whereas, the diseases designated as small-pox, scarlet fever, diptheria, typhus fever, and cholera are contagious and dangerous to the public health, and have been, and may easily be, contracted at funerals from dead bodies or apartments which have been infected by such diseases, it is therefore Ordered, that, from and after this date, no public funeral shall be held over the remains of any person having died of small-pox, scarlet fever, diptheria, typus fever, or cholera without the written permit of the Board of Health; and under such regulations as may prevent the spread of either of said diseases.

Ordered, further, that the remains of persons dying of either of said diseases, shall at once be placed in a tight or sealed coffin, and shall not thereafter be exposed to view or disturbed except for burial.

Ordered, that no owner, driver, or other person having charge of any hackney carriage or other closed vehicle used as a public conveyance, shall receive, or permit to be placed, or convey in any manner, in or upon said carriage or other vehicle, any person sick or infected with the small-pox or any other contagious disease, or the body of any person who has died of small-pox, or any other contagious disease.

The Board of Health directs special attention to small-pox, scarlet fever, dipththeria and typhus fever as being contagious, dangerous to the public health, and call attention to the duties of citizens and physicians as provided by Public Statutes.

The Board is fully aware that many individual cases of diptheria and other contagious diseases occur without any spread of the disease; but during epidemics at least the rule is to the contrary, and there are no means of knowing what is safe, without taking precautions which a different course might, occasionally, have proved to be unnecessary. They therefore at this time publish the sections of the law governing such cases, and hold all persons interested responsible. It is further desired that physicians should fill out the postal cards furnished by this Board.

SEC. 78. When a householder knows that a person within his family is taken sick of . . any . . disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the . . Board of Health of the town in which he dwells. If he refuses or neglects to give such notice, he shall forfeit a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars.

SEC. 79. When a physician knows that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with . . any disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the . . Board of Health of the town; and if he refuses or neglects to give such notice he shall forfeit for each offense a sum not less than fifty nor more than one hundred dollars.

Per order of the Board of Health.
JOHN FERGUSON, Clerk.

GOD'S ANVIL.

BY REV. DR. G. W. DOANE.

Pain's furnace heat within me quivers,
God's breath upon the flame doth blow,
And all my heart in anguish shivers,
And trembles at the fiery glow;
And yet I whisper: As God will!
And in His hottest fire hold still.

He comes and lays my heart, all heated,
On the hard anvil, minded so
Into his own fair shape to heat it
With His great hammer, blow on blow;
And yet I whisper: As God will!
And at His heaviest blows hold still.

He takes my softened heart and beats it;
The sparks fly off at every blow;
He turns it o'er and o'er and heats it,
And lets it cool, and makes it glow;
And yet I whisper: As God will!
And in His mighty hand hold still.

Why should I murmur? For the sorrow
Thus only longer-lived would be;
It's end may come, and will to-morrow,
When God has done His work in me;
So I say, trusting: As God will!
And trusting to the end, hold still.

He kindles for my profit purely
Affliction's glowing, fiery brand,
And all His heaviest blows are surely
Inflicted by a master hand;
So I say, praying: As God will!
And hope in Him, and suffer still.

THAT BOY.

HOW HE INGRATIATED HIMSELF INTO FARMER GRANGER'S CONFIDENCE.

"Husband! there's somebody out in the yard sawing wood. Who do you s'pose it is?"

Farmer Granger turned himself in bed, listening a moment, and then, with a sleepy sigh of one who realizes that the time for dreaming is over and work hours are at hand, replied:

"It's old Warner, likely. He's had time to get over his tantrum. I'll see."

The farmer's toilet was not one that required hours to perfect, and before Mrs. Granger had concluded that it was time for her to "be stirring," the brown trousers and blue frock of her husband could have been seen at the farther end of the kitchen, while two keen green-gray eyes peered through the half open blind.

No red-nosed or haggard-faced old man met his gaze, but a pale-cheeked, barefooted boy, whose low whistle kept time as he worked, while the heap of sticks at his feet gave evidence that his saw had done quick pace since sunrise.

"What are you about, my boy?" was the farmer's salutation as he neared the wood-pile.

"I thought, maybe, you'd give me some breakfast if I sawed awhile," answered the lad, looking up as if to note how this proposition would be received.

"Breakfast! Of course! We never turn folks away hungry. Where'd you come from?"

"Over east," was the indefinite reply.

"Where'd you sleep last night?"

"Under the bushes, down the road a piece," the boy answered.

"Well you're a great one! I should not wander now, if you'd run away?" half interrogated the farmer, with a pleasant twinkle of his eye. Do you mind telling your name?"

"Jap, sir."

"Jap hey?"

"That's what they all call me—my real name's Jasper."

"Who are they—your father and mother?"

"I haven't any, sir."

"Brother's and sisters?"

"Not one," was the curt reply.

The farmer looked sharply at the boy from under his broad-brimmed hat, as the saw plied to and fro, and doubtless he would have pushed his inquiries still further had not the impatient lowing of Whitney and Doll reminded him that it was milking time.

"Well, you don't look over and above strongish. You'd better let that wood alone till you get some victuals down."

"I'd rather keep on," was the only answer; and the work proceeded with no further interruption till Ethel, the three-years'-old pet of the family, came trotting around the corner of the house, to announce in her baby fashion that the "b'e'k'ast" was ready.

"Come right in, come right in. You've airned a good meal of victuals;" and Farmer Granger led the way, with his little girl perched upon his shoulder.

The lad silently took the place assigned him at one end of the square table opposite Ethel and her father, while Mrs. Granger and a happy-faced old lady occupied seats on either side.

The first supply of boiled ham and baked potatoes had disappeared from the boy's plate, and the second installment was vanishing bit by bit, when Mrs. Granger suddenly discovered that he had no butter.

"No, ma'am; I don't care for it—this bread is good enough without any," was the reply when the plate was passed.

Mrs. Granger received this compliment with a pleased smile, and an extra large doughnut immediately found its way to accompany the butterless bread.

"I'd like to work awhile longer to pay for that breakfast," remarked the boy, as he followed the farmer through the woodhouse. "I haven't tasted anything so good in a long time," and the saw was taken up without permission.

"Well, if you're a mind to cut and pile up a spell, you can stay and get your dinner. We always mean to have good victuals and a plenty of 'em here."

"Now, where are you bound for?" questioned the farmer as the lad picked up his bundle after dinner and seemed ready to take his departure.

"I don't know, sir," he replied, digging his bare toes in the dirt "I s'pose I'll stop anywhere I can get work."

"What's the matter with this place?" with a little twinkle of the gray eyes. "That wood's to cut, and it'll take three or four days, at the least calculation. I'll agree to give you enough to eat and a comf'table bed. Maybe by that time you'll want to run home again."

The boy's eyes flashed, but he set his lips firmly together and made no answer for a minute; then he said:

"You are very kind, sir. I will stay if you will let me."

"Solomon Granger, you're crazy!" exclaimed the nervous little woman, when her husband related the foregoing conversation. "The idea of having that boy in the house all night! I shan't sleep a single wink. Likely as not he'll kill us all before morning, and make off with everything there is here."

"Oh, no; I guess he's all right," was the farmer's rejoinder, while a sweet voice came from over the knitting:

"I never saw a boy with such a face that had anything in him but good and honest blood. Depend upon it, Lowry, there ain't nothin' wrong about that boy."

Two days passed. The lad kept faithfully at his work, saying little and revealing nothing in regard to himself. The farmer's wife, meanwhile, worried and fretted, turned a dozen keys at night, and was surprised when morning dawned to find everything untouched.

"What are you going to do about going to church?" she asked, anxiously, on Sunday morning. "There's that boy!"

"There's room enough in the wagon," responded her husband serenely.

"I know—but tain't a bit likely he'll want to go. And I don't dare to leave him home; there's no telling what he'll do."

"I wouldn't worry about that boy; he ain't going to run off with the house."

The proffered seat, however, was declined, the boy saying:

"My clothes ain't fit. I'd rather stay 'round here."

So Mrs. Granger, with numberless misgivings, clambered into the high wagon, tucking little Ethel in beside her, and off they went over the hills to the town two miles away.

"Let me see," began grandma, when the last load of neighbors had passed the gate, "your name's Jasper, ain't it?"

"Jasper, ma'am."

"Yes. Well, can you read?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Well, s'posing you read out loud to me a spell." And a little old book was brought from the great chest in the corner, entitled "Tales of a Grandmother."

So the boy read, and grandma, folding her wrinkled hands—hands that were always busy on other days—leaned back with a look of contentment on her sweet old face, thinking to herself, "As if I'd be afeared o' that boy!"

"You must ha' been to school considerable," was the comment when the first chapter was ended.

"I never went," was the response.

"Never! Who learned you to read, then?"

"Mother."

The boy seemed reluctant to engage in conversation, and hastened to begin the second chapter. Some time passed, till at length, the one auditor falling asleep, the story was continued in silence.

Grandma's nap was brought to a sudden close by a loud rap on the outer door.

Two men stood on the doorstep, ill-looking fellows, and very dirty in appearance.

"Can you give us something to eat?" asked one.

"Sartin, sartin; come right in and sit down." said the old lady, bustling off to the pantry. "What do you like best, apple pie or custard?" And soon a bountiful repast was spread upon the table, and the good things vanished without ceremony.

The boy eyed the two sharply, while grandma, after receiving somewhat crusty answers to her few kindly questions, sat placidly rocking. The eyes of the two men moved searchingly about the room. Finally one asked:

"Folks gone to church?"

"La, yes," replied the old lady innocently. "Our folks never stay at home for nothin'."

The speaker threw a quick glance toward his companion, and the other nodded. Neither movement escaped the watchful eyes in the corner.

A moment after the boy left his seat, sauntered across the room and stopped by the window to look up the road and then going through the little hall which led out of the kitchen, he called from the foot of the stairs:

"Dave! Dave! you asleep up there?"

"What do you want?" sounded a gruff voice from the stairway.

"Come down, can't you, and bring along Tige and Fritz! Don't go to sleep again."

Grandma heard this in mingled amazement and alarm. Could the boy be in league with these two men, and another be in waiting up stairs.

As in confirmation of her fears a low growl was sounded from the room overhead. Then came a sharp yelp, followed by little whines of impatience, and with a careless "Hurry up, Dave," the lad walked leisurely back to the kitchen. As he reached the door, grandma, overwhelmed with consternation, made a desperate rush for the bedroom beyond, locking the door behind her.

The men neared the outer door.

"Got some dogs up there, have ye?" said with a disagreeable leer.

"You heard 'm, didn't you?" was the careless rejoinder.

"Come on Jim," addressing his companion, "we might as well clear; our game's up."

"Don't be a fool," was the sad reply in an undertone. "Who's afraid o' pups?"

"Yer dogs ain't fierce be they, youngster?"

"Fritz ain't over and above friendly to strangers," replied the boy cooly; "and if I were you I wouldn't be 'round here when Tige gets out for a run." Then in a louder tone:

"Dave, ain't you coming? But don't let Tige loose till these men get away."

At this the men moved off, cursing the dogs, and muttering low, wrathful threats, while the lad, with a final. "I advise you to but a good piece o' ground between you and Tige," closed the door, softly sliding the bolt.

Then going to the room where grandma lay crouched upon the bed, scarcely daring to stir, he called through the keyhole:

"They're gone. You can come out now."

"The dogs?" grasped a faint voice.

"There ain't any," he answered softly. "Open the door and I'll tell you."

The bolt was cautiously withdrawn, and the old lady's face appeared, white and terrified.

"Come and sit down," said the boy tenderly. "I am sorry I frightened you so. I was a fraid it would, but I couldn't help it."

"I won't stir a single step," said grandma, stoutly. "What do you mean by all this? You can't fool me! I heard the dogs, and men, too."

A low pleasant laugh sounded through the room.

"Twas only me, grandma. I saw those men meant mischief, and I knew something had to be done pretty quick; so I made believe there was somebody up there."

"But the dogs," cried the old lady, bewildered. "Where are the dogs?"

"I made 'em bark—listen."

And then came from the throat of the little ventriloquist such a torrent of growls, whines and yelps, interspersed with "Down, Tige and "Be still, Fritz!" that door was swung open and grandma leaned against the wall exclaiming:

"Well, I never in all my life! If you don't beat all the boys I ever did see! And there I s'posed you was connivin' with them critters, and I was so scart I was just as weak as a rag."

A while after this fright at the farmhouse, old Billy with his load of three, was plodding along peacefully over the brow of the little hill a quarter of a mile from home, when suddenly Mrs. Granger's voice, wild with terror rang out sharply on the still air:

"The house is a-fire!" she screamed. "And grandma!—oh, Solomon, if grandma's killed I'll never forgive myself, never. Why did we leave that boy? Oh, run the horse, Solomon, run the horse!"

"Nonsense," said the easy-going farmer. Nevertheless, he whipped up old Billy, and anxiously scanned the corner of the roof that was just visible behind the trees where the smoke was curling up gray and thick.

A dozen or more pails of water had done their work, however, and only wet, soaked timbers and a blackened pile of rubbish met the farmer's eye when he sprang from his wagon and alihted at the side of the breathless little worker.

The sight of the house and barn unharmed and grandma standing in the doorway, alive and well, put all fears to flight in an instant. But there was a story to relate, and the boy stood modestly by while grandma dwelt upon the exciting events of the last hour. The tramps, it it supposed, were the incendiaries, but, happily the fire had been discovered in time to prevent any damage.

The returning loads of church-goers, eager to know the cause of the unusual stir, stopped at the farm gate, and the lad suddenly found himself the hero of the hour.

"I told 'em all the bad qualities of Tige and Fritz, Uncle George's dogs!" exclaimed the boy, unmindful until the words were spoken that his hearers had never heard of "Uncle George" before. Then, with a bright blush, he dropped behind one of the men, and let the talk go on unheeded.

"I do believe that boy saved my life Lowry. Depend on't, the Lord sent him."

And grandma concluding her story with a long-drown breath, sat down on the doorstep and was immediately engaged in an eager talk with Mrs. Atkins.

It was many hours before quiet settled down upon the inmates of the farmhouse; but before they settled for the night Farmer Granger and his wife learned all that was needful to know of Jasper Goodrick's former life.

"The only reason I haven't told you," said the boy in reply to the farmer's questions, "is because I was afraid you'd send me back. It might as well come out though—I have run away, but I'll never go back to Uncle George's—I'll die first!"

It was a short story. Until he was seven years old he knew only a happy life. Then, his father's health failing and a sea voyage being determined upon, his father and mother sailed for France, leaving him in the care of the village minister and his wife. In six months came the news of his father's death, and some weeks later his mother too, died, and was buried in foreign land. The boy remained with his friends a few months only. Upon the minister's removel to another town, he was taken posession of by a half-brother of his father's, a rascally man, who had no love or kind feeling for his nephew. Here he was shamefully treated until he could endure it no longer, and after six years of abuse and torment he determined to seek a home among strangers.

"I wanted to stay," the boy concluded, "but I didn't dare to tell you, for fear, that you would send me back—"

"Never, my boy," interrupted the farmer earnestly. "You can stay with us till you find a better home, and we will do all we can for you."

"Well," said Mrs. Granger, as she laid down that night, "the idea of mistrusting that boy! I declare, it makes me feel mean to think of it."

Early the next morning the farmer harnessed old Billy, and, dressed in his Sunday-best clothes took the east road over the mountain. He returned late in the afternoon.

The announcement at the tea table was startling to at least one hearer.

"I have seen your uncle, Jasper."

The boy's face paled, but the farmer's next words were reassuring.

"He was inclined at first to be a little ugly, but after I had my say out he cooled down a trifle, and I fancy he won't give you any further trouble. You can just stay here as long as you please."

"I knew there wasn't nothin' wrong about that boy," said grandma, with a triumphant nod toward the radiant Jasper. "Depend upon it, Lowry, the Lord sent him."

She Heeded Not the Warning.

Her mother told her not to marry until she thought she was able to support a husband. But she heeded not her gentle mother's warning. She went and got civilly contracted to a man who was a fine long-winded talker, who could sit around and keep a stove warm better than any one she had ever seen in her life. And then how proficient he was lying in bed snoring on a December morning, while she got up and made the fire, fed the horses, split the wood, swept the floor, boiled the coffee, blackened his boots, mended the hole in his coat, sewed on that button, laid a pipe full of tobacco and some matches along side of his pillow, and how loving she must have felt toward him when he got up at last, about ten o'clock, cursed her for making a noise, and wanted to know why there was no beefsteak and eggs on the table, and why she had not pawned her watch (it was her dying mother's gift) in order to give him whiskey money. And when, after three years of this, she left him and went to work as a sewing girl, people spoke of the depravity of a woman who left her husband.—Texas Siftings.

His Love Was Chilled.

"Love you!" echoed the young man; "Why, I'd walk through fire to sit by your side for ten minutes!"

"That's awfully nice. I wish pa loved ma that way."

"Doesn't he?"

"Oh, no. She asked him at dinner for a $300 camel's-hair shawl, and he made her cry."

"How?"

"Why, he said that, with wheat touching a dollar, and he a half million bushels short on a delivery at eighty-seven cents, she'd better be thinking of calico at six cents a yard. Why, what ails you, Augustus?"

"I—I—that is, I've got to meet a man at sharp 3. Half a million bushels short, eh? Good-day, Miss Fairbanks."

And he went off kicking himself for not being in love with an ice dealer's daughter.—Wall Street Daily News.

18 Negroes!

Who left the United States for Liberia last year have lately returned, being unable to stand the climate. Everybody going to a new climate should have a bottle of Sulphur Bitters with them as a safeguard against disease.—Hartford Courant.

After the dust has been thoroughly beaten out of carpets, and they are tacked down again, they can be brightened very much by scattering corn meal mixed with coarse salt over them and then sweeping it all off. Mix the salt and meal in equal proportions.

Household Hints.

Never put ice-cold milk into boiling articles.

Articles likely to spoil should not be kept in or laid upon wood.

Cream sweetened with powdered sugar will keep for a couple of days.

The juice of tomato is said to be excellent to remove ink, wine and fruit stains.

To clean furniture: One pint linseed oil, one pint vinegar, half pint of wine or alcohol.

To preserve flowers in water, mix a little saltpetre or carbonate of soda with water, and it will preserve the flowers for two weeks.

Remove the mildew from linen by wetting the spot, rubbing on chalk, and exposing it to the air. Diluted hartshorn will take out mildew from woolen stuffs.

Fly poison: Boil one-quarter ounce small chips of quassia in one pint of water, add four ounces molasses. Flies drink this with avidity, and are soon destroyed.

A good cement for mending broken crockery ware may be made by mixing together equal quantities of melted glue, white of egg and white lead, and boiling them together.

If flannel dresses of the children are soiled and at all greasy, add borax to the water in which they are washed. Dissolve a large tablespoonful of borax in a pint of boiling water; put about a third of it in the first suds in which the garment is to be washed, another third in the next water, and the rest of it in the rinsing water; shake the garments thoroughly before hanging them up to dry.

A decided improvement on the old-fashioned bibs for children is made of a towel. Take a towel long enough to cut two bibs; cut it in half and hollow out for the neck at the top. If you take an all-white towel you can work a fancy border in colored worsteds, but be careful not to get the towel too wide, or the bib will always be over the hands. Bind the neck with white tape and cat-stitch.

Scott's Emulsion of Pure

Cod Liver Oil, with Hypophosphites. Dr. O. Killing, of Oakland, Cal., says: "I have used Scott's Emulsion in my own case and found it a most valuable preparation, and have since used it extensively in my practice with very surprising results to myself and patients."

Tolling the Bell of St. Paul's.

The most wonderful transformation scene I ever saw in the matter of hats was on Fleet street, London, after President Garfield's death. It became known that the Queen had ordered the great bell of St. Paul's to be tolled, an honor never before accorded except to the memory of an English sovereign. Fleet street and Ludgate Hill was one mass of hats, tall, black, glistening hats. All traffic was suspended. The old phrase, "a sea of hats," was most apt to this scene, and this literally the Black Sea. Probably no one in the thousands there had ever heard the mournful sound of that great bell.

The immense crowd waited patiently for hours. Then came the first low, dull, sonorous stroke of the long-silent bell. Instantly every hat was removed and the change from a sea of hats to a sea of heads was most magical. The English crowd stood, while that bell tolled, uncovered heads, a token of respect for the uncrowned monarch who lay dead beyond the ocean.—Cor. Detroit Free Press.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Since our last issue the Massachusetts Legislature has finished its labors and shut up shop. The members repaired to their respective homes in good order promptly on the final fall of the gavels of the presiding offices, where the most of them will spend a season in trying to recover from the exhaustive toil of the session, which was almost six months long. Although a good deal of work was done and many acts passed, a large number of papers speak in disrespectful terms of the Legislature and its labors, which would be the case if each member had been a statesman of the first water (which was not the case by considerable), and the work had been of priceless value to the Commonwealth. Some people will find fault no matter how slight the cause for it. Considerable very respectable law was enacted during the protracted session, considerable more not so worthy of approbation, and a few positively bad acts were passed. On the other hand, measures were rejected which ought to have incorporated into the public statutes. But then, this is the way of Legislatures in general, and it is a question whether this one was more deserving of censure than a majority of its predecessors.

SENATOR HARLOW.

The amount and good quality of work done by him during the session demonstrated the wisdom of the Republicans of the Sixth District in electing Dr. J. M. Harlow last fall to the Massachusetts Senate. He has made an able and faithful representative of the interests of his constituents, by which token he deserves and will no doubt receive a re-election, if such should be his desire. The Doctor has enjoyed the respect and confidence of, and filled an honorable place among, the body of which he was a member, and the record made by him is a clean and good one. A member of important committies; a man of clear thought and practical sense; a willing worker and ofhigh character, his influence on the legislation of the session was equal to that of any other Senator, proving that his friends knew what they were talking about when they claimed, last fall, that Dr. Harlow would make a first class Senator.

☞ It is amusing to see the Marlboro' Times squirm and twist when the wisdom of President Cleveland's policy respecting the federal offices is called in question by anybody. The Times is a Democratic sheet and would fain be an organ, but its opinions are not deemed of sufficient account to warrant serious consideration, much less adoption, by its party. If there are occasional spells when the intellect of the Times is diverted from a pleasant contemplation of its self-important owner and brought to bear on matters connected with running the machinery of the present administration, as is possible, it ought to be able to discover some things strangely queer and un-Democratic in the course which the President is pursuing. Other Democrats have discovered, and a few heartily denounced, them. A fair-minded and evidently intelligent correspondent of the Boston Post writing from New York, on June 19, concerning the appointment of a successor to Collector Robertson of that port, says:

> But while the administration hesitates as is generally believed, through fear of mugwump criticism, the situation here is hourly growing worse. Politics in this state are proverbial for their volcanic character, but with all my experience with inter-party strife, during the last dozen years, I have never known so much bitterness as there exists here to-day, and it is painfully evident that the administration is gradually building up a barrier between itself and the leaders of the democratic party.

Why would it not be a good plan for the Times to desist for a brief period from the pleasing occupation of self-contemplation and turn its ponderous guns on such distinguished members of its party as Senator Gorman, ex-Senator Jonas, Smith M. Weld, William C. Whitney, Abram S. Hewett, and others, who have been snubbed by Mr. Cleveland, and of whom he has made political enemies by a policy that President Arthur adopted and failed in? Why not?

☞ The Hendricks reception in Boston yesterday was a very swell affair. The Democracy swear by the Vice-President every time because there is no mugwump about him—not the faintest taint—and he believes that "to the victors belong the spoils," while Cleveland don't know whether he does or not.

— What has the military Committee of the Board of Selectmen done about allowing the boys to raise the very old Nick during the whole night before the 4th by ringing bells etc.?

— The Bay State Club gave a dinner to Vice-President Hendricks at the Parker House yesterday. It was a bang-up affair, in which several Woburn Bourbons participated.

— The society of which Mrs. W. A. Colgate is President, the officers of which we published two weeks ago, is the Soldiers' Aid Society, and not the Ladies' Aid society, as printed.

— Last Wednesday evening Woburns beat the Globes at Carter's Academy 3 to 0. That sets the Woburns ahead another notch. No use for the other teams to try to catch up with them.

— The White Mountain Division of the Boston and Lowell Railroad did the largest passenger business last Monday since it was constructed. It conveyed 95 car-loads of people to the Fabyan House on that day.

— We tender our sincere thanks to Mr. Frederick H. Lewis for complimentery tickets to the commencement concert of the New England Conservatory of Music given in Tremont Temple yesterday afternoon.

— Mr. Allen of the Advertiser is very calm and dignified editorially this week. Nobody can personate the austere gentleman better than he can, but his airs don't scare anybody in this office a cent's worth.

— Mr. Miller can now get a good view of the Sun Electric Light's big building for the book, "Woburn and Its Business." It will make a very nice picture. So also would several of the large tanneries in town.

— Mr. C. M. Munroe has a full and complete line of the best hammocks in the market with all the appliances and accompaniments for their use. He is selling them very cheap, and the present is a good time to buy.

— The School Board held a meeting to approve bills last Tuesday evening. Why was that? Their rule is to hold such a meeting on the last Tuesday in the month, and if it is changed notice should be given in some way.

— This is graduation day at the Woburn High School, and a very interesting season it is for a large number of young people. A full account of the commencement proceedings will be given in the next issue of the JOURNAL.

— If there is anything more delightful than than the present moonlight evenings we should like to know the name of it. Especially on Horn Pond is it just more than lovely. We use this item several times every summer.

— By calling at the office of the Woburn Coal Co. they will give results of trials of their coal by some of our well-known citizens. Mr. Newton is certainly building up a good trade and and is going the right way about it.

— A multiplicity of wires crossing Main street in the neighborhood of the lower side of the Common gives an appearance of a gigantic elevated cat's-cradle. So many wires ought to give lightning a good chance to spread itself.

—Mr. Amos Cummings talks strongly of building quite a large addition to his already capacious store, which is so crowded with goods that only a small part of them can be exhibited. He needs more room, and will probably have it.

— If anything has been done to secure a series of open-air concerts by our bands this summer a report of it has failed to reach our ears. Possibly arrangements have been made for a series, and then again, possibly none have been.

— The Scandinavian Evangelical Society holds regular meetings in the Scandinavian language at the Y. M. C. A. Rooms: Preaching, Sundays at 10.30 A. M. Sunday School in the English language at the Congregational Church at 12 M. Prayer meetings in the Rooms Sunday, at 7 P. M., and on Wednesday at 7.30 P. M.

— We have received a copy of the revised version of the Old Testament from the Henry Bill Publishing Company, at Norwich, Conn., about which we shall have more to say after due examination. It is gotten up very handsomely.

— Farmers are engaged in haying, and the delicious fragrance of new mown hay is wafted about on every breeze and zephyr. There is nothing much more grateful to properly organized olfactory nerves than the scent of new mown hay.

— It has been suggested that the Hudson school house would make a good building for the public rooms and offices. We can't see any objection to it, if it is to be permanently abandoned for school purposes. It is large enough, handy to town, and would save rent.

— One visitor said our Library building as seen from the through trains will be worth thousands of dollars to us, by impressing more favorably our town name. He suggested placing a sign that it might be known as a Public Library and not mistaken for other uses.

— People who love peace and quiet will rejoice to know that the sight for a 4th of July celebration in Woburn is a good many degrees below zero. The committee have about given it up, and the public sing amen. There will be firecrackers, torpedoes, etc., as usual.

— Miss Jessie Lafone, the prima donna of the rink, gave her grand closing exhibition of the season at Union Square Rink, in Somerville, last Saturday evening. It was a high-toned society event in which the fair Jessie was the central and much admired figure.

— A West Side correspondent writes that Chairman Maguire of the Selectmen has recovered from his illness and is around again: that John Welch has left the shop where he has been foreman for twenty years, and that Frank Tracy has got his job through the influence of Mrs. Battel.

— Mr. Ware B. Gay, surviving partner of the firm of Gay & Parker, Boston, who has been passing a few weeks in Woburn, leaves this week for his seaside home at Magnolia, where he will pass July and August, returning here for the fall months, so well pleased is he with this town.

— On Wednesday morning the officers made a descent on the J H. Connolly grocery establishment and seized a cask of what the proprietor claimed to be 3-per cent slosh, but what Chief Nelson thinks is something more stimulating. A test will be made of this case to see which side is in the right.

— Rev. N. B. Fisk is building one of the finest Cottages at Lake View where the New England Chautauqua and Sunday School Assembly meets. This Cottage contains 12 large rooms, and has a double balcony on three sides. This Cottage is to be the home of the Woburn people during the Assembly.

— The Advertiser has been trying to make itself and others believe that there is to be no new depot here, or, if any at all, not for a good while. Our answer to that is, the plans for a new depot are being drawn. It was just so about the coming of the railroad—the Advertiser didn't believe it would ever get here.

— Next Sunday will be observed as Children's, or Flower, Day at the Unitarian church with appropriate exercises. The pastor will have some of the right kind of thoughts and words for the young folks, and for their especial pleasure extra good music in more than common quantity will be furnished.

— They say that "pocket saloons" have increased in number very rapidly of late. It is a mighty mean way to sell rum. How true it is that the love of money is the root of all evil. If we were a drinker and had to patronize a "pocket saloon" for our drinks, the first thing we would do would be not to patronize.

— In the rear of Mr. Blake's and Mr. Fosdick's the land on which the track is being built has sunk several feet since the workmen have began to dump gravel on it. The probabilities that it will not settle much more. Beyond where the workmen are now dumping piles will be driven, and then she can't sink to any alarming extent.

— The 3 o'clock and 4 o'clock meetings at the rooms of the Y. M. C. A. last Sunday afternoon were very interesting indeed. Rev. Mr. Boyle failed to appear, but Rev. Mr. Fisk took his place at the first meeting, and gave an excellent address. Mr. J. Howard Nason led the meetings, and the music by the Durville family was very fine indeed.

— Our esteemed contemporary at the other end of the street—down by the old depot, as it were—thinks the JOURNAL rather too much exercised over the matter of baseball. Our chief reason for desiring to see the game flourish here is to divert the Advertiser's mind and talents, wholly or in part, from rinks and polo. Otherwise we care but very little about it.

— While this item is being penned, Thursday, 3.30 p. m., a thermometer, which hangs just above middleway of a circular post in the easterly corner of our office, which post was placed there to strengthen the floor above, on which rests considerable printing machinery, indicated 85 degrees of heat, which was a pretty steep temperature to work in and at the same time be happy.

— People interested in monetary matters can gain considerable valuable information by a careful perusal of the statement made by the Woburn Five Cents Savings Bank in this paper, made by E. E. Thompson, Treasurer of that institution. It is perfectly proper to say that there is not a safer, better conducted, or fairer Savings Bank in New England than the Woburn Five Cents.

— The M. E. Church have voted their pastor, N. B. Fisk, a month's vacation, commencing July 1. The pastor and his family intend spending July and some of August at their cottage at Lake View, and at the Vineyard, but may be prevented by the severe sickness of their youngest child. During the Pastor's absence services will continue as usual at the church. Rev. Franklin Keyes, who is a member of that church, will preach July 5 and 12, and conduct week day services.

— The Woburn Soldiers' Aid Society visited the Soldiers' Home at Chelsea lately, and have voted to furnish a room in it and keep it up in the future. Very wisely, they conclude that aid in such a direction would be as worthily bestowed as in any other; and besides it gives the ladies an object for continuous work and effort. They were highly pleased with the Home and its admirable management.

— A few days ago Mr. William G. Miller, who is a steel-plate printer in the city, gave us a fine steel engraved portrait of Mrs. J. R. Vincent, the actress who, not long since, celebrated her half century's connection with the Boston stage and was made the recipient of a very handsome benefit by members of the profession. The portrait is a rare piece of work which we were very glad to accept as a gift from Mr. Miller.

— On Monday evening June 18, the following were elected officers of the United Order of Pilgrim Fathers for the insuing term:—G., J. W. Field; L. G., O. M. Wade; S., Mrs. P. L. Eaton; C., H. S. Dickinson; T., J. S. Huse; S. at A., L. W. Perham; D. S. at A., Mrs. L. W. Perham; Chap., Mrs. O. P. Rogers; S. J. G., A. Cameron; S. O. G., A. Robie; Ex-G., P. L. Eaton; M. E., W. P. Defriez, M. D.

— A gentlemen visiting Woburn for the first time this week expressed his surprise at the size of the place, and its great activity as seen on Main street in the day and evening. He came on a matter of business and was in doubt by which railroad it was reached so little knowledge had he of Woburn, although he has heard of it in a general way for years. The new through line will help the town in removing this feature and establishing our location.

— It was stated in these columns last week that the doctors disagreed in relation to the alleged illness of John C. Higgins before being taken to Court. As he went to work the next day after being placed in the House of Correction and has worked ever since and made no complaint on the score of sickness, it looks as though Dr. Kelley was correct in his diagnosis of and decision on the case, and that Dr. Conway was away off the track. That is the way it looks, certainly.

— Several Woburn veterans and some who didn't go to the war have been taking in the grand National Encampment of the G. A. R. at Portland this week. Thomas H. Hill, Esq., Ex-Chief Charles K. Conn, C. M. Strout, George W. Kimball, Major H. C. Hall, George W. Jenkins, Edward Haskins, William Arnold and wife, George H. Ayer and James Walker were of the number who went down early in the week. The G. A. R. Posts of Woburn were not represented as organizations, although several of the members of each attended the Grand Encampment.

— Adam Lieberknecht, Esq., Chairman of the Illinois Board of Canal Commissioners, has kindly sent us an annual pass over the Illinois and Michigan Canal from Chicago to Copperas Creek, for which token of consideration we return our best thanks. Now, if we can find some gentleman of means who would like to temporarily deposit his surplus funds in our hands all we shall have to do is to pack our gripsack and strike out for life on the "raging canawl" and "a home on the roaring deep." We trust the gentleman of means aforesaid will see his way clear to making the deposit with as little delay as possible, for we are anxious to be off at once on our summer's cruise along the charming shores of the I. & M. C. between Chicago and Copperas Creek.

— No business was transacted at the meeting of the Executive Committee of the Board of Trade on last Tuesday evening. Several members were present who discussed matters of general interest. Most people are pretty busy just now, which, with short evenings, accounts for the small attendance on the summer meetings of the Committee and Board. When the fall comes around again, and people have returned from their summer vacations and taken up their work once more, then the meetings of the Board will be full, live and interesting, and Woburn's boom will go ahead. It won't really stop during the summer—only slow up a little, perhaps. Men can't work with the vim and spirit during the reign of the Dog-star that characterizes their movements in cool weather; but the officers and members of the Woburn Board of Trade will not sleep during the summer; they will keep an eye out for the main chance all the time.

— By courtesy of Abijah Thompson Esq., President of the Winchester Historical and Genealogical Society, we have been favored with a copy of the July issue (No. 3) of "The Winchester Record," for which we return thanks. The number contains over 100 pages of valuable historical and biographical matter, nearly 30 of which are devoted to the origin of the celebrated Baldwin apple, for the propagation of which Woburn must have the credit. Views of four of the ancient houses at North Woburn accompany a very interesting paper, entitled "Old Woburn Homes," by Rev. Leander Thompson, namely: the Baldwin home, erected in 1661: that of Samuel Thompson, built in 1730: the home of Sheriff Abijah Thompson, in 1778: and the residence of Rev. Leander Thompson, 1809. The editorial contributions by the Secretary of the society, George Cooke, Esq., of Mr. William R. Cutter, Librarian of the Woburn Public Library, William Winn, Esq., on the Baldwin Apple, and others are very entertaining and meritorious.

— Mrs. Mary Andrews, of Norridgewock, Me., arrived in this town last week and met a brother, Mr. Timothy Andrews, for the first time in her life. The circumstances attending the case are of remarkable interest. Mrs. Andrews, the child of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Andrews, was born in Essex in 1801, and is consequently 84 years of age. When but four years old, her parents moved to New Hampshire, leaving her in care of a grandmother. In New Hampshire the husband and wife settled and proceeded to raise a family. The first child born in that state first saw the light of day in a log hut. The family increased until eleven more were added, making thirteen children in all. These thirteen were never all together at any one time, for as fast as arriving at a majority they would leave to seek their fortunes elsewhere. Mary, the child left in Essex, had meanwhile grown up, and when about 18 years of age married a cousin, namesake of her father, Mark Andrews, of St. George, Me., and moved to that state, in different ports of which she has since resided, the last settlement being in Norridgewock, where in 1878 her husband died at the age of 83 years. The brother and sister have several times tried to bring about a meeting, but failed until now, when Mrs. Andrews, who is en route to Holliston, where she is to spend her declining years with a son, took occasion to visit Woburn. The meeting was most affectionate. Before visiting Holliston Mrs. Andrews will take occasion to visit Essex, her birthplace. The history of the family is remarkable. The thirteen children all lived to marry, and ten of them are alive at the present time, the youngest being 64 years of age. Mrs. Andrews retains all her faculties to a remarkable degree. There is one brother now living whom Mrs. Andrews has not yet seen, and one brother that she has seen but one hour. The great-grandmother of the family lived to 106 years of age, and a grandmother died at 102.

RINK NOTES. No abatement of interest is discernable in the Union League series of polo games, but, if anything, it is rather on the increase. Great crowds assemble at the rinks on the evening of the games and much excitement prevails. The Woburns keep marching on with rapid strides towards the victor's goal, and that they will win it nobody, in his sober senses, doubts for a moment. Up to Wednesday evening, exclusive, they had won ten games and lost three, which is almost too far ahead of the other three teams to make it interesting. To date named the Bay States had won five games and lost six; the Stonehams, won five and lost eight; the Globes just even with the Stonehams. Which of the last two teams will come out at the tail of the tournement time only can determine. The Woburns are unquestionably the ablest team that does business on the planks and more than a match for anything that swings a shinny club.—Last Monday evening a very nice entertainment was given at Carter's Academy which was well patronized. It consisted of female poloists, music, games, and etc. —For particulars of entertainments at Carter's Academy for the next six days read the proprietors' card in this paper. "Doings at the Rink" by a correspondent was received too late for publication. It is desirable that such notes should be received here as early as Wednesday afternoon. He says the rumor that Hargraves is about to leave the Woburns is without foundation. Good words are given to W. H. Fields for the "fair way in which he referees the games." A little new music at Carter's Academy our correspondent thinks would be a good thing. He says Mr. Carter is doing a good thing in stopping fast skating at his rink.

Meeting of the School Board.

Last week Thursday evening the School Board held an adjourned meeting for the purpose of finishing up the business of appointing the teachers of the public schools, and to make the assignments for the year. Each of these duties was attended with considerable difficulty, the former, on account of the fact that there were several more teachers than places to be filled; and the latter, by reason of changes that necessarily had to be made. The Board exercised their best judgment and acted with judicial fairness and impartiality. As few changes as possible in the location of teachers were made, and none except where the best interests of the schools, and a decrease in their number, imperatively demanded it. Miss Nellie A. Hanson of the Montvale sent in her resignation which was accepted. The following teachers were appointed, which make out the full complement: Clara M. Ames, Hattie Bosworth, Arabella Menard, Julia Byrne. Mary H. Perkins was appointed assistant at the No. Woburn school, and Katie Walsh, a substitute. The following assignments were made:

HEREDITARY SCROFULA.

ARE you aware that in your blood the taint of scrofula has a prominent place? This is true of every one. It is liable at any time, on the slightest provocation, to develop itself in some insidious disease. Consumption and many other diseases are outgrowths of this impurity of the blood. HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA has a wonderful power over all scrofulous troubles, as the remarkable testimonials we have received unmistakably prove.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO.: Gentlemen— * * * My youngest son has always been troubled with Scrofulous Humor; sores in his head discharging from his ears, and a running sore on the back of his ear for two years; his eyelids would fester and ulcerate, discharging so that I was obliged to wash them open every morning, his eyelashes nearly all coming out; he was exceedingly dainty, most of the time eating but two slight meals a day. We were unable to find anything that had the least effect upon him till last spring, 1876, we gave him two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla. His appetite improved at once. * * The back of his ear healed up without a scar, and not a sore in his head since. Sincerely yours,
MRS. N. C. SANBORN,
No. 108 Merrimack St., Lowell, Mass.

"We do not as a rule allow ourselves to use our editorial columns to speak of any remedy we advertise, but we feel warranted in saying a word for Hood's Sarsaparilla. Sarsaparilla has been known as a remedial agent for centuries and is recognized by all schools of practice as a valuable blood purifier. It is put up in forms of almost infinite variety, but Messrs. Hood & Co., (Lowell, Mass.) who are thoroughly reliable pharmacists, have hit upon a remedy of unusual value. Certainly they have vouchers of cures which we know to be most extraordinary."—Editors Lowell Weekly Journal.

WINCHESTER.

There is talk of building a chapel at Winchester Highlands.

There is quite a baseball fever here. We have some good players, and several clubs are coming on finely.

The talk now is that operations on the high water service will commence in the course of a week or two.

The Unitarian Sunday School will hold no more sessions after next Sunday until the first Sunday in September.

No village in the suburbs of Boston can show the visitor a finer Common than Winchester. It is a little darling.

Mr. M. A. Herrick, member of the Water Board, has gone to the Adirondacks for a brief respite from labor and care.

Mr. F. W. Baker, a former resident of this place, died very suddenly at his home in Los Angeles, Cal., a short time ago.

People who have not paid their poll tax are to be pursued with sharp sticks by town clerk Spurr, per order of the Selectmen.

J. F. Dwinell, Esq., of the Boston firm of Dwinell, Hayward & Co., is enjoying life with hook and line at Moosehead Lake.

As was to be expected some people complain of the location of the school house to be built. Of course, every body can't be accommodated and satisfied.

Building of residences has never been so brisk in Winchester as at the present time. A very nice class of houses are being erected which attract in desirable immigration.

The closing exercises of the High School will take place in the Principal's room, on Tuesday morning, June 26, beginning at 9 o'clock. Friends of the school are cordially invited to be present.

Extra efforts will be made by our police to preserve good order on the 4th, and the night before. They are willing that the boys should have all the fun they want, but rowdyism will be prevented.

Miss Addie Gardner, a graduate of the Winchester High School and of Smith College, has recently been appointed assistant teacher in the High school at Cambridge, which is very complimentary to her as a teacher and lady.

The Wedgemere Tennis Club, of Winchester, opened their new grounds with a tournament last Wednesday. Ladies and gentlemen attended in large numbers, and the scene was an animated and brilliant one. The club is firmly established in popular favor in Winchester, and its permanent success seems to be assured beyond a doubt.—Boston Courier.

Fun on the Fourth. A match game of baseball will be played between a nine from the Grammar School, and a nine of the "Old Boys" of the village, consisting of we believe, the Selectmen, Chief of Police Richardson, Judge Littlefield, the brothers Dotten and others. Town Clerk Spurr has been requested to umpire the game. The game will be played on Bacon's field, in the forenoon, and will be "fought out on those grounds if it takes all summer."—Star.

Number 13, June 20, of Every Other Saturday, contains a sermon by Rev. Theodore C. Williams, minister of All Souls Church, New York. An editorial note says: "Finishing his course (at the Harvard Divinity School, Cambridge) in 1882, Mr. William was immediately called to Winchester, Mass., as the successor of Rev. Richard Metcalf, his ordination taking place in November of the last year named." A very complementary notice of Mr. Williams from the N. Y. Tribune is also given in this note.

There are a few summer boarders in town.

The schools close Thursday for the summer vacation.

The assessors are making taxes at their rooms in Town Hall.

Strawberries are ripening. There is a prospect for a good crop.

The dry weather and cold nights are causing the farmers considerable anxiety.

Mr. Samuel Walker, our most experienced grower of small fruits, has the prospect of an abundant crop of raspberries and blackberries.

The friends of Dr. G. H. W. Whiteside may be interested to know that he was married to Miss Clara J. Thomas in Lowell, June 4. He will make his residence in Leavenworth, Kansas. He has the best wishes of his friends here.

Parochial School Exhibition.

Last Wednesday forenoon the commencement exercises of St Johns Parochial School were held in the large school room in St. John's Hall, under the direction of the Sisters, who have charge of and teach it. The exhibition of the Primary department had been given some days before, and only pupils of the higher grades participated in that of last Wednesday. There were about 350 scholars present, who with parents, friends and visitors, filled the great room to its utmost capacity. The hall was beautifully decorated. The walls, gas fixtures etc., were hung with wreathes and garlands of fresh, rare flowers and ferns; bouquets and nosegays occupied vases, desks and window-sills, and the whole presented a handsome appearance. The children were all dressed in white with pretty ribbons, many holding bunches of bright flowers and all looking gay and happy. The large number of spectators occupied seats around the walls and attentively regarded the exercises, with which they were evidently well pleased. The following was the

There was a large number of fine specimens of needlework by the pupils which attracted a good deal of attention. They included all kinds of plain and fancy work, some of it done by girls who were entirely ignorant of the art until taught by the Sisters. This exhibition went far towards proving the utility of teaching sewing and other needlework in our schools.

Short appropriate addresses were made by Rev. Fr. Quealy and other clergymen, and excellent music was interspersed throughout the exercises. A class of little ones formed in half circle in front of the platform on which sat the clergy, each carrying a beautiful bouquet, and one, a basket of flowers. This last was presented to Fr. Quealy and the bouquets to the home and visiting ministers, one of whom was Fr. Daley of Winchester. Rev. Fr. McDonnell presented the Coal.

The Woburn Coal Co., of which Mr. Newton is agent, is only one of several retail yards owned by Gay & Parker of Boston, who also have one of the largest wholesale coal business in New England, their sales amounting to nearly three hundred thousand tons per annum. They also have large storage pockets at Mystic Wharf, from which they distribute all kinds of coal as wanted by dealers and manufacturers along the line of the Lowell railroad. They do the same along the Boston & Maine, Boston & Albany, and Old Colony roads.

The great expense of mining and handling coal is little understood by the general consumer and where the dangers of mining, and the large sums necessary to invest in machinery and developement of a well appointed coal mine, together with the cost of transportation, two hundred miles by rail and as much more by sea, are considered it is a wonder coal can be sold as low as it is. We hardly realize what an important factor to civilization coal has become, not only, to keep us warm and for domestic uses, but for steam and mechanical purposes; and when the total production of the mines is multiplied into horse power it is something simply enormous.

The Anthracite, or hard, coal deposit is confined to a limited area in Pennsylvania, and its outlet to market is controlled by about six railroad companies who are also engaged in mining. One of these (the Reading) has become enormously extended and is in the hands of Receivers, owing over one hundred million dollars. A visit to an Anthracite mine is a very interesting thing, and would remove many of the present ideas of burning coal, both as to quality of coal and the way to use it with best results. All mines have what are called breakers situated at the mouth of the shaft or into the slope; into this breaker all the coal coming from the mines below is hoisted, broken into small sizes, passed over revolving screens which separate it into Broken, Egg, Stove, Nut, and Pea, these being the several sizes of all coals regardless of quality or variety. Thus Franklin coal has all these sizes and so has Lehigh and all other coals. Many consumers, however, think the size distinguishes the quality; but when they ask the dealer for stove coal it conveys no meaning to the dealer except the size, and it might be soft Franklin or hard Lehigh stove coal the consumer wanted.

It is very picturesque at many points in the coal regions. The wonderful accomplishments in engineering in overcoming severe grades and other physical difficulties are interesting and long trains of coal cars wind around the sides of mountains like immense snakes is no unusual sight.

Maunch Chunk, called the Switzerland of America, is one of the most quaint places to be found in this Country, being the head of canal navigation, surrounded by high mountains on all sides, where numerous branch lines join the main track contributing millions of tons of the black diamonds to the forces of the world. Lehigh coal is the hardest variety. Franklin or Lyhens Valley is the softest or most free burning, and between these two are an infinite variety differing in hardness and burning qualifications. All coal as it comes from the bowels of the earth, has more or less slate in it, which must be picked by hand, piece by piece, or by aid of a new and very ingenious machine which, by means of water and a peculiar motion, causes the coal which is lightest to pass off at the top, while the slate which is heavier passes out at the bottom. This machine is known as the specific gravity gig. The real value of coal depends upon its quality as well as its preparation, as the best coal poorly prepared would be dear at any price.

We may in a future article give some practical hints on how to burn coal to get best results, as much misapprehension exists at present on this subject not withstanding it is something in which all are deeply interested. Some one has said, more than half the coal used is thrown away, so little does it accomplish, compared with what it is capable of accomplishing.

Very Remarkable Recovery.

Mr. Geo. V. Willing, of Manchester, Mich., writes: "My wife has been almost helpless for five years, so helpless that she could not turn over in bed alone. She used two Bottles of Electric Bitters, and is so much improved, that she is able now to do her own work." Electric Bitters will do all that is claimed for them. Hundreds of testimonials attest their great curative powers. Only fifty cents a bottle at Wm. W. Hill's.

The first test of the Bessemer steel process ever attempted in the south will be made in a short time in a furnace now in course of construction at Birmingham, Ala. The iron men there are generally confident that excellent steel can be made from Alabamaore.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., June 15th.
The Judges on Printing and Printing Material of the World's Industrial Exposition have awarded the only two first premiums (gold medals) for printing presses to Messrs. C. B. Temperance News.

EDITOR JOURNAL:—

The Scandinavian Temperance Society, "Thor," No. 37, of the Order of Templars, is getting along nicely, and doing a remarkable good work among the Scandinavian people in this town. The members are 56 in number and new ones are constantly added. There is a Life Insurance and a Sick-help fund connected with the Temperance Society, from which members can have help; two of the members have had help from the Sickhelp fund during their sickness. The Scandinavians believe it pays to belong to a Temperance Society. When the hard earned dollar is got it is used for something better than whisky and beer. If out of work, several have found how easy it is for a temperate man to get a job by saying "I am a member of this or that Temperance Society." We are in hope that the day is not far away, when no man shall be wanted in any shop or in any place who is not a temperate man.

The Scandinavian Temperance Society hold their regular meetings each Friday night in the Y. M. C. A. rooms. The Y. M. C. A. have showed their kindness towards the Scandinavian people, in that they have let us have the rooms for our Temperance meetings at a comparatively small rent, for which kindness we feel very thankful. Except a few, all the Scandinavians now in Woburn have come here during the last three or four years, and number now about 200. As yet, they not had any "turnouts" or "picnics," but as the 4th of July is a day on which there will be no work to be done, no meetings to attend, and nothing of interest to be carried out, the Scandinavian Temperance Society has decided to hold a picnic on that day at Melville Garden, for which arrangements for low fares on trains and boats are now being made. Members and all others are invited to go.

This is about the information that I at present can give you about the Scandinavian Temperance Society. When anything of interest turns up, you shall hear from me again.

LITERARY NOTICES.

OUR LITTLE ONES for July is at hand. As usual it is a beautiful number, only a little more so, if possible, and the small people will like it very much. It is filled with handsome summer pictures, and there are delightful stories, poetry, and other good things for its army of juvenile admirers. OUR LITTLE ONES is published by the Russell Publishing Co., Boston.

ST. NICHOLAS for July has very properly a decidedly patriotic flavor. The number opens with an interesting sketch by Edward Eggleston, entitled A School of Long Ago, which shows us the odd methods in which some of our forefathers gained their education; while in Washington's First Correspondence we can read the first letter ever written by the Father of his Country; Among the Law-makers contains an instructive and entertaining description of the organization of our National Government from the time that the bell of Carpenter's Hall rang out the good news of the Declaration of Independence, which act is specially commemoration in a stirring poem, The Liberty Bell by E. S. Brooks; in the Letter-box are some spirited verses describing the heroic act of Elizabeth Zane a brave American girl of the olden time; and in A School Afloat, Ensign Gibbons of the Navy, and Charles Barnard explain how patriotic American boys are made into practical American sailors. Lieutenant Schwatka, however, tells us in The Children of the Cold of some young Americans who no doubt often indulge in snow-ball fighting on the Fourth of July,—while the third paper of the Historic Girls Series takes us away back to the time of Clotida of Burgundy: the Girl of the French Vineyards; and Mozart is the subject of this month's From Bach to Wagner biographette. The frontispiece, entitled The Pet Fawn, is from a drawing by Mary Hallock Foote, and there is a number of bright short stories and poems by Laura E. Richards, Helen Gray Cone, Alice Wellington Rollins, The Countess Evelyn Martinengo Cesaresco, Irene Putnam, and others; while the popular serial stories; Driven Back to Eden, by E. P. Roe; His One Fault by J. T. Trowbridge, and Sheep or Silver? by William M. Baker, all continue to increase in interest with each installment.

PEARLINE. With this article, it is claimed, the family washing can be done with ease, with economy and despatch, and as it is thoroughly disinfectant, it will be seen that whenever used the result is pure and healthful. As there are imitations of this in the market, be sure and get the genuine, manufactured only by JAMES PYLE, New York.

The Dover (Del.) Sentinel publishes eleven and a-half columns of letters from peach-growers. The gist of the information they contain is that, on the whole, the yield will not be so large as the earlier estimates fore-shadowed. Now look out for the biggest crop for years.

Antonio Accetta of Catskill, N. Y., was arrested in Cleveland, O., Tuesday, charged with attempting to defraud an insurance company out of $10,000, the amount of a policy taken out on his life. Accetta went in swimming a short time since and his clothes being found on the beach an unsuccessful search was made for his body. He admitted the conspiracy, stating that he had secreted an extra suit of clothes at a short distance down the river from where the clothing was found.

Portland has had the greatest week since last Monday ever known in her history. From 25,000 to 30,000 veterans and strangers heve filled the streets and houses of the city to overflowing and music, marching, speeches and a good time have been the order every day. Many distinguished military men and civilians have been present, among them Gen. John A. Logan, who received great honors from the soldiers and people. Portland never housed so many people in one week before.

Surviving Senators of 1861.

The recent death of ex-Senator James W. Nesmith of Oregon leaves Willard Saulsbury of Delaware, Lyman Trumbull of Illinois, James Harlan of Iowa, Samuel C. Pomeroy of Kansas, Morton S. Doolittle of Winconsin tge only surviving members of the United States senate at the commencement of the late civil war, and who took their seats at the memorable first sesion of the thirty-seventh congress, July, 1861.

In a week postage will take another drop on heavy letters. The two cent rate after July 1 will cover ounce letters, where now it only covers half ounce letters. The new law will be a great convenience to the public and likewise to the postoffice officials, for the petty detail of weighing will not have to be brought into requisition half as often as at present. There is hardly any other blessing in a country where correspondence is so general and extensive as in this that is greater or more widely appreciated than cheap postage.

Three thousand people assembled at Waterville, Me., the other night to see "Prof. Sheppard" sail over the village on a mocycle. It was the most successful as well as exasperating "sell" of the season and the sun-burnt farmers who drove in with their families from the surrounding towns swore until the air was blue. The postoffices of the world do a pretty large business in the course of a year. A small volume of statistics bearing upon this point has just been published at Florence, the latest available returns being for the year 1883, from which it appears that there were in Europe 95,500 receiving offices, 1500 telegraph offices and 225,000 letter boxes. The total number of persons employed by the various postoffies was 359,000, and in the twelve months there were transmitted 673,000,000 letters, 549,000,000 post cards, 1,046,000 books and parcels, 1,672,000,000 newspapers and 117,000,000 telegrams, the gross weight of the matter sent through the post being estimated at about 800,000 tons. The lowest charge for the conveyance of any letter or post card was one-fifth of a cent, the highest $25. The total receipts of the various offices amounted to $190,750,000, and their expenditures to $159,700,000.

THE PICTURED LEAF.

We grasp life's book with eager hand,
Through love not brief, through joy and grief,
To sober age from baby-land,
Our thoughts dwell on this pictured leaf;

A faint perfume, a morning mist,
Lillies which in the field have smiled,
An Eastern sky by Glory kissed,
A branch of palm, a little child.

A crown of thorn where shadows pall,
Gethsemane in deep repose—
But Love sleeps not and outlasts all
When Time shall come the book to close.

The School Children of Woburn in the years 1791 and 1794.

TWO LISTS PREPARED BY JOSIAH RICHARDSON.

In a recent number of the Winchester Record we find published a list of the scholars who attended the school kept by Michael McDonnell, teacher, in the present Winchester section of Woburn, in the year 1786. In this list we find the names of Thomas, Samuel, Luther, Calvin and Fanny Richardson, members of the family of Jeduthun Richardson; John, Asaph, and Samuel Evans, of the family of Andrew Evans; Simeon Parker, of Simeon Parker, Jr.; Joseph, John, Thomas, and Polly Eaton, of the family of Jonathan Eaton; Joseph Whittemore, living with Mr. Holden; Abigail Hadley; Isaac Richardson, family of Jesse Richardson; Richard, Nathan, Lydia and Hannah, children of Nathan Richardson; Aaron Brooks, Betty Brooks and Polly Richardson, of the family of Zachariah Richardson, Jr.; Peggy Watts, from family of Nathaniel Watts; Nathaniel Watts, Sally Miller and Abigail Miller, of family of Jonathan Richardson; David Hadley, of family of Samuel Watts; Daniel and Judah Richardson, of family of Benjamin Richardson; John and Patty Skinner, of family of John Skinner; Jesse Wyman, family of Paul Wyman; Samuel T. Wyman and Abigail Jaquith, family of Noah Wyman; Lydia Mead, family of Joseph Brown; Susanna and Samuel Symmes, family of Samuel Symmes; Mary, Ruby, Lydia, Reuben and Isaac Richardson, family of Abel Richardson; Joseph Skinner, of Joseph Skinner, Sen.; and Benjamin and Beulah Convers, of family of Benjamin Convers. Total, 46. List dated Woburn, March 2, 1786. The peculiar juxtaposition of the names in the above lists illustrates a custom more prevalent a hundred years ago than now, namely, that many of the boys and girls then "lived out."

The importance of the above list historically and genealogically, has led to the preparation for the press of the two following lists, prepared from a manuscript book deposited in the Woburn Public Library.

Josiah Richardson, styled by himself and his contemporaries, Josiah Richardson, "the 4th," prepared when a boy the following lists of school children in the town of Woburn in the years 1791 and 1794. These lists contain the names of those scholars who attended the schools which he attended in those years. It is not supposed they embraced all the scholars who attended school in those years in the town, but they probably contain the names of a large part of them; the greater part, probably. These lists were entered in his own handwriting in a book which has fortunately been preserved. For convenience of reference we have brought the names he gives into two lists, alphabetically arranged, and both of them, we are confident, will be perused with interest by the older citizens of the town. For here, indeed, they will find the names of their parents and grandparents, and, perhaps, many long forgotten relatives.

We have taken pains to give the names as accurately as possible, and this is not easy when so many names were written as they were then pronounced, and not as now currently spelt. One or two names still puzzle us in their interpretation; but these exceptions are duly noticed. For example, as to spelling, we have Evens for Evans; Parce for Pierce; Scottor for Scottow; Twist for Twiss—names given as they were then pronounced. Also "Maccadow" for Micajah, and "Martial" for Marshall, etc.

A comparison of births with the ages given, shows the date of the first list to have been the year 1791. The birth as given on the town records does not always, however, correspond with the age given in the list. We give carefully the ages as the youthful penman recorded them at the time.

The first list was probably for the winter term of 1791–2, beginning about the month of October and lasting till spring.

Josiah Richardson, 4th, aged eleven years, is the maker of the list, which is as follows:—

The writer of the list adds at the end, "The Number of the Scholars are one hundred and eleven—good by."

The following he gives as the members of the first class:—Rufus Wyman, Samuel Wyman, Josiah Richardson, 4th, Jacob Coggin, Isaac Kendall, Joshua Richardson, Caleb Richardson, Charles Thompson, Samuel Wright, John Eames, Nathan Merriam, James Baldwin, Loammi Baldwin, Samuel Thompson, Benjamin F. Baldwin, and Benjamin Fowle. All others are members of the second class. Of the members of the first class, Rufus Wyman became an eminent physician, and was physician to the McLean Asylum for the Insane, at Somerville, during the first seventeen years of its existence. His sons Drs. Jeffries and Morrill Wyman became eminent men. Another member of the class, Jacob Coggin, son of the schoolmaster, became the minister of the church in Tewksbury, in which relation he remained for the period of forty-eight years. Two members, Samuel Wright and Joshua Richardson, were killed instantly at the fall of the Clapp House frame, in Woburn, on July 14, 1807, both being aged about thirty years. Loammi Baldwin, of the class, was the great civil engineer, with a reputation second to none in this country. The other Baldwins, James and Benjamin F., were his brothers, and were well known men.

We now present the second list of scholars; that for the year 1794.

LITERARY NOTICES.

A serial story, for business boys, How the Middies Set up Shop, by Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney, has succeeded Charles Egbert Craddock's Down the Ravine in WIDE AWAKE. Margaret Sidney at the same time contributes a serial for business girls, entitled A New Departure.

Rose Kingley, who is one of the choicest of English writers, has a new book, which is to have fine fine original illustrations, and reproductions of rare engravings, in the press of D. Lothrop & Co., entitled The Children of Westminster Abbey.

Dr. Peabody, so long the revered and beloved college pastor at Harvard, is enjoying a hale old age in congenial literary pursuits. His Baccalaureate Sermons recently published by D. Lothrop & Co., is having a remarkable sale.

The Boston publishers are already sending to the trade tempting announcements as to what they propose to offer for the holiday season. D. Lothrop & Co., who promise to outdo all their previous efforts in the line of beautiful gift books, among other elegant books will offer Heroines of the Poets, Stabat Mater and The old Armchair with illustrations specially designed by Lungren, Hassam, Miss Humphrey and others.

Both Rose Kingsley and Mrs. Margaret J. Preston have contributions in the forthcoming July WIDE AWAE relative to the famous old Kenilworth Castle.

One of the first appearances of the handsome new seal just designed for the Department of State at Washington appears in a fine fac-simile in gold on the back of How We Are Governed. one of Lothrop's latest publications.

The first article in THE POPULAR SCIENCE MONTHLY for July, by Dr. Frankland, the eminent English chemist and sanitarian, is very important. It is on A Great Winter Sanitarium for the American Continent, and is the result of Dr. Frankland's comparative study of the subject as observed in the Engadine of the Swiss Alps and the Yellowstone region, which he visited to determine its sanitary possibilities. Recent Progress in Aerial Navigation, by Professor W. Le Conte Stevens, an illustrated article, will be read with extreme interest on account of the late advances in this difficult but fascinating Railroads, Telegraphs, and Civilization, by Professor Herzog, gives a masterly and original handling of a mighty problem—how these great new agencies are reacting and are destined still further to react upon the constitution of modern society. Diet in Relation to Age and Activity, by Sir Henry Thompson, is an especially valuable article by an authority. On Leaves, by Sir John Lubbock, is an illustrated paper full of curious interest by this indefatigable observer. But the best article of the number is a translation from the German, entitled Ethics and the Development Theory, a powerful discussion of the relation of morality to evolution. Archæological Frauds, by Abbott; Earthquake Phenomena; Curiosities of Star-Fish Life; Moths and Moth-Catchers; The Hygiene of the Aged—are all articles of superior interest, making a number of unusual strength and variety. The minor departments of the magazine are full, varied, and lively. New York: D. Appleton & Company. Fifty cents a number, a $5 a year.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and enegry to the whole system. MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle.

The New York Tribune which is by no means a fanatical temperance paper, recently stated that "one in twenty of the inhabitants of this country are rendered idle and incapacitated for work through the liquor traffic; and these, if not idle, would, at ordinary wages, earn $200,000,000 annually."

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

A voter once said he had eight reasons for voting for the enforcement of the prohibitory law, and when asked what they were replied: "My eight children."

From William Y. Bartlett, postmaster for twenty-five years at Belgrade, Me.

"I have been troubled with a severe cough for nearly one year; have been treated by two of the best physicians I could find; my case was considered past cure. The physicians did all they could to cure me, and considered my case a hopeless one. Finally, as a last resort, I was advised to try Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam, to which I owe my present health, which is as good as ever.

"WILLIAM Y. BARTLETT,
Postmaster, Belgrade, Me.

In the rage for new-process flour it should be remembered that the old kind, containing a larger proportion of starch, is best for pastry and many other purposes. For bread the new process is superior; but it does not make, with ordinary management, as good biscuits or piecrust as that ground in the old-fashioned may.

The Failure of Private Advertising.

WHY CARD, CIRCULARS, AND THE LIKE ARE FAILURES AS ADVERTISING MEDIUMS.

Within the last few years it has become the fashion with some people to do their advertising in their own private way, instead of through the newspapers. Some distribute cards, some circulars, some pamphlets, some even almanacs and some inconceivable monstrosities of oddity, circulating them by the hundreds or thousands through the mails. The printer's art has been taxed to the uttermost to gratify the tastes of these advertisers. Some of the finest as well as some of the basest specimens of the art of engraving, of chromo-lithographing and of color-printing are being produced for these purposes, and every conceivable style of fancy paper is brought into requisition. The advertisers vie with each other in the elegance of their designs and the costliness of their devices, taking it for granted that the receivers will conform with their estimate of the status of the advertisers to the artistic pretensions of his advertisement. Some people may regret that the noble art of printing, at the period of its highest achievements, should be subjected to such debasing uses; but to those who employ the art, it should be equally a matter of concern that the debasement so completely fails of the object for which it is intended. With him who notices such advertisements at all, the first feelings on receiving one of these superb specimens of typography or engraving is apt to be one of disgust that it relates to the artistic pursuits of his butcher or his bootmaker, or that the subjects of its elegant illustrations are chairs and tables, refrigerators and brooms; he throws it down with an indefinable grudge against the man who has been guilty of such a ridiculous prostitution of art, and, without exactly knowing it, he is distinctly convinced that a tradesman who spends so much money in such an incongruous way is not likely to be endowed with the common sense of a good man of a good man of business, or to sell cheaply.

In truth, however, those who take any notice whatever of this flood of announcements form but a very small percentage of those who receive them. They have come to be the nuisance of both the parlor and the counting-room. At home they are never opened but with disappointment, because they come in the place of letters really hoped for. In the office the merchant finds his morning mail stuffed with these intrusions upon the serious affairs of his business, which he inwardly curses or impatiently consigns to his waste-paper heap. In short, if a public vote could be taken, it would unanimously declare these drumming missives to be an intolerable nuisance that should be denied the privilege of the mails.

Men of business who resort to this method of advertising cannot be ignorant of the fact that the people whom they would reach have become nauseated with it. They must be aware that they themselves disregard all such appeals for patronage; and what reasons have they to suppose that other receive their applications with more patience? Sagacious advertisers are beginning to see this and are returning to the old method of public announcement. The newspaper is in every sense the best medium for advertising; and, for a given result, it is by much the cheapest also. It reaches a far greater number of possible customers than any private announcement can; and it is more certain to receive attention. The private circular is thrown aside as a thing which people have come to regard as a bore, and which is neglected because its recipients have no time to attend to it. The newspaper is used in each day's hour of leisure, and readers find interest in reading its advertisements as well as its news, because of the variety they present and the information they convey respecting a wide diversity of interests. It may be safely estimated that an announcement made through the press is noticed by fifty readers, where, made in a private way, it would reach but one. If therefore, the same amount were expended in either case, the result would be fifty-fold better from the former method than from the latter. There are, undoubtedly, cases in which the circular is a better medium than the newspaper. Such, for instance, as where the matter is necessarily lengthy, and the cost of newspaper space would therefore be very large. But such cases are quite exceptional; and the sooner advertisers learn the folly of their present large expenditures in seeking publicity through private means, the better for their pockets and their success.—New York Commercial Bulletin.

Why the Congregation Smiled.

At the dedication of Pilgrim chapel, Buffalo, William A. Duncan of Syracuse, the state Sunday school secretary, was addressing the children in his usual vivacious manner. "Now I am going to divide your school into three parts," said he. "There are the b. b's. What are they?"

"Big boys," was the ready response.

"Good. Then there are the b. g's. What are they?"

"Big girls," shouted 40 voices.

"Right again. And last of all there are the l. c's."

"Little kids," exclaimed a shrill-voiced urchin without waiting for the question.

The congregation smiled vociferously.

100 Doses One Dollar

Is inseparably connected with Hood's Sarsaparilla, and is true of no other medicine. It is an unanswerable argument as to strength and economy, while thousands testify to its superior blood-purifying and strengthening qualities. A bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla contains 100 doses and will last a month, while others will not average to last over a week. Hence, for economy, buy Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Grandpa, dear, we have come to wish you many happy returns of your birthday, and mamma says if you give us each a dollar, we are not to lose it on our way home.

Doctors!

Of all the different schools in the country, have thousands die every year of Bright's disease of the kidneys, who could be living to-day if they had used Sulphur Bitters. They are unequalled in the world for all diseases of the kidneys.—New Haven Union.

"I second the motion," said the smallest hand on the watch.

Sarah Wouldn't.

There was a wedding tour in this direction the other day, and the happy couple were accompanied by three others. It was a sweet spectacle to see the four pairs promenading up Jefferson avenue with hands clasped and a taffy-like smile spread over every face, and hundreds of pedestrians stopped to gaze and admire. The porter of the wholesale house wasn't quite satisfied with what he could see, but stopped the last couple and inquired:

"Is it a case of love!"

"You bet!" replied the young man.

"Are they extremely happy?"

"Jest a-biling over, sir."

"Why don't you and this gal follow suit?"

"I'm perfectly willin', but Sarah kerflunks on me. I've asked her over 20 times to have me, but its no go."

"Never! Never!" she firmly said, as she rolled her cud of gum to the other side for a moment. "When a man takes me to a circus and crawls under the canvass to save expenses, and then can't see the man with the lemonade nor the boy with the peanuts, I wouldn't hitch to him if I had to go out and set a bear trap to catch a partner!"

In one of the schools of Brooklyn a boy thirteen years old, naturally very quick and bright, was found to be growing dull and fitful. His face was pale and he had nervous twitchings. He was obliged to quit school. Inquiry showed that he had become a confirmed smoker of cigarettes. When asked why he did not give it up, he shed tears, and said that he had often tried, but could not. The growth of this habit is insidious and its effect ruinious. The eyes, the brain, the nervous system, the memory, the power of application, are all impaired by it. "It's nothing but a cigarette," is really "It's nothing but poison." German and French physicians have recently protested against it; and a convention of Sunday and secular teachers was recently held in England to check it. It was presided over by an eminent surgeon of a Royal eye Infirmary, who stated that many diseases of the eye were directly caused by it. Parents, save your children from this vice if possible. It is now known that old castaway cigar stumps are used in the manufacture of cigarettes. Boys are employed to gather them from hotels, bar-rooms, sidewalks—from wherever they are thrown. Collectors buy them of the boys and send them to the manufactories by the barrel. No matter how disgusting the spot whence they are picked—whether from the spittoon with its dangerous salvia, or the gutter with its filth—the foul refuse finds its way into the mouth and nostrils of the cigarette smoker. Many a smoker throws away the stump of his cigar because he does not like the flavor of it. He does not know why the flavor is unpleasant to him, but it is caused by nicotine—the active principal of tobacco and a violent poison. This accumulates in the base of the cigar with every draft of the smoke, and the man, noticing the unpleasant flavor, throws the stump away. This reservoir of nicotine finds its way into the cigarette, and the person who smokes it gets in a condensed form the poison which so often works mischief on the brains of habitual smokers. Again, these cigar stubs—or any tobacco, for that matter, that is made into cigarettes—is wrapped with paper which contains a very large percent of arsenic or other deadly poisons, the powers of which exert a deleterious effect upon the tonsils—in fact, the whole throat—of all who use them; indeed, it has been found impossible to cure catarrh in inveterate cigarette smokers.

Useful knowledge can have no enemies except the ignorant; it cherishes youth, delights the aged, is an ornamen in prosperity, and yields comfort in adversity.

The Erie in Oregon.

Mark A. Miller, travelling agent for the Erie Railroad, writes from Portland, Oregon, that an attack of pleuro-pneumonia left behind it a severe and painful cough. After trying several remedies without success, he began using Red Star Cough Cure, and upon taking one bottle found himself on the road to rapid recovery.

Boils.

"An Old Sailor" says that boils, so prevalent in spring, can be cured, although not prevented, in a very simple way. When the boil is thoroughly "ripe" and ready to burst put a lemonade bottle into a basin of hot water and allow it to remain until the bottle is hot. Remove the bottle from the water and place the aperture at the neck over the boil, and hold it so. The air in the bottle immediately begins to cool and contract, and the boil is sucked quite clean in a few minutes. The main conditions to attend to are that the boil be thoroughly ripe, and that the bottle be as hot as it can be borne.

The Flower Medicine Co., is conferring a great boon upon the public by introducing the remedies of that celebrated physician, Dr. R. C. Flower, whose practice has been so phenominally successful, that without doubt these remedies will be much sought after.
